The report and accounts were taken as read, and the Chairman, in proposing their adoption, said the directors fully felt the disappointment which the shareholders would experience from the present accounts; but their unsatisfactory nature resulted from exceptional circumstances. At the same time, they were able to declare their usual dividend of 6 per cent., but they were not able to make any increase of the reserve fund. He then proceeded to set forth the causes which led to the absorbtion of the profits which the Bank had earned during the early part of the year, of which he said the chief one was the unprecedented fluctuations in gold and silver. Alluding to the fact that silver and council bills were the principal means of making remittances to establish the just balance of trade with India, he said that during the year 1876 as much as £13,000,000 had been drawn in council bills, and the amount of silver shipped had been upwards of £11,000,000, the two items thus being together upwards of £24,000,000. The price of silver had fluctuated from 58½d. per oz. down to 46½d. per oz., and up again to 58½d., the variation being as much as 26 per cent. from the highest to the lowest point. It might be said that a period of great fluctuation was a bank's opportunity, and if they could forecast the course of such fluctuations no doubt this would be the fact. Unfortunately, they were not regulated solely by the exigencies of trade, and it would be impossible to know how matters were drifting so long as the question was mainly regulated by the financiers of Germany, America, England, and, he might add, France. Notwithstanding the difficulties and perplexities with which they had to deal, the Indian Branches had paid fairly well during the latter part of the year. The China operations had been the weak point, and it was there that the chief loss had arisen, in consequence of mistaken views as to the probable course of exchange; and from the fact also of wire communication having been interrupted. The Chairman, in alluding to this portion of the subject, laid stress upon the fact that he did not wish to lay any undue responsibility on the Bank's agents in China. They had been in a critical position, and had acted to the best of their judgment; but unfortunately they had made mistakes. It was not to be forgotten that if the operations had been successful the Board would have had the credit of them, and they did not therefore wish in any way to shirk responsibility as to what had occurred. He went on to give a history of the low rates of exchange in China at the commencement of the year, and the subsequent great advance consequent upon the failure of the European silk crop. The market had been very dragging at the first part of the year, and the agents in China, thinking that exchange was certain to rule low during the whole year, had bought bills largely. At that time large sums were diverted from China to India, and this, followed shortly by the news of the failure of the European crop of silk, caused the rates of exchange again to rise; while the difficulty was further increased by the fact that the price of silver and of rupee bills again rose here, council bills going back as rapidly as they had before fallen. On the top of all this came the unfortunate break down in the telegraph. One despatch was sent to Shanghai, pointing out the probability of a rise in silver; but it was only received there a fortnight after it had been sent. With regard to the balance-sheet, the Chairman pointed out that it was made for the year, and that in future half yearly statements would not be made. He endorsed the views of the chairman of the Mercantile Bank as to the inadvisability of that system. New premises had been secured for the Bank in Threadneedle-street, not, in the speaker's opinion, before they were needed, as at present the business was conducted as it were on the rungs of a ladder. In conclusion, he stated that the business this year had been satisfactory up to the present, and unless some untoward event arose, they hoped it would result in a good dividend.

In reply to a question put by one of the shareholders as to the reason why the Bank had not been registered on the Stock Exchange, it being understood that one of the chief reasons for transferring the head office from Calcutta was to secure this end, the Chairman said that this was impracticable, as at least one-third of the shares of the Company would have to be owned here.

Some exception was taken by one of the shareholders to the fact that the statement of accounts did not give the items of receipts and expenditure in detail, but an amendment which he proposed on the subject was not seconded.

The motion that the report and accounts be adopted was then put and passed unanimously, and the retiring directors and auditors having been re-elected, the meeting separated with the usual compliment to the chair.

THE SINGAPORE GAS COMPANY.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders in the above company took place at the Terminus Hotel on the 24th inst.; H. P. Stephenson, Esq., in the chair.

The notice convening the meeting having been read by the Secretary, the Chairman, in proposing the adoption of the report and accounts stated that on comparing the balance-sheet with that of the corresponding half-year, viz., to December, 1875, he found the following on the debtor side:—Share capital has increased by £6,392, debenture bonds had decreased £2,210, and the profit was £664 more. On the creditor side cash at bankers, bills receivable, &c., had increased £1,482, and stock had increased £3,000, there being a larger stock of coals. On the debtor side of profit and loss coal was £322 less, whilst on the creditor side gas and meter rent had increased £494, and products, &c., had increased £212, resulting in an increased profit of £664, including the balance carried forward.

The motion to adopt the report and accounts was seconded by Mr. R. S. Foreman, and carried unanimously.

It was proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. F. W. Collard, and carried uanimously—"That a dividend be declared to the preference and ordinary shareholders at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, less income-tax, in both cases on amounts paid up on their shares from the respective dates of payment to December 31, 1876, such dividends to become payable on May 21 next."

It was proposed by Mr. R. Rice, seconded by Mr. H. W. Smith, and carried unanimously, that Mr. Henry Palfrey Stephenson and Mr. Alexander Malcolm Nicol be re-elected directors of the Company.

It was proposed by Mr. R. Rice, seconded by Mr. H. W. Smith, and carried unanimously, that Mr. William Thomas Morrison and Mr. Alfred Williams be re-elected auditors for the ensuing year, and that their remuneration be £10 10s. each.

It was proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. D. Hulett, and carried unanimously, that the thanks of the shareholders be given to the local committee at Singapore for their attention to the business of the Company.

It was proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. D. Hulett, and carried unanimously, that Mr E. J. Wells, the Company's engineer and manager at Singapore, receive the thanks of the shareholders for his energy and careful management of the Company's affairs at Singapore.

It was proposed by Mr. D. Hulett, seconded by Mr. H. W. Smith, and carried unanimously, that the thanks of the shareholders be given to the directors for their superintendence of the business of the company.

The Chairman, in reply, acknowledged the compliment paid, and expressed the appreciation on the part of the board of the confidence reposed in them. Referring to a suggestion made as to an increase of dividend, he said the directors were anxious to increase the amount, but only when they felt that such increase would be of a permanent character. On this point he held a very strong opinion. Overhasty increase of dividends enabled speculators on the Stock Exchange to trade upon companies, but was certainly not beneficial to the companies themselves.

It was then proposed by Mr. R. Rice, seconded by Mr. T. A. Green and carried unanimously, that the thanks of the shareholders be given to Mr. R. King, the company's engineer and secretary, for his uniform courtesy and attention to the shareholders and the business of the company, and the meeting separated.

HAMBURG, APRIL 24.

The events of the past week and the present state of the Eastern disturbances, although sad enough if regarded in general, have been welcomed on our Exchange as a decided change for the better. War between Russia and Turkey is regarded by our business men as a fait accompli, and the future events are looked upon now with a quietness which is really astonishing in comparison with the anxiety which was formerly prevailing. At the end of the past week the rates for almost all paper showed a rise, and could be noted higher than the week before, and for the first time after a long period of slackness a lively and animated business has taken place, many sales being effected. It cannot be denied that there are also Pessimists who predict an universal European war to arise from the present disturbances, but these at present have not the least arguments for their dark prediction, and it is a fact that, as much depends on the German Emperor and his famous Chancellor, every means will be put in action to localise the coming war between the original partakers.

The festivities arranged on the occasion of the late visit of the Crown Prince and Princess, and the participation of the public, have surpassed everything hitherto seen in this direction at Hamburg, and I think it may be even welcome to English readers to have a small sketch of the festival days. The high married couple with their eldest son arrived here on Thursday last at three o'clock in the afternoon, and took their residence at the "Hotel de l'Europe." The whole neighbourhood of the latter was literally covered with flags, garlands, and flowers, and the whole city displayed a view which, better than could have been done by words, expressed the deep feeling of love and veneration which prevails amongst all classes of our population for the high visitors. The Prince next day visited the harbour, quays, Sailors'-home, Meteorological-office, and even made a trip underneath the earth in a tunnel, which stretches under our city for several miles. The Crown Princess visited the principal educational institutes, schools, &c., and she as well as her husband everywhere displayed such a singular gentleness and amiability as to win the hearts of the whole of Hamburg for ever. The weather was clear but cold, and not very agreeable for staying out of doors. In the evening a really gorgeous illumination was arranged, and the streets, especially those in the vicinity of the city-theatre, the hotel and other places were thickly crowded with spectators up to midnight. The Prince and Princess look very well, and when leaving expressed their best thanks for the reception they had met with.

Business with the Far East, in consequence of the threatened war in the East of Europe, is at present much restricted, and the exports are small, although the Deutsche Dampfschiffs Rhedered is on the eve of despatching two steamers, one at the end of this, and the other on the 10th of next, month. But this may not be regarded as a sign of liveliness, but the company, having five of its boats in or near Europe, only intends to have them a little better distributed, and ready to make use of the rates of freight in India and China, which, by the ast reports from Hong Kong, are on the rise.

In our port cargo is scarce, rates of freight are quite nominal, and no doubt the best sailing tonnage would be procurable at 20s. per ton. Steam is in accordance, and although 40s. in full is the nominal rate, still goods are shipped at much cheaper rates.

The International Bank of Hamburg held its usual meeting of shareholders on the 19th of April. One of the shareholders expressed the meaning a dividend of 3 per cent. not being considerable enough, and thought it to be better to wind up the establishment than to run such risks as in the past year and only to earn 3 per cent. The Chairman declared the profits of 1876 to have been 5⅞ per cent., but the board will take a resolution of winding-up into consideration. Further, the Chairman stated, the loss of the International Bank of Hamburg and London (Limited) to be a consequence of the want of general buoyancy, and hoped for the London branch an improvement during the ensuing year. The report and balance-sheet of the establishment has been passed.

The Eastern Siberian Trading Company has called its shareholders for the annual meeting for the 17th May. The report and balance-sheet will be read, and, besides, the board moves the winding-up of the establishment. This latter circumstance may be taken as a proof of the unprofitable working of the company.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Our markets have been influenced during the past week by the still pending decision on the Eastern question, and transactions have been inconsiderable. Money has not been quite so abundant as during the previous few weeks, but rates of discount in the open market remain at 3½ to 4 per cent.

RICE.—Holders are reserved in consequence of the more favourable reports from England, and transactions have been unimportant.

TEA is quiet. The following first-hand parcels have been sold, viz., 360/8 boxes Java, and 150/8 boxes Souchong.

COTTON also remains quiet, and sales have only been made in American and African descriptions.

SPICES.—Nutmegs are quoted m.5.60 to 6.20; Mace, m.4.70 to 4.90 per kilo. Cloves have been in good demand; Zanzibar quality at m.141 to 142 per 50 kilo. Pepper maintains its value; Singapore quality m.33 to 38½; Penang, m.36 to 36½; White, m.69 to 80 per 50 kilo.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, APRIL 25.

The members of the Second Chamber met the day before yesterday for the despatch of business. Mr. Mees asked some questions of the Ministry in this very short sitting, which only lasted one hour, about the state of the new waterway from Rotterdam to the North Sea, which becomes worse every day. He asked whether the Government would propose within a short time some vigorous measures in order to improve that canal, which now becomes unfit for shipping. Mr. Heemskerk at once replied that he had obtained every information abroad, in order that he might know what could be done to ameliorate the deplorable state in the mouth of the new canal, and that he would ask without delay a new vote in behalf of this matter, which after this declaration dropped. The other business had only a very local character. The members worked yesterday in Committee, and they are convoked to meet again to-day in an open sitting.

At the last Sugar conference, which was held in the month of March at Paris, a draft was made for a new treaty which is now under consideration of the Governments of Holland, France, Belgium and England. The question, however, is whether such a treaty will be made. So much is certain, that these transactions lasted much longer than our Government thought, so that it has become impossible to change the state under which the beetroot-sugar manufacturers are working. In order to make it possible that they can go on in the next campaign, the Government stipulated that a Bill should be laid before our members of Parliament in order to procure that the terms for a revisal of the actual law would be delayed for one year, ergo, to 31st July, 1878.

The Government has granted a concession to the Netherlands-India Railway Company for the construction and exploration of the railway lines from Djocjokarta to Mangelang and Tjilatjap, and from Sourakarta to Madioen. The State guarantees an annual interest of 5 per cent. during forty years. At the same time the Government bought from the said society the railway from Batavia to Buitenzorg for a sum of five millions. The shareholders are convoked to meet on May the 16th, in order to approve the granted concession.

The seventh annual report of the Steam Shipping Company Nederland was published. It shows that the monthly service, which was established on October 30, 1875, has been crowned with a complete success. The voyages, as a rule, did not take so long as was stipulated in the contract. 'The trip from Naples to Padang lasted on an average twenty-six days,' to Batavia twenty-nine, from Padang to Naples twenty-eight, and from Batavia to that port thirty days. The six steamers provided sufficiently in the service; as a rule, they docked forty-six days between every voyage. Three extra trips could be made, in consequence of the contract with the Company Java, and another one by the steamer Stad Amsterdam of the Royal Company. In toto, sixteen out and fifteen home voyages were made. The merchandises conveyed to Java amounted to m.30,627 and from Java 16,336 lasts, against 15,691 in 1875. The number of passengers to Java was—1st, 2nd, and 3rd class, 4,859, against 3,779 in 1875, and from Java 2,491, against 2,191 in 1875. Only the number of the first-class passengers decreased. The financial results of last year would have been more favourable, if not a considerable part of the profits were lost by the disaster of the steamer Prinses Amalia. The costs amounted to f.186,346.11. The Insurance Company, however, refused to pay, and the result of a law-suit being most uncertain, the directors agreed to one-half of the loss. The profits were in toto f.775,278.75½, of which had to be paid a sum of f.595,330.53; leaving a net profit of f.179,948.22½, out of which a dividend of 5 per cent. can be paid, leaving an amount of f.468.22½ for the new account. The financial state of the Company is most satisfactory. Since the 1st of January a three-weekly service has been instituted, and it is most probable that in the current of this year fixed terms will be introduced for departure. On May the 9th the annual meeting of shareholders will take place here.

The papers contain during the last few days much correspondence, written by officers, who complain about the last measures taken by the Minister of the War Department to sharpen the discipline in the army. It is, for instance, forbidden to the officers to make use of an umbrella, if they are dressed with an overcoat. These and other similar regulations are very severely criticised. If this continues I fear that the discipline will be enormously slackened. In other letters is pleaded the necessity to improve the salaries of the officers, who are obliged to maintain their honour, above all, and who by no means are able to pay their debts when they live as they ought to do.

The news about the forthcoming general elections, which must take place in the month of June next, begins now to circulate. I told you that Mr. A. Kuyper does not wish to be re-elected; the same can now be stated of Jhr. J. L. de Jonge; both belong to the anti-revolutionary party. Mr. Nierstrasz also declines the honour, and there are still more members who will give up their membership.

Mr. W. Stortenbeker, first Governmental Secretary at Batavia, has been appointed, as het Vaderland says, Director of Public Worship, Instruction and Industry.

H. M. our King started for his seat "het Loo," where he will remain a very long time. He passed in this town a very bad week. It has created much surprise that he has not awarded some crosses of orders to the members of the commission of the Flower-show and to the members of the jury.

I regret that I have to note the death of Mr. E. L. Baron Van Hardenbroek van Lockhorst, who represented the district Amersfort during several years in the Second Chamber, and that of Mr. P. S. Gerlings, of late member of the Council of Justice at Batavia, who died in Leiden.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The outbreak of war in Eastern Europe has already influenced our trade, and business is almost entirely checked. Prices, as a rule, are declining, except those of Sugar. Good ordinary Java Coffee is quoted 50c. Important lots of Java Tobacco will be offered for sale during the next few days. The Dutch Trading Company has offered for sale 146 bs. and 337 chests Java kind, which were sold at the following prices:—

224	collis	Succirubra	...	from	118c. to	237c.

The Bourse is very dull, and the transactions are limited, in consequence of the War. Some very large houses trading in Bonds have stopped payment, which has caused a sort of panic. American railway bonds have fallen 10 to 15 per cent. The Bank rate of discount is 3 to 3½ per cent., and money in the open market is obtainable at 4 per cent.

SHIPPING.

DEPARTURES.—April 19, from Brouwershaven, for Batavia, Maarten van Rosset; April 20, from Middelburg, for Java, Samarang; April 24, from Ymuiden, for Sourabaya, Jacob Roggeveen.

ARRIVALS.—April 20, at Flushing, from Akyab, Matthew Gay; April 21, at Brouwershaven, from Passaroeang, Jonge Cornelis; April 22, at Nieuwe Diep, from Banjoewangie, Slamat; April 23, at Hellevoetsluis, from Batavia, Hampton (str.).

Monetary and Commercial.

The general state of trade in the country, as evidenced by the reports from the manufacturing districts, is dull and unencouraging, the outbreak of war having renewed the feeling of suspense which was supposed to have been overcome a short time back. The Cotton market at Liverpool has been dull, and this has also affected the tone of the Manchester market, where neither manufacturers nor merchants are anxious to add to their purchases.

The depressed condition of the Tea market has increased during the past week, and merchants are now doing what in former years was usually done about the month of June, that is, after having refused many more profitable offers made for their teas, they are now accepting almost anything, sales being made apparently under panic and on a sauve qui peut principle. In point of fact there seems to be only one price for all teas, namely, between 7½d. and 10d., and parcels which four months or so ago were worth from 1s. to 1s. 4d. per lb. are now being forced off at these prices. In Silk, beyond utter stagnation, there is nothing to note.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended the 21st inst. was 4,264,112 lbs., or an increase of close upon 10 per cent. on the preceding week, the total then being 3,878,721 lbs. Of the former total 2,365,553 lbs. was for home consumption, 1,042,123 lbs. was exported, 757,001 lb. was removed coastwise, 96,733 lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 2,702 lb. was for ships' stores. During the same period the amount received as duty was £59,139, which, compared with a total of £64,013 for the previous week, shows a falling-off of £4,874, or about 7⅝ per cent.

In the Produce Markets the actual outbreak of war has imparted considerable animation to several articles, in which extensive speculative operations have taken place, and prices have followed an upward movement. On the other hand, many of the leading articles continue in a dull, if not depressed, condition, and quotations have receded. Quotations for Coffee show some recovery from the depression of last week. The rising tendency of Sugar has been checked, owing to large arrivals, and the market is now quiet, with a declining tendency. An active speculative demand has been exhibited for floating cargoes of Rice, which have been extensively sold at a rapid rise in value. Manila Hemp continues active and exhibits a further advance. Cocoa-nut Oil, Camphor, Gambier, Japan Wax and Rattans also show an improvement. Black Pepper has slightly declined; White is quiet at the previous value. Spices and Tin continue dull.

At the half-yearly meeting of the National Bank of India, on the 23rd inst., a dividend of 3 per cent. was declared, making 6 per cent. for the year. The speech of the Chairman, of which we give a report elsewhere, furnishes an interesting view of the perplexities into which some of the bank managers in China were plunged last year by the fluctuations in silver and the interruption to the telegraph.

We understand that, following the excellent precedent set by the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China in the establishment of a superannuation fund, a movement has been set on foot by other establishments connected with the Far East with a view to the adoption of a similar step. We hope that the plan of establishing superannuation funds will become general among the India and China banks, whose servants are necessarily exposed to special risk from climate, pressure of work, and other like causes.

The report of the Submarine Cables Trust for the year ended 15th instant shows a balance of revenue of £25,303, inclusive of £3,102 brought in from last year. Of this £20,910 is absorbed by the payment of the interest coupons; £1,941 is transferred to the redemption fund, and £2,452 is carried forward. From the list of securities held by the trust, which have cost in all £342,544, it will be found that £162,938 is in Anglo-American stock, £82,724 in Eastern, and £95,856 in Eastern Extension shares.

Messrs. Ashton and Co. have issued a circular, announcing the dissolution of the firm, in consequence of the death of Mr. Ellis James Gilman. Mr. Ellis Gilman (son of the late Mr. E. J. Gilman), who has for some years been a partner, will continue the business under the firm of Gilman Brothers and Co., at the same offices, Crown-court, Old Broad-street.

Captain J. R. Kellock, at present the P. and O. Company's agent at Singapore, has been appointed to the Superintendency at Bombay, in place of the late Captain Henry. Captain Black, who is now on a tour of inspection in China, &c., will shortly return to his post in London.

The Journal du Commerce Maritime contains an article in which some interesting facts concerning the trade between Holland and the Far East via the Suez Canal are given. Since the year following the opening of the Canal, the statistics of Dutch trade for Asiatic ports have been, in 1870, 337,120 tons; 1871, 364,040; 1872, 335,597; 1873, 384,338; 1874, 379,468; and 1875, 414,108; or an increase of 76,988 tons for the five years. In 1875 the tonnage of vessels under the Dutch flag passing the Canal was 130,740 tons, and in 1876, 146,675 tons. These statistics are considered to indicate an important future for the general commerce of Holland with the Far East via the Canal. This was foreseen as far back as 1859 by the Dutch commission set on foot by the King to inquire into the probable effects of opening the Canal. After examining the power of production and the importance of the commerce with India, the commission reported that from what it had stated it was evident that a constant augmentation of the products of this country would excite more and more the commercial activity of Europeans, so that this vast country, with its population of 150 millions, would receive a strong impetus by the opening of the Suez Canal. The correctness of these views has been thoroughly proved by the event.

The tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 25th inst. at the Bank of England, and were allotted at an average fall of 3 to 3¼ per cent. on the prices obtained last week. Although the official notification does not mention the fact, it is certain that the allotment has been made on telegraphic transfer, and not on bills.

The price of Bar Silver has declined, in response to the receipt of lower exchanges from India, and transactions have been effected at 54⅛d. to 54¼d. per oz. The market is now quiet. Mexican Dollars have also declined in value, and a few small amounts received during the week from New York have been placed at 54½d. per oz, but the price at the close may be considered weaker.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—Although the quantity of Congou offered at public sale this week has been smaller, there is no improvement to notice; on the contrary, fair kinds have sold at easier rates, the large quantities realised at auction during the past few weeks having, to some extent, satisfied the demand for common to fair Congous, even at the low rates established. Scented Teas and Green Teas also went at low prices. Privately there is but little business doing. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain scarce, and full prices are maintained; common to fair common at 7d. to 7½d. per lb. are rather lower; good common to fair kinds from 8d. to 10d. per lb. are relatively cheap; medium to good and fine kinds have been steady; finest are now in a small compass. Black-leaf kinds: Common to fair common show but little change; good common to fair kinds have sold from 7⅞d. to 9d. per lb., being ⅛d. to ¼d. per lb. lower; fair to good medium are also rather easier; good to fine kinds remain steady, the quantity offering being moderate; in finest there is no change to report. New-make kinds: Common to fair are inquired for from 8d. to 11d. per lb., and show a slight improvement in prices; good-leaf kinds are also wanted. Oolongs are only in limited request at about previous prices. Souchongs remain difficult of sale. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: Common have sold at 11½d. per lb., fair to good kinds have realised low prices at auction, say from 1s. 9½d. to 1s. 1⅞d. per lb. Orange Pekoes remain without change, the demand being limited. Foochow Capers have sold at auction at previous rates. Orange Pekoes: Common to fair kinds are without alteration; good to fine are in fair request at fully previous prices. Green Teas.—The quantity offered at auction is still large, and prices consequently continue much depressed for all common to medium kinds, good to fine being comparatively firm. The public sales have comprised 20,538 packages, the whole of which were printed and sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

COFFEE.—Last week's decline brought the current range of value of Plantation Ceylon down to a lower point than for many months, whilst the total retrogression from the highest point in January amounted to about 26s., which has induced exporters as well as the home trade to buy more freely, and this week's sales, although extensive, have gone off with good competition, the downward movement is not only arrested, but prices at the close show a recovery of 2s. to 2s. 6d. In Native Ceylon business has been relatively moderate, at a slight decline. Closing prices are, triage 76s. 6d. to 89s., grey to coloury small 90s. to 94s., low middling 94s. 6d. to 96s. 6d., middling 97s. to 99s. 6d., good middling to fine middling 100s. to 103s., dull to fine bold 104s. 6d. to 113s. 6d., pea-berry 103s. to 109s.; Native small and broken 70s. to 72s. 6d., good ordinary 80s., pea-berry 85s. 6d. to 87s. COTTON.—Almost uninterrupted stagnation has prevailed in the market, an improving tendency, which has on one or two occasions appeared, being of short duration, giving way to renewed depression, and the course of prices has been almost continually downwards, but the actual decline does not exceed ¼d. to 3-16d. per lb. The sales for the fortnight are about 14,000 bales. On the spot about 3,000 bales; Tinnivelly 5¼d. to 5⅜d., fair to fine; Western Madras 5d. to 5⅜d., barely good fair to good; Bengal 4⅜d. to 5⅛d., good fair to good. The deliveries last week included 1,150 tons China and Manila, and the landings included 42,293 bags China and Manila. MANCHESTER GOODS.

On the 23rd a reaction in Liverpool and the news of the breaking off of diplomatic relations between Russia and Turkey had a somewhat disturbing effect as regards the inquiry, but prices remained steady. On the 24th at the opening there were indications of a better demand, and where business could be repeated at the lowest rates of last week a fair amount of transactions took place, principally in China makes of Grey Goods. Many producers, however, hold to their quotations, and on the whole there has been little advantage to buyers.

Sir SAMUEL BAKER,

In his work on the Sources of the Nile, says:—

"I ordered my dragoman Mahomet to inform the "Faky that I was a doctor, and that I had the best "medicines at the service of the sick, with advice "gratis. In a short time I had many applicants, to "whom I served out a quantity of Holloway's Pills. "These are most useful to an explorer, as, possessing "unmistakable purgative properties, they create an "undeniable effect upon the patient, which satisfies "him of their value."

This fine Medicine cures all disorders of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys and Bowels, is a Great PURIFIER of the BLOOD, and wonderfully efficacious in all ailments incidental to Females—young or aged.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL, BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Parngon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

THE MAILS, &c.

The P. and O. mail, with the advices dated as above, was delivered, via Brindisi, this morning, its due date. There are no later Japan advices via San Francisco. The next inward (French) mail, from Yokohama 27th, Shanghai 30th March, Hong Kong 5th, Singapore 12th April, which is due, via Marseilles, on Monday next, the 14th inst., left Marseilles this morning, and will reach London to-morrow, six days early.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's cable between Shanghai and Amoy is interrupted, but the company's land lines in Russia are restored and the communication by the company's lines with Shanghai and all Japanese stations is therefore again perfect. The Eastern Extension Company's lines are working satisfactorily.

Summary of News from the Far East.

Matters in connection with the new Convention continue to progress as rapidly in China as they move slowly here. A notification has been published by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Peking, setting forth that the Chinese Government have given information that the ports of Ichang, Wuhu, Wenchow and Pakhoi will be opened to foreign trade on the 1st April, and that officers of H.B.M.'s Consular Service have been authorised to act temporarily as British Consuls at those places from and after the above date. The Customs arrangements at the six places of call on the Yangtaze have not, however, been completed. By the latest accounts from Ichang, it appears that the premature planting of the boundary stones of the new concession, of which news was brought by last mail, has led to further difficulties; that the people have pulled down the house tenanted by the members of the "Inland Mission," and that Messrs. Dick and May (the Harbour-master) have been mobbed, and attacked with brick-bats and bamboos. They were forced to take refuge in their boats. The arrangements for the better Government of Formosa to which attention was called some time back have assumed the shape of an official memorial in the Peking Gazette. In this document it is proposed that the Governor of Fukkien should reside permanently in that island, and that the affairs of the mainland should be administered by the Governor-General alone, as is done in Chihli and Szechuen. The proposal is stated to be under the consideration of the Chinese Government, and it is probably in connection with this that Ting Footai recently expressed his anxiety to have a line of telegraph constructed between Formosa and the mainland. By latest advices the Kestrel was still badly ashore about forty miles below Ichang. The U.S. Consul was to leave Hankow for Ichang on the 14th March; and the Hon. Geo. F. Seward, U.S. Minister, was expected to arrive shortly in Shanghai from Peking. The Minister for the Netherlands has issued a Circular, appealing to his countrymen to aid the refugees from the famine. Several Chinese officials have expressed to our Consular officers their appreciation of the aid extended by foreigners to the sufferers from that disaster. The latest accounts state that some of the unlucky people are throwing themselves down wells or poisoning themselves, being unable any longer to endure their agonies. From Hong Kong there is little news of importance. The Postmaster-General's report shows a falling off of $11,000 in the revenue. The Chinese residents have subscribed over $4,000 for the relief of the famine stricken population in the north. A Naval Court of Inquiry on the British ship John O'Gaunt was proceeding when the mail left.

The particulars in the papers to hand by the present mail with reference to the progress of the civil war are even more meagre than those previously received, the Government having been able as time went on to bring still more pressure than at first to prevent the publication of intelligence. So far as was known, however, no important engagements had taken place. Another meeting had been convened by the foreign residents in Yokohama with reference to the establishment of a volunteer corps, which movement had been delayed in consequence of the protest of the Japanese City Governor. The so-called "confessions" of the men who have declared they were employed by the Government to assassinate General Saigo are published in detail, but it is perhaps almost superfluous to point out that confessions and statements of accomplices require by the rules of sound judgment and fairness, as well as those of law, some confirmation from more credible sources, and that such corroboration is wanting in the present instance. A new gunboat called the Amagi Kan has been launched.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices by this mail extend to the 20th March; the French mail from London Jan. 26 arrived out on the 16th March.

The Japan Mail of the 17th March reverts to the subject of the alleged attempt on the part of the Government to accomplish the assassination of General Saigo; and it publishes in full the translation of the confessions made by the spies, who claim to have been entrusted with the mission, and who were arrested before they could take any steps to accomplish their dastardly work. Commenting upon these statements it says:—"There stand the confessions; confessions made, in some cases, voluntarily by the agents employed to carry out the plot, and apparently in no case wrung from them by application of torture, for Nakahara Hisao and others have been received back by the Imperial Government in good health. At present we can add little to our remarks of last week. The confessions must strike every one as being singularly clear, straightforward, and coinciding. If they contain the truth and only the truth, they do not contain the whole truth, for the names of only two high officials appear, whereas had it been decided that the army and navy were to aid in the general massacre which was to follow the disturbance that it was expected would arise from the murder of the Commander-in-Chief, it stands to reason that the consent of the members of the Administration must have been obtained, and that the scheme was the result of combined deliberation. While we have no wish to condemn the Government, unheard, as guilty of the shameful crime of attempted assassination, we cannot pass over the matter as a monstrous fable. The revelations are too well borne out by many events to permit of its dismissal without comment or inquiry. We do not scruple to say that the Government is gravely compromised by these disclosures, and if it would not lose caste in the eyes of the world, it must lose no time in giving incontestable proofs of its innocence of the foul charge."

Nothing of importance has transpired, or is allowed to be published, in connection with the civil war in the South. Mere skirmishes, and a few hand-to-hand fights, in which both sides seem to show the greatest pluck, and which end in no advantage to either party, are all the items of intelligence to hand. The question of establishing a volunteer corps has again been discussed; and a second meeting has been held, at which the Chairman, Mr. Litchfield, remarked that he knew of no British law which forbade British subjects to bear arms, and at which General Van Buren, in deprecating the action of the Governor of Kanagawa in protesting against the Consuls of different nationalities giving countenance to the scheme, stated that the British Chief Justice in the East was a member of the Volunteer Corps at Shanghai. Not only was Sir Edmund Hornby Colonel of the Corps previous to 1869, and chief mover in the new force got up during the disturbances in Tientsin, but the same position has been held by both Sir Thomas Wade and Sir Harry Parkes. It was held to be absurd to talk about expression of "distrust or unfriendliness" towards the Japanese Government, or causing them "needless and wanton mortification," as the promoters of the scheme had no intention of expressing anything of the kind.

Particulars are published concerning the landing of a cargo of dead bodies at Shinagawa. It appears that about ninety bodies were lowered into boats by means of straw ropes, and it would seem were to be sent off to their friends for interment. Some exaggerated statements had got abroad on the subject.

The Japan Mail publishes the Monthly Return of his Imperial Majesty's Customs of Japan for the month of January, 1877, published by the order of the Inspector-General of Customs, and which it is intended in future to issue every month. The summary shows the declared value of—

The launch of the Amagi Kan took place at Yokosuka on the 13th March. She is a gun-boat about 260 feet long and 1,800 tons burthen, being a sister ship to the Seiki Kan, which was built at the same place some few years ago. Mr. Terashima, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, was present on the occasion, accompanied by two young Princes of the Blood, who are cadets of the Naval College, and wore the uniform of that establishment.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

The Daily News correspondent, under date March 14th, writes:—

H.E. George F. Seward is looked for any moment on his way to Shanghai. We are having frequent high winds of late, which fill the air with dust to such an extent as to obscure the sun at times. Also an occasional cloudy and dark day. Were it not for the dust, our weather would generally be very pleasant at this season. The first fleet of yellow funnels has come and gone. At one time there was a continuous line of six of them along the bund. Under the new colours (in two senses) and the new names old friends could scarcely be recognised. We have just lost two of our community Mr. B. C. G. Levot, of the British Consulate, who goes to Tamsui; and Mr. J. Achison, of the Imperial Customs, transferred to Canton. Their places are filled, the first by Mr. J. R. Coulthard, temporarily; and the latter by Mr. Morse, recently of Shanghai.

The Celestial Empire of the 22nd March gives the following harrowing account of the sufferings in Shantung:—

We hear that the distress in Shantung has reached such a pitch that the unfortunate people are throwing themselves down wells and poisoning themselves with arsenic, unable any longer to bear their sufferings. At Tsi-nan Fu they are bringing their children to the Roman Catholic bishop saying that if he will not take them into his orphanage they will kill them. From Tung-chow Fu we hear that a good deal of grain is coming into the province through the small rivers, but the people who are famishing are those who have no money to buy it. The Bishop above referred to is distributing over a hundred dollars a day to the poor, but has quite exhausted his resources. We are therefore glad that part of the money subscribed by the community of Shanghai has been forwarded to him. More grain would find its way to the suffering province were it not that the mandarins forbid merchants to sell at higher prices than those of last year, and this checks importation.

ICHANG.

A correspondent gives the details of the recent disturbance at the above place. It appears that Consul King found the Custom House officials, who had arrived a week or ten days in advance of him, safely residing in their boats, and the people quiet. It seems that some missionaries were also residing in the city, and, indeed, had been there, quietly going in and out among the people, for some months. Everything seemed outwardly favourable to the Consul's mission, but no sooner had negotiations been commenced for the purchase of land, than the old anti-foreign spirit and hostility to every encroachment of the hated barbarian immediately manifested itself. The literati, as usual, were the instigators of the attack, and the mandarins appear to have been powerless. The same old tactics were pursued to incite the fury of the populace to the proper pitch. Inflammatory placards were posted, warning the people against renting or selling property to foreigners; and reports were diligently circulated that the foreign Powers intended to take forcible possession of a piece of ground for a concession—ejecting the inhabitants, desecrating ancestral graves, interfering with the fung-suei of the city, and bringing endless calamities upon the people. Some half-dozen leading men of the literary class were conspicuous by their activity in getting up this agitation. A public meeting was convened in a neighbouring temple, and resolutions were passed with the evident determination of putting a stop to all further negotiation for the purchase of land, and if possible of ejecting every foreigner from the city. Several mandarins, who were engaged officially in selecting and marking off the site, were insulted and maltreated by the mob, and the next step was to give notice to the missionaries that unless they cleared out in three days their house would be pulled down, and they would be driven out at the risk of their lives. As the missionaries showed no signs of heeding these warnings the mob was again assembled by beating the gong, and an open attack was made on Saturday, March 3. The first report that reached us was that the house had been set on fire, but subsequently we heard that only some partitions, windows, doors, and furniture were smashed; no violence was done to the missionaries, but nearly all their books and other property was either stolen or destroyed. The district magistrate appeared late on the scene, and conducted the missionaries to a boat, begging them to leave the place, or not to return to their house until the people were quiet. The Viceroy, Li Han-chang, arrived at Ichang from Szechuen on the following day, Sunday, and it was hoped that his presence would be sufficient to overawe the mob, and would enable the British Consul to obtain immediate satisfaction for this insult, and a speedy settlement of his own difficulties. Most people will wonder why he should leave on the following Tuesday without apparently doing anything towards carrying out the stipulations agreed on at the Chefoo Convention. The only result of his passing visit which we can hear of is that on Wednesday, the 7th, another inspection of the ground by Mr. King and the officials took place, when the mandarins were pelted by the mob, and had to beat an ignominious retreat.

HANKOW.

The North China Daily News correspondent writes under date of March 17:—

We hear now that Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, no doubt heartily disgusted with the literati of I-chang, if not with the officials, is on his way back to Hankow, and may be expected here as soon as the gunboat can avoid running every other day or two into a sandbank.

We hear also that one or two of the Custom House officers, who were out walking on the hills, on the opposite side of the river, were attacked by the villagers, and only escaped with difficulty to their boat.

What impression the U.S. Monocacy may make upon the Ichangites remains to be seen. She started with General Shepard and his staff on board yesterday morning.

You may be interested to know that the appeals for help on behalf of the starving population of Shantung have not been disregarded by the community here. A subscription list was sent round by Mr. Major, which realised $843, and an appeal to the liberality and charity of the native compradores and other Chinese in connection with the hongs brought in $130 more. A meeting was held last evening at the club to arrange how the money should be transmitted to the famine district, when it was decided to send the contributions on at once to Mr. Jamieson, British Consul at Chefoo.

The amount would have been larger, but some had already sent subscriptions direct; and the Russian community sent some Tls.700 home for the Servians a little time before. The missionaries also sent down about Tls.266 the steamer before, proceeds of a collection amongst themselves.

KIUKIANG.

The municipal accounts show a deficit of Tls. 634. They appear to have been kept very defectively by the treasurer, Mr. Shaw, the amounts having to be extracted, for the instruction of the landrenters' meeting, from the books of the Chinese Shroff. It was very sensibly "resolved to forward this statement to Mr. Shaw, for his examination and explanation, and to have the accounts properly audited by an outsider in future." Messrs. Bean, Grant, and Kopsch were elected a Municipal Council for the ensuing year. The usual call of Tls. 15 per lot was agreed to. A scheme proposed by Mr. Kopsch for the general levy of wharfage dues on all merchandise, foreign and Chinese alike, was considered and referred to the Council, with instructions to obtain the approval of the Chinese authorities, and of H.M.'s Minister if they thought desirable.

CHINKIANG.

A correspondent notices, as an instance of what may be expected from the C.M.S.N. Co., that the King-kwan arrived at eight P.M. on the 13th March, discharged all her cargo in a couple of hours, and might have proceeded on her voyage, but, as a Mandarin passenger wished to visit his friends, the steamer was delayed till six A.M. on the 14th. Another writer says, "We had a pleasant little excitement yesterday (12th). About a hundred braves from one of the camps here smashed up most of the things in one of the theatres here—foreign-owned, worse luck.'

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 23rd March; the P. and O. mail from London Feb. 2 was received on the 18th March.

The efforts to relieve the sufferers from the famine continue with undiminished vigour. It appears from the last reports that the total amount collected by the committee, for the Shantung Relief Fund, has been Tls. 9,219, of which Tls. 9,000 have been already remitted to Chefoo, and there are some subscriptions promised still uncollected. This is independent of the sums subscribed for the relief of the South Gate refugees, and other collections made by individuals, both foreign and native.

The shareholders in the China Coast Steam Navigation Company have held their annual meeting. The accounts show a profit on the year's working of Tls. 41,153. In view, however, of loss incurred on the sale of the Dragon, and of payments still due for the new steamer Sin Nanzing, the directors did not recommend any dividend. The reserve fund stands at Tls. 62,522, and the underwriting account at Tls. 21,445. Messrs. How, Wilson, and Kung Kee were elected directors for the ensuing year. The well known steamer Ping On has undergone extensive repairs, including a new high-pressure boiler capable of working with 100 lbs. of steam, and her passenger accommodation has been enlarged. These repairs have been all made at Messrs. Boyd and Co.'s yard, and have been proved to be quite satisfactory upon a trial trip which was made.

Some further particulars have been published regarding the recent collision between the Sin Nanzing and the Yunching. It appears that the Sin Nanzing, on her way down the Peiho, grounded on the left bank just above the Arsenal bend, and that the Yunching, bound up, in turning the curve, also touched the bottom and glided off on to the Sin Nanzing, striking her with considerable force on the starboard quarter, causing a rent, as already reported, from the deck down to the water line. The force of the collision carried the Sin Nanzing higher up the bank, where she remained stationary. The cargo in the aft hold was discharged, and temporary repairs commenced without delay. Subsequently the rent was boarded up sufficiently well to enable her to reach Shanghai. She was then towed off the bank, and on the following day she proceeded and reached here without difficulty. The damage is estimated at about Tls. 4,000. The Municipal Council have taken a step, which is certainly by no means premature, viz., to provide for the safety of those who visit theatres, either native or foreign. They have called for a report of the means of egress in case of fire, which are notoriously defective. It is to be hoped that the Council will insist on their being improved. Messrs. Vinay and Aymeric have been elected Trustees of the General Hospital to represent the French municipality.

The Celestial Empire has the following:—We are informed on excellent authority that certain very great improvements are in contemplation at Woosung. It is said that arrangements are pending for a large pontoon to be run out into deep water, in order that the mail-steamers may come alongside to discharge passengers and mails, which will be then sent on by special mail-train from Woosung station to Shanghai. The cargo, of course, will be brought up the river in the usual way. We hear that the average profits of the railway are now estimated at about a thousand taels a month.

From the North China Herald we take the following items of general news:—

Our readers will remember the failure of an action heard a few weeks ago, in which the China Navigation Company sought to recover from Mr. R. Francis Tls. 5,800, Kiukian currency, which it was alleged had been misappropriated by William Henry Shaw, who was Mr. Francis's sub-agent at Kiukiang. When the action was heard Shaw was away from China, and his whereabouts having been ascertained a warrant was issued for his apprehension. Its execution was entrusted to Sergeant Skinner, who was despatched on the 2nd inst. to Hong Kong, where it was expected Shaw would shortly arrive from Japan. These arrangements worked with success. On the 14th March Shaw arrived in Hong Kong, from Kobe, by the Galley of Lorne, and was taken into custody by Sergeant Skinner. His identification was proved before the Hong Kong magistrate, who thereupon ordered him to Shanghai for trial. He arrived by the Amoy, and was taken before Mr. Mowat at H.B.M.'s Supreme Court. Mr. Wainewright, who is engaged to conduct the prosecution, was unprepared to go fully into the case, owing to the principal witnesses having to be brought from Kiukiang, and applied for a remand for a week. Shaw offered no objection, but asked for the case to be heard without unnecessary delay. He hoped to clear himself of the charge, and being in ill-health, he desired a change of climate as soon as possible. He was remanded for a week, bail being offered in his own recognisances of $1,000 and two sureties in $500 each.

We hear that a large proportion of the heavier fines inflicted in the recent gambling case heard at the Mixed Court has been paid, and the delinquents set at liberty. The four pawnbrokers who were fined $100 each still hold out, however, saying they cannot raise the money. They are therefore still detained at the Central Police Station. The Pekingese sentenced to be bambooed is also confined there, but why he should be kept waiting so long for the infliction of the sentence seems strange. Some of the smaller fines imposed on the gamblers imprisoned at the Mixed Court have also been paid; and it is considered probable that the whole amount will have been paid in a few days.

On the 14th March, at the Mixed Court, before the Chinese Magistrate Chen and Dr. Yates, Ping-tsoh-tsen, a Chinese coal broker, was charged with conspiring with and assisting other people to defraud the Shanghai Gas Company of the value of a quantity of coal. After hearing the evidence of Mr. G. J. Yeo, engineer and manager of the gas works, who from the books proved that during his absence in England coal had been delivered short of weight to the value, on one dealer's account alone, of Tls. 722.75; that the company had been charged full weight for the same, and had been therefore defrauded to that amount; it transpired, by the admission of the native coal merchant himself, trading under the hong name of Yuen-hang, that he had superintended the delivery of several quantities of coal sold by him, through the broker, to the Gas Company at their works. In all these instances short weight was delivered. One order of 163 tons was 36 tons deficient; one of 93 tons was 20 tons 15 cwt. short., and all the others more or less in proportion. Two foreigners in the employ of the company were also stated to be implicated in these transactions, and they have been discharged from the company's employ. The magistrate ordered the coal merchant into custody for further examination, and admitted the broker to bail on his giving good security.

Training for the Spring Race Meeting is progressing, and nearly every morning the Grand Stand and course present an animated scene. During one morning the large number of eighty-six ponies were counted on the training course; and judging from the unusual competition shown in the holding of numerous auctions of griffins, this number bids fair to be largely increased. It is, of course, too early to form an opinion as to how much racing stuff can be got out of the mass of raw material on offer, but as in this case multiplicity gives greater chances of success it may be thought likely that sufficient will be found to yield large fields and good sport.

The newly-instituted class-firing of the Shanghai Volunteers is progressing favourably. The Mih-ho-loongs have made the class-firing compulsory on all the members. This example should be followed by the other companies if they wish to obtain corresponding excellence at the Spring and Autumn Rifle competitions.

The annual meeting of subscribers to the Shanghai Library was held this week. The Very Rev. the Dean occupied the chair. The report and accounts were read and passed, the latter showing a balance due to the Treasurer of Tls. 54.31. Six debenture bonds were drawn for payment, the numbers being 9, 18, 29, 53, 55 and 59. A plan was presented from Mr. Kingsmi l, to provide more shelf-room for the books, which were stated by the Hon. Secretary to be increasing at the rate of about 500 volumes per annum. Several suggestions were made with respect to the proposed alteration, but the matter was not fully discussed.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 29th March; the French mail from London Feb. 9 arrived out on the 22nd March, and the following P. and O. mail of Feb. 16th was received on the 26th March.

The annual report of the Postmaster-General has been published. During the year 1876 there has been a falling off of revenue of $11,725. This is partly due to the loss on exchange, on remitting to England; partly to the reduction in local rates, and partly to the competition of the American and Japanese Post-offices in Shanghai, Hankow, and the ports of Japan. The quickest passages home were, as usual, by the Messageries, and the quickest out by the P. and O. Company. The O. and O. steamer Oceanic made the fastest run to America, accomplishing the passage to San Francisco in twenty-three days. On an appeal being made to them through the native press by Bishop Burdon, the Chinese residents in Hong Kong subscribed over $4,000 for the relief of the famine-stricken population in the north.

On the occasion of the birthday of the Emperor of Germany, the German ships in harbour were decorated, and a dinner was given at the German Club, at which Princes Leichteinstein and Montomoro, who were paying a flying visit to the colony, were present.

A court of inquiry has been held at the Harbour Master's office upon the British ship John o'Gaunt, bound from Liverpool to Manila with coals, and which was wrecked on the 8th of January on a reef off the Island of Batag, in the Philippines, the captain and crew having been brought to Hong Kong by the Spanish steamer Salvadora. The "Finding" was not given when the mail left.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The following table shows the value of the exports of Siam for January this year, as furnished to the Siam Advertiser:—

To Hong Kong	$221,222
„ Europe and America	24,000
„ Java	212,266
Total...	$743,555

Rice amounted to $588,757, teelseed to $26,974, buffalo hides to $17,016, and raw silk to $6,660.

A correspondent has kindly furnished us with the following survey notes from Bangkok:—

Teea Rueh is a place of shipment on the Menam about seventy miles from Bangkok. Ko Rat is a large central trade district of considerable importance, about 110 miles E.N.E. of the former. An extensive range of high mountains, nearly midway, has been an effective barrier, from time immemorial, for bringing the trade of Ko Rat to Bangkok. Hitherto this has been accomplished by means of bullocks and primitive carts, in an unsatisfactory manner. The enterprising young King and his government have lately had a survey made of that part of the country with a view of establishing a tramway between the above mentioned places, and opening out the rich uncultivated districts in that direction. The late survey has been successful in finding a practical gradient in a convenient part of the range. Levels along the line of track have been taken, and numerous positions carefully determined. Suitable timber is everywhere to be met with, and there exists no very serious engineering difficulties to grapple with in carrying out the Government intentions. Ko Rat is a walled city of very ancient date. It forms a parallelogram of one mile, and is the great trade emporium in the N.E Province of Siam. Officials have been despatched to Java to observe the working of the railways there, with a view to develop the present tramway into a line of railway. Great credit is due to the young King and his Government for taking such active steps to develop his country.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The Batavia Handelsblad says:—

There is nothing of importance to be mentioned, and this is in some respects fortunate considering the absence of the Governor General. The European personnel for the Tanjong Priok works has arrived; erelong building operations will be begun there on a grand scale. The savings bank at Sourabaya has distributed a dividend of 6 per cent., and that at Batavia 6½ per cent.; the deposits in the latter bank are increasing. Counterfeit half guilders have been discovered here; the police have succeeded in tracing out the manufacturer. Cholera is prevailing at Padang. On the West Coast of Sumatra attention is being paid to the intelligence regarding the disease affecting coffee trees there. According to the Bintang Timor, a great flood took place at Sampang in Madura on the 7th inst.

From Celebes favourable intelligence has been received. The eldest son of Bonto Bonto, who is very much esteemed by him, has submitted. Daeng Pasele (another son), who had been a prisoner, was set at liberty after he had taken the oath of fidelity. That province is thus becoming gradually tranquillised.

The Batavian mercantile community complain earnestly of the inconveniences occasioned by the levying of the excise on arrack. The newly draughted regulation on import, export, and excise duties ought to provide for one omission at least, if the great firms here are not to give up altogether the export trade in arrack. The said draft regulation is under the consideration of the Chambers of Commerce. It would be desirable were it made public, and the whole mercantile community enabled to express their opinion on it.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 5th April; the French mail from London March 2nd was received on the 2nd April. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

H. E. Sir William Jervois, accompanied by Captain Satterthwaite, R.E., embarked from Johnston's Pier on board the E. and A. Company's steamer Normanby, Captain Reddell, on the 3rd April. A guard of honour of H.M.'s 74th Highlanders was present on the pier, and a large number of residents, including H. H. the Maharajah of Johore, assembled to wish his Excellency farewell and a pleasant voyage to Australia and back here again. Lady Jervois and the two Misses Jervois had left for Europe by the M.M. steamer Anadyr, accompanied by Captain Paton, A.D.C. In consequence of a recent family bereavement, no public entertainment could be received by H. E. the Governor and Lady Jervois prior to their departure, and in consequence of this the committee appointed for the purpose have resolved that some token of the regard of the community shall be f rwarded to Lady Jervois and daughters in London.

The departure of his Excellency for Australia has necessitated numerous rearrangements of heads of departments, and the acting appointments are larger than ever they were before in the public service of the Colony, which is saying a good deal. The action of the Home authorities in refusing to allow Lieut. MacCullum R.E. to accompany Sir William Jervois to Australia, and deputing Captain Satterthwaite instead, furnishes another instance, similar to that of Judges, of their utter disregard of the public interests of this Colony. The Colonial Engineer, instead of being asked to retire, as he should, gets extended sick leave, and now his second is sent away on other duty, which in no way concerns this Colony, which is left to shift as it may with junior engineers to look after important and expensive public works.

It has been notified by Mr. W. E. Maxwell, the Acting British Resident in Perak, that, from the 1st April, the export duty on tin is reduced to $10 per bhara (400 lbs.) from Perak, and $8 from Larut.

Major-General Sir Henry Norman, K.C.B., passed through here from India on the 27th March on his way home vid China and America.

Two public entertainments have been given in the Town-hall —one by Messrs. Hudson and Voltaire, of the Christy Minstrel order, varied by ventriloquism; and one—Willard's Wanderings —consisting of a musical and spiritualistic melange. The last was largely attended.

Mr. Hugh Low, the new Resident to Perak, arrived here by the French mail on the 27th March, and has proceeded to take up his appointment.

His Excellency Col. Anson, the Administrator, started in the Pluto on a visit to the Native States and Penang on the same day that he was sworn into office.

We regret to say that the Hon. W. Adamson has deemed it necessary, on account of the demands on his time by business and other public duties, to resign his seat in the Legislative Council. Mr. Adamson's resignation, which has been reluctantly accepted by H.E. the Governor, is a sensible loss to the Council, as, from his great natural abilities, his pains-taking industry, his local knowledge and experience, and his powers of expression, there is no one in the Colony more fitted to represent the community or advise the Executive at the Council table.

H.M.S. Juno, Captain Wilcox, arrived from China on the 23rd March, and with the Growler forms the naval force at present here. With the departure of H. E. the Governor and the other recent events and changes among officials, it is perhaps as well that a ship of her size is stationed here.

A Gazette Extraordinary contains the following notifications:—

His Excellency Sir William F. Drummond Jervois, K.C.M.G., C.B., having left the Colony on the 2nd April, the Hon. Colonel Archibald Edward Harbord Anson, C.M.G., Lieutenant-governor of Penang, has taken the oath of office as Administrator of the Government of the Straits Settlements.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to grant three months' leave of absence to Captain J. H. Satterthwaite, R E., Acting Assistant Colonial Engineer and Surveyor-General, Penang.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to grant eight months' leave of absence to the Hon. Thomas Scott, Member of the Legislative Council.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to accept the resignation by the Hon. W. Adamson of his seat in the Legislative Council of the Straits Settlements.

His Excellency the Administrator has been pleased to appoint the Hon. Captain E. W. Shaw, R.N., to be Acting Lieutenant-Governor, Penang.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint the Hon. Charles John Irving, Auditor-General, Straits Settlements, to be Acting Lieutenant-Governor, Malacca.

Mr. E. A. Irving, Assistant Colonial Secretary, reported his return to the colony on the 27th March.

His Excellency the Administrator has been pleased to appoint Mr. E. A. Irving to be Acting Auditor-General, Straits Settlements.

His Excellency the Administrator has been pleased to appoint Mr. George H. Anson to be his Private Secretary.

His Excellency the Administrator has been pleased to appoint Mr. J. M. R. Magalhaens, Assistant Engineer in charge of Malacca, to be Acting Assistant Colonial Engineer and Surveyor General, Penang, during the absence of Captain Satterthwaite, R.E., on leave.

His Excellency the Administrator has been pleased to appoint Mr. H. D. Richards, Assistant Engineer, Penang, to be Acting Assistant Engineer in charge of Malacca, vice Mr. J. M. R. Magalhaens.

A meeting of ladies and gentlemen, friends and supporters of the Seamen's Mission, was held at the Sailors' Home for the purpose of thanking the Rev. Mr. Brown, the chaplain to the Mission, and who is leaving Singapore, for the ardour and energy he has shown in the discharge of his duties while in this colony. The Right Rev. Dr Chambers presided, and the proceedings throughout were most enthusiastic. During the evening Captain Mair, on behalf of several seamen, presented Mr. Brown with a purse of sovereigns, taking advantage of the occasion to render him a flattering tribute.

Subjoined is a copy of the Ordinance for the detention of the ex-Sultan which was passed through all stages in the Legislative Council.

A Bill for the Safe Detention of ex-Sultan Abdullah of Perak.

Whereas it has been found necessary for various reasons of State that Abdullah, son of the late Sultan Jaffar of Perak, now a prisoner in the Civil prison at Singapore, should be deported to such place as her Majesty may decide upon; And whereas it is expedient that provision by law should be made for his detention pending such deportation.

It is hereby enacted by the Governor of the Straits Settlements, with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council thereof, as follows:—

It shall be lawful for the Governor to direct, by an order under his hand and seal, in the form in the Schedule, that the said Abdullah, son of the late Sultan Jaffar of Perak, be detained in the Civil prison at Singapore, or to direct that he be detained in any other place, on board ship or shore at any of the Settlements, and there to be kept in safe custody till such time as his deportation can be carried into effect.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Cotton Fabrics and Yarns: The improvement mentioned in our last report had made further progress, and in some articles a fair business had been done at better prices. Yarns 16-24 had been sold to a fair extent, and quotations showed an advance; 28-32 had attracted a little more notice, but the offers made had not led to much business; some sales of 38-42 were reported at very low prices. For Shirtings there was a small demand at slightly higher rates, but there was as yet no perceptible animation in this important branch of the import trade. For T-Cloths and Velvets there was some inquiry, but other articles attracted but little attention. Woollens: The better feeling in this market had fairly maintained itself, and transactions at slightly advanced rates in plain Mousseline de Laines and Black Orleans had taken place. Blankets for army use had also been in good demand, and obtained prices ranging from 42 to 47 cents, according to weight. There had also been some sales of Army Cloth at advanced rates, but stocks were very small.

HANKOW.—The Chinese New-year holidays commenced on the 13th February, and business was not renewed until after the 20th. There had been a considerable falling off in the spring demand for Cotton goods, and the market had continued very quiet. Prices were about two candareens lower than the opening rates after the New-year.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolff write on the 21st March:—There has been a steady improvement in the tone of our market for Manchester goods, and although the business actually done has been but small, it is so far satisfactory, showing as it appears to do that the long interval of depression is nearly at an end, and that trade here may shortly be expected to be resumed with something like its usual activity. Grey Shirtings: Some demand has existed for the finer qualities of 9.10/12 lbs. at Tls. 2.30 to 2.40 per piece; in the absence of stocks, however, we do not hear of any sales being effected. Medium to good qualities of 8¼ lbs. have likewise been asked for, and amongst the settlements reported in these makes are the following chops:—Red Ram, Tls. 1.67 per piece; Red Pheasants, Tls. 1.62 to 1.63 per piece; Pillars, Tls. 1.55 per piece, &c., &c. T-Cloths have not as yet been inquired for to any extent, only some few bales of 7-lbs. ordinary Mexicans having changed hands so far as we can learn. English Drills: No sales are reported in this cloth.

SHANGHAI.—An improvement which occurred early in the fortnight had been again lost owing to a sudden drop in the rate of sterling exchange, which had touched at 5s. 4d. per tael for bank bills at six months' sight, as well as to the receipt of rather unfavourable accounts of the opening of trade in the North, any activity in which remained yet in abeyance. The principal operations had been at public auction. On the 20th March upwards of 22,000 pieces Grey Shirtings C. P. Henderson's chops were forced upon the market at lower currencies, 7 lbs. realising Tls.1.22½ to 1.32½, and 8 lbs. from Tls.1.52 to 1 75 per piece for medium to good qualities. Privately the only Shirtings at all saleable had been best and favourite chops, Dewhurst's Eagle having touched Tls.1.85 per piece. Sales of T-Cloths had been small, but there were buyers of Ordinary Mexican 7 lbs. at Tls.1.20 to 1.25 and of best makes at Tls.1.40 to 1.42 per piece, 8lbs. 36 inches being valued at Tls.1.40 to 1.60 per piece according to quality. Drills had been wanted at previous rates, and some moderate sales are reported of 14 lbs. English for Tls.1.86 to 1.95 per piece. Woollens: Camlets a little firmer at auction, but difficult to realise privately on equal terms. CPH Long Ells scarlet selling at Tls.6.66 to 6.70 per piece, Spanish Stripes from Tls.0.50 to 0.56 per yard, and Lastings from Tls.11.75 to 12.19 per piece. A fair amount of business had been done in Metals at unaltered values.

FOOCHOW.—The only sale had been 500 pieces 7lb. T-Cloths at $1·95 per piece.

HONG KONG.—The business during the interval had been restricted, the currency difficulty not having been adjusted. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Yarns: Nos. 16 to 24 have been rather neglected of late, but values are unchanged; Nos. 28 to 32 and 38 to 42 are also held for former figures. Piece Goods: A moderate business has been transacted in Grey and White Shirtings, and the latter have commanded better prices all round. T-Cloths are not in strong demand, but holders are not pressing sales. Drills are likewise not particularly inquired for and but trifling sales are now reported. A few bales of American Drills, chafed and somewhat damaged, have been quitted at $3.75 per piece. American Sheetings are quoted $3.25 to 3.30 per piece, but Jeans are nominal. The late decline in exchange is very much against importers, and holders generally of Cotton Goods are showing no inclination to sell except at an advance equal to the drop in the sterling rate. Woollens: Small settlements have been made of most of the articles under this head, and prices show little or no change. Metals: Lead has declined, and at the reduced rates there are at present no purchasers. Tin is rather firmer, and hard Tin Plates are still wanted. Assorted Bar Iron is readily saleable, and good Steel is in request. Yellow Metal is quiet, as dealers appear to be supplied to meet existing requirements. Quicksilver is rather lower, but is steady at quotations, although late receipts from California have been large. Coals: The arrivals have been 6,715 tons, comprising 5,655 tons of Australian and 1,060 tons of Cardiff. The sales have been 6,925 tons of Australian at $9.50 to $8, and 3,450 tons of Cardiff at 42s. and $10.25 per ton, nearly the entire sales of both kinds being to arrive. About fifty vessels are known to be loading and on the way for this port with coals, and as receivers are showing anxiety to realise, our market has declined, and is now weak at quoted prices.

Digitized by Google

CANTON.—Sales of 500 piculs of Lead had been reported at slightly firmer prices than those last advised. Closing quotations were $8.30 to 8.35 for L.B., and $8.35 to 8.40 for W.B. and Hole Chop. The stock in hand was estimated at 580 piculs. Quicksilver was quoted at $61.50 to 62 per picul, showing a material fall in value.

PENANG.—The demand had been very small, business had been very limited, and prices were unchanged. Grey Shirtings: Limited sales of 7 lbs. at $29 to $30, and 8¼ lbs. at $35 to 43½ according to quality. Small sales of 45-inch 9 lbs. at $45 to $46. Grey Supers: No sales. Grey Madapollams: A sale of 2¼ lbs. at $12½ Grey T. Cloths: Small sales of 5 lbs. at $22, 6 lbs. at $25, and 7 lbs. at $29 to $29½. No sale of Mexicans. Grey Yarns: Small sales of 30 s at $34, and 40 s at $103. White Shirtings: Moderate sales of Medium at $59 to $63 and Fine at $68 to $77½, according to quality. A sale of 45 inch at $68. White Cambrics: Limited sales of 24 s at $15¼ to $15½, 50 s at $23¼ to $25, and 15/ 16 s at $23 to $26. Turkey Red Cambrics: Small sales of 2½ lbs. at $40, and 2⅝ and 2¾ lbs. at $38½.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The business done had been very unimportant, and transactions are represented by about 700 piculs of low grades. Arrivals had been very limited, and the market closed quiet, at nominally last quotations.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Settlements reported are 1,900 chests, which showed slightly easier rates, but at the close some 6,000 chests had been settled (not formally reported) at from Tls. 10 to Tls. 14, reducing the stock to about 2,500 chests. Green: An extensive business had taken place in medium to fine Moyunes and Teenkais, at prices ranging from Tls. 27 to Tls. 30½, principally for the New York market, but as there was no vessel on the berth, buying had been somewhat checked towards the close. In Pingsueys and Local-packed there was nothing of interest to report.

FOOCHOW AND AMOY.—The season was over.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—The only transaction to record in old season's Congou is the shipment on native account of 718 half-chests of country tea per French mail of 22nd March. Of New Season's Congou about 3,000 boxes have been shipped from this and Macao; as, however, the larger portion of the shipments are "contract" teas, the market cannot be considered as generally opened; the few settlements of market teas are said to range from Tls. 22 to 28 per picul. As far as can be seen at present the crop appears to be a fair average one, though many of the teas are somewhat deficient in strength. Canton Greens: A few small parcels have been packed for the colonies.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—A fall in the rate of foreign exchange and advices reporting a better feeling at home had imparted some activity to this market. Deliveries since the 9th March had been about 350 piculs of Hanks, and 100 of Oshius and Filatures, the greater part of which was still under inspection. Prices for good Hanks had advanced $20 to $30; Oshius, which formed the bulk of the stock, were firm at the rates last quoted.

SHANGHAI.—There had been little or no change either in the position of the market or in quotations. A falling exchange had enabled holders to keep up values in spite of the indifferent home advices, and stocks of desirable Tsatlees had become very small and were firmly held. Re-reels: The American mail took 357 bales at prices ranging from Tls. 440 to 520 (20s. to 23s. 9d.), and a considerable quantity of the lower grades was going forward by the present mail steamer. Tsatlees: Good 4 and 4½ Silk had been most in demand, and amongst the settlements may be particularised:—Pagoda No. 2, Tls. 480 at 5s. 4⅝d., = 22s.; Yellow Elephant, Tls. 470 at 5s. 4⅝d., = 21s. 6d. Tsyssams were in fair demand at Tls. 280 to 300 for common Keahings or common Chincum. Fair to good 9-12 moss were quoted at Tls. 280 to 290, and fair market Laeyongs at Tls. 260 to 270.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Circular says:—An unimportant business has been transacted at irregular intervals aggregating 150 bales of Tsatlee reel, of which 43 bales were taken in the first fortnight of the period under review. Prices have advanced with every purchase made, and to-day's quotation for good No. 4 is (nominally) $435 to $440 per picul. Holders are still sanguine of a further rise, but taking into account the state of the home market, present London quotations, and the advanced period of the season, there appears small chance of the issue they desire. Long reels have been in limited request. Settlements amount to 70 piculs of Kowkong and other sorts. Re-reels: These descriptions have been in good demand, and 700 boxes are said to have been contracted for. Prices paid show a slight decline on those quoted a month ago. Stock in Canton is computed at 700 to 800 bales Tsatlee, 50 bales Cumchuck and Lucklow, 50 bales Kowkong, and 100 to 200 bales of inferior kinds.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HANKOW.—Small arrivals of Rhubarb were upon offer at Tls. 35 to Tls. 60 for Shensi and Tls. 15 to Tls. 30 for Szechuen. Musk, fair shipment to Shanghai of Yunnan, 1 box of Szechuen settled at Tls. 80 to Tls. 85. China Grass. Small demand for Szechuen Green. Cantharides: No arrivals. Hides: Large shipments had been made to Shanghai; quotations Tls. 7.5 to Tls. 7.6.

HONG KONG.—No Japan Camphor had offered, and the stock of Formosa was very small and was steadily held for $16.50 to 17 per picul. The Korsor had sailed for New York, taking 2,500 piculs of Camphor. Vermilion was quiet at $33. Gamboge was scarce and held for $55 to 60 per picul. Cassia Oil had declined, owing to the desire of holders to realise their stocks, and about 85 piculs had been sold at $100 to 101 per picul, leaving about 150 piculs on offer. The stock of Aniseed Oil was 186 piculs and the market was quiet at $191 to 192. Aniseed Stars of good quality were very scarce, and common grades were being taken at $23.50 to 24 per picul.

CANTON.—Cassia: $11.50 to $11.60 for cases; $11.15 to $11.20 for mats, per picul. There had been very little demand and prices were slightly lower; 400 piculs had been purchased for shipment to Bombay; stock 7,000 piculs. Cassia Buds: $17.75 to $18.00 per picul; sales 170 piculs; stock 50 piculs. Cassia Oil: None on offer. Aniseed Star: $26 50 to 27.00 per picul; stock 100 piculs. Galangal Root: $3.00 to $3.50 per picul; no stock. China Root: $4.00 to $4.20 per picul; new season's cargo offering in small lots. China Galls: $13.20 to $13.40 per picul; stock 50 piculs. Turmeric: $6.00 to $6.50 per picul; 200 piculs on offer; new cargo expected very shortly. Rhubarb: Nominal; no stock on the market. THE TRADING CAPABILITIES OF THE COUNTRY TRAVERSED BY THE YUNNAN MISSION.

SIR T. WADE TO THE EARL OF DERBY.

Peking, October, 9, 1876.

My Lord,—I beg to refer your Lordship to my despatch of the 12th of July, reporting the return of Mr. Grosvenor and those with him. I there stated that Mr. Davenport was arranging the information he had collected regarding the trade of the country traversed by the Mission in the form of a report. I have now the honour to inclose copy of the report in question, as forwarded to me by Mr. Davenport. Owing to its length, the preparation of a copy has taken some time. I have informed Mr. Davenport that I should have pleasure in laying the paper before your Lordship. I consider his account of the journey to be both able and interesting, and I venture to hope that it may be so regarded by your Lordship. His observations on the trade of various places I think of special importance. The specimens alluded to in the report were, by my direction, forwarded separately to your Lordship by Mr. Medhurst, Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) THOMAS FRANCIS WADE.

REPORT BY MR. DAVENPORT.

The Mission started from Hankow on the 5th November, 1875, on board a large Hunan junk, and proceeded by the main river (Yangtsze) without stopping at any place of importance until reaching Shashih on the 24th November, thus accomplishing a distance of 293 miles against the stream in tolerably fair weather in twenty days, during two of which the junk was wind-bound. This part of the river has been so fully described by Captain Blakiston and other travellers that I will merely remark that, at the time we passed up, the river traffic almost entirely ceased after leaving the entrance to the Tung-ting Lake; for, although we had seen a large number of junks daily until we reached Yo Chow, yet we scarcely met any more until we came to an anchor at Shashih.

The country we passed through being a rich alluvial plain, the products were chiefly agricultural, viz., summer crops of rice and cotton, and winter crops of beans, wheat, and several other cereals, such as rape, millet, and the like. It is interesting to observe that the system of rotation crops here in practice somewhat resembles the four-course shift which has prevailed in some parts of England for the last century. The course generally followed is, first, wheat sown in November and reaped in the following April or May, whereupon the ground is at once ploughed up and sown with the second crop, cotton, which is picked in the months of September, October, and November. The third crop, beans, are carefully dibbled between the still standing rows of cotton, and show well above the ground when the stalks of the latter are finally plucked up by the roots for fuel during the winter. The beans continue to grow till the following spring, when, a sufficient number of pods being gathered to supply the wants of the nearest markets, they are ploughed while yet green into the ground, in order to supply manure for the fourth and grand crop of the course, viz., paddy, which is transplanted in May and reaped in October.

I may here remark, parenthetically, that, with the exception of some parts of the north of China, where a drill is used exactly like our common English drill, the Chinese do serious injury to their cereal crops by sowing the seed too profusely; while, with regard to the tillage of Hupeh province generally, it was even more slovenly and unscientific than the style of farming usually to be found in semi-tropical or northern China. Along the banks of the river, and especially on the convex shore of the bends, is to be found a valuable product, viz., beds of reeds covering many acres, which are very useful combined with mud in supplying the place of lath and plaster with more civilised nations, as also for the thatch of houses, materials for curtains, mats, sails, &c., and last, but not least, for winter fuel. There is a large quantity of cotton exported from Hupeh to Szechuen and Yunnan Provinces, but a considerable portion is consumed by the villagers themselves, who weave it into a coarse cloth of a kind which, so far as my experience goes, is worn almost universally by the people of China; indeed, the only place where I can recollect to have seen foreign shirtings commonly worn was on the Korean frontier. The natives say that it is not only more durable, but also far warmer, than foreign shirtings; and I fear at this date that it is well established that the idea of clothing the imaginary "teeming myriads" of China in foreign long-cloths is a mere delusion, their consumption being confined to the well-to-do, an extremely limited class in this country. It is, I regret to say, generally allowed that foreign manufacturers cannot supply an equal material to that commonly worn by the Chinese people at a similar price.

The mulberry tree having grown in this part of China from time out of mind, silk is, of course, produced in many parts of the province, and sent to the adjacent markets for general distribution; this branch of industry, however, did not come under our personal observation. We observed growing as a winter crop the well-known Chinese sugar-grass, from which is made excellent sugar, and whose culm is eaten greedily by the natives; also the tobacco plant, of which the leaves are said to be inferior in quality to the Kwan-tung or Manchurian tobacco, owing probably to the fact that the latter is a summer crop, and the only one grown on the ground during the whole year.

Notwithstanding the ingenuity of the Chinese in using all kinds of nets, for which the muddy waters of the Yantsze are eminently suited, the quantity and value of the fish taken out of this part of the river, though in a high degree adapted to afford food and shelter for them, would seem to be inappreciable, and would probably be accounted for in the absence of fishery laws in China, whereby the ignorant fishermen are allowed to ruin rivers and the inner waters generally by catching the fish wholesale when they come up to the shallows to spawn, at a time of the year when it is too warm to convey them to distant markets, and when they are scarcely fit to eat when caught. Almost the only eatable fish, except the perch, is the sam-lie, a member of the salmoniæ, which visits Hupeh in the spring, and is thence called the "season fish" by the Chinese. It is remarkable that neither this fish nor the flounder continue their journey up the river much beyond Shashih.

The population of this part of the province is scanty, the towns being small and the villages few and far apart. The cause is probably the liability of the country to disastrous inundations during the summer or autumn. These floods (as distinguished from the periodical rise common in tropical and semi-tropical regions in consequence of the rainy season) are occasioned by the irregular excessive rains falling sometimes for two seasons in succession, in the mountainous regions of western China, and then often not occurring again for several years. It has frequently been surmised by foreigners that the rise of the Yangtsze was occasioned by the melting of snow during summer, because other rivers, such as the Mississippi, Euphrates, Ganges, &c., are so affected. There are a great many reasons why this should not be the case with the Yangtsze, of which I will only mention one, viz., that although there may be a plentiful supply of melting snow in Thibet in the summer, yet the channel of the Kinsha Kiang is not large enough to bring down such an enormous volume of water as is required to maintain a four-knot current in the Yangtsze, in addition to converting the vast basin-shaped plains of Hupeh into boundless lakes.

SHASHIH.

Shashih is, with the exception of Chun-king, the most important mart we passed throughout the whole journey. It is a long straggling, dirty, unwalled town, built on the left bank of the river, and lying below the level of high water, in an angle formed by the junction or debouchure of a canal, which again connects with the River Yangtsze at a place called Sin Tan Kow, about thirty miles above Hankow, thereby saving the long and interminable journey round the bends of the great river, and so forming the regular road between Szechuen and Hankow. A branch leading from this canal runs through the Tai peh hu Lake to Sha yang chen on the River Han, situated about 170 miles above Hankow. As is usual in the neighbourhood of these formidable rivers, the canal does not actually communicate with the main stream, but terminates within half a mile of it, the goods being carried across the embankment by mules and coolies. Another branch runs to the prefectural city of King chow fu, about three miles distant. This town is surrounded by lofty walls at least five miles in circumference, and a ditch, which on the northern face, where I saw it, was upwards of 200 yards in breadth. This city withstood all the assaults of the rebels, and is one of the very few cities in central China which has preserved its hereditary Manchu garrison intact, and thus, after the suppression of the rebellion, was enabled to supply garrisons for other cities from its ranks. In addition to this, there is a flourishing Chinese population and a considerable trade. This city was regarded by the early Emperors of the present dynasty as a place politically of the first importance, while it has always been considered by Chinese as the key to this part of China.

At a little more than two miles above Shashih, on the opposite or right bank of the river, is the mouth of the T'ai-p'ing Canal, which, running into the Tung-ting Lake, forms the shortest and safest route between Szechuen and Hunan and Kuang-tung Provinces; and thus this town, communicating with the interior in all directions by means of safe sheltered canals, forms the natural terminus of the Szechuen trading junks, which for the most part discharge their cargo here for transhipment in small native craft, though, of course, some junks carry on their cargo to Hankow, where they are to be seen moored in the River Han. These junks, some of them capable of carrying upwards of 150 tons of cargo, line the river face of the town for nearly two miles, and average from 500 to 600 in number, without including the smaller craft. They are not adapted for the traffic further down the river, as they are so clumsy and high out of the water as not to be adapted for sailing, while the high rate of wages and the large crews indispensable for the navigation of the Szechuen rapids would be simply ruinous.

ICHANG.

On the 1st of December the mission arrived at Ichang, the appearance of which was very disappointing. It is situated on the left bank of the river, and its walls are about three miles in circumference, tolerably well filled with, for this part of China, a well-to-do population. As compared with Shashih, however, it was evidently a place of small commercial importance, as was testified both by the quietness of the streets and the comparative paucity of junks in the river. There is, nevertheless, nothing in its situation to prevent its expansion when it becomes the head of the steam navigation on the Yangtsze. This part of the river was surveyed by Sub-Lieutenant Dawson, in 1869, who stated in his report that "the river from Hankow to Ichang was similar in nature to that below, though probably subject to more changes, but nothing, he considered, beyond what a pilot's experience could keep up with;" and concluded "that the river to Ichang is navigable for steamers of seven feet draught and powerful steering apparatus from the beginning of April to the end of September, and probably, if native report was to be believed, for the winter months also.

With regard to the desirableness of opening this part of the country to foreign trade, I can only say that whatever may be the effect so far as regards the interests of foreign merchants in China, there is no possible doubt whatever that the establishment of foreigners in Chinese towns tends more or less to secure good order and government, not only in the places themselves, but the adjoining districts, while, in this particular region, I feel sure that the population would largely increase, and, the embankments being properly repaired, the agricultural products would be more than doubled, and consequently the ability of the people to consume foreign goods largely augmented. On the other hand, since the suppression of the T'ai-p'ing rebellion, those unopened marts which do not happen to be situated in tea or silk districts in connection with foreign trade are utterly unable to recover their former importance. These facts are allowed by the most anti-foreign Chinese, one of whom complained, a few years ago, that "the trade in the interior has fallen off very much. The larger portion of the hongs in such marts as Chen-chow in Hunan, Ch'ang shan in Chekiang, and Yu shan in Kiang si have been closed." Notwithstanding that at the present time the trade of Ichang is not comparable with that of Shashih, I should submit the desirability of opening Ichang as the terminus, with Shashih as a place of call where steamers should be permitted to take on board or discharge goods and passengers, for the following reasons:—

1. Shashih being situated in a low, marshy country, below the average level of the river, in a semi-tropical climate, would be a very unhealthy place for the residence of Europeans.

2. Its chief importance is an entrepôt for Szechuen goods passing by inland waters to Hunan, the river Han, Hankow, and the lower Yangtsze ports, and for their return cargoes. The first-mentioned trade would, wherever the open port might be, remain untouched by the steamer traffic, while the Hankow and lower river goods would be saved at least ten days' delay by the junks delivering their down and taking their up cargo at Ichang instead of Shashih.

3. Although the local trade of Shashih, from its being the port of King-chow-fu, probably far exceeds that of Ichang, yet it must be borne in mind that the latter port, situated in rich country, has also an important distributing trade, which, in case steamers went no higher than Shashih, would still remain untouched; while, on the other hand, if the steamers' terminus were at Ichang, the local trade of Shashih would equally be arrived at by means of the landing-stage.

KWEICHOW.

K'wei-chow fu is a picturesque city built on the side of the hills on the left bank of the river. It contains several handsome buildings, and is a clean town, being supplied with fresh spring water carried over the walls by means of hollow bamboo pipes, and well deserves the Chinese title of Key to Szechuen. Unfortunately, the lower part of the city is too near the high summer level of the river, and almost the whole of two faces of the wall had recently been destroyed, and only rebuilt just before the arrival of our Mission. The hills at the back are curiously ornamented by an immense number of tombs, which, at a distance, resemble stunted dagobas. There is not much trade here, and the inhabitants are popularly supposed to live on the passing junks, which are obliged by the Custom-house to stop here for inspection.

After passing K'wei-chow fu the country becomes more open, and we gradually entered a very flourishing, though, as before described, still hilly country, the prosperous condition of which forcibly reminded one of the province of Kiang Su before the T'ai-p'ing rebels and the Imperialist soldiers burned it into a wilderness. From K'wei-chow fu to Chun-king may still be seen a district in Central China where every available inch is literally cultivated; winter crops of beans being even grown on the narrow paths dividing the paddy fields, while barren rocks having anything resembling a flat floor are covered a few inches with soil brought from the river below and grow crops. Every possible hill is beautifully covered with tiers of terraces, and any spring to be found on a higher level is brought to them, irrespective of distance, for the purpose of irrigation.

CHUNGKING.

On the 20th December the Mission reached Chunking, having accomplished the journey from Ichang, a distance of 360 miles, in twenty-eight days. This city and its suburb, Li-min, are alike situated on rising ground on the left bank of the Yangtsze, being divided by the River Foo Chiang, which is said to communicate during the high water in the summer with Cheng-tu fu, the capital of the province. This town has been so often described that I shall only say that it quite comes up to the descriptions given of it, as being the emporium of Western China, though the people informed us that owing to the exorbitant rates of taxation, a large number of the best houses were untenanted, from the failure of the hongs which had occupied them, while at least half of the junks (which extended for miles along the faces of Chun-king and Si-min, both in the Yangtsze and the River Ho) were laid up for want of employment. These utterances I looked upon as pardonable exaggerations, excusable in oppressed taxpayers, but was surprised to hear similar statements from the city authorities, although, of course, they attributed the falling off of trade to other causes.

The Mission left Chung-king on the 3rd of January, 1876, accompanied by the two Chinese gunboats which joined us at Ichang, there being no war junks at that city (i.e., Chung-king). We passed through much the same kind of country as below Chung-king, and in like manner, the large proportion of the poppy, or as it is called universally by the natives in this part of China, the opium plant, to the other native crops was particularly noticeable. The crops here do not generally observe the same rules of rotation, as everything depends upon the water supply. A summer crop of millet, I learn, was succeeded by a winter crop of sugar grass, which was followed by a spring crop of tobacco. A winter crop of peas, beans, &c., generally followed a summer crop of paddy.

In many places on isolated hills the water in the paddy fields was, I was over and over again assured, simply rain water. In these situations only one crop of paddy was grown yearly, as, of course, so enormous a supply of water was precarious, and the peasants feared to let it run off for the mere sake of growing a winter crop. The land tax in this locality instead of being assessed by the acre, as in other parts of China, is levied on each crop, e.g., an estimated picul (133⅓ lb. av.) of rice pays a duty of 100 cash, or about fivepence sterling.

The Land Route.

On the 4th of February the Mission started on the land journey from Gan-pien, the path lying along the right bank of the Hang River, which is navigable for small boats bringing down coal, &c., as far as a small mart called Nan-wa-tan. Our baggage was carried by Szechuen coolies, whose ordinary professed burthens were 70 catties, or 93⅓ lbs. avoirdupois, per man. The trade so far as Nan-wa-tan was, of course, to a great extent carried on by water, but, after passing that town and crossing the river on a suspension bridge, we came upon the main commercial route between Yunnan and Seuchow fu, the mart of central Szechuen. This northern corner of Yunnan resembles Szechuen in its agricultural products and its general configuration, but after passing Nan-wa-tan the houses become gradually inferior, ruins appear here and there, the condition of the people falls of, the land is no longer so carefully cultivated, and we gradually found ourselves on the outskirts of the region which had been devastated by a rebellion lasting for eighteen years. In a humble cottage in this neighbourhood, with his family, dressed in plain cotton cloth, and surrounded by cattle, pigs, fowls, &c., lives Hsueh hwan, a retired Minister of State, late Governor of the Province of Kiangsu.

There were evidences of quite a brisk trade along this route. All day long we met porters bringing from Chau-t'ung fu, the nearest Yunnan city, tin in blocks, large quantities of medicines, coal from the neighbouring hills, armadillo and leopard skins from the cities of Kaihwa and Meng-tze on the Annamese frontiers, white insect wax from Chau-t'ung fu, opium, white, red, and blue copper, tung oil, spelter, tea (said to come from Pu'rh, at the south of the province), and sugar candy; besides corn, wine, vermicelli, and a quantity of other articles, which, being destined for home consumption, and belonging simply to the local town and country traffic, I shall not enumerate or comment on. The imports to Yunnan from Szu-chow fu which we saw on the way were blue native cloth, Hupeh cotton, and Szechuen salt. At the shops in the small towns we passed were to be bought grey shirtings at Tls. 2.4 a piece (at the exchange of 5s. per tael = 12s.); long ells at Tls. 8.4 per piece; and foreign thread at Tl. 1.4 per catty, or 1½ lb. avoirdupois.

Timber Forests.

This part of Yunnan produces the famous nan-mu, so highly esteemed by the Court for building purposes, and by the wealthy for coffins on account of its durability. This timber is to be seen in perfect condition, after the lapse of nearly three centuries, in the shape of enormous pillars in the tombs of the Emperors of the Ming dynasty, and has usually been supposed by foreigners to be teak. The tree is tall, thin, straight growing, having no bough or twigs on the stem, but suddenly shooting out branches at the top, somewhat like a canopy over a Maypole. Its bark is of a peculiar ashy grey colour, and a specimen of the leaves, gathered by myself, accompanying this Report, will prove beyond all doubt that it is not a member of the teak family. During the Ming dynasty this wood had already become scarce (having probably been everywhere cut down and not replanted), and was brought chiefly from almost inaccessible valleys, situated in the valleys inhabited by wild tribes. The Imperial Palaces at Peking were built almost entirely of this timber, the Emperor Kia-tsing, in the year 1558, making use of 15,712 logs or tree trunks, and the Emperor Wan-li, 5,600 logs in the year 1597. The regulation block or log measured 82 feet in length and 13½ feet in circumference. As the wood had to be dragged over several mountain passes till streams were reached affording easy communication with the Yangtsze, a large staff of men were attached to each of the depots established in this region by the Central Government, and at each station were 100 wood-cutters and twenty engineers, whose duty was to level the roads and keep in order the framework used for aiding the draught of the timber. These men were specially hired from the department of Chenchow fu in Hunan Province. In addition, there were twenty stonemasons to remove projecting rocks, &c, twenty blacksmiths, and fifty ropemakers to make rope from the bark of the bamboo, while the draught was performed by natives impressed for the purpose. In the year 1668 the wood had become so difficult to obtain, that when building the T'ai ho tien Hall of the Palace at Peking deal was largely used as a substitute. The best known localities in Yunnan for the production of this wood are Wu-lu kou and Yu-chiau p'ing in the Tung-shen district of this (Chau-tung) department. At the present time this wood is imported to Shanghai in planks measuring eight feet long by thirteen or fourteen inches in diameter, for which the highest price is 200 dollars per plank. Whole coffins range from 100 dollars to 800 dollars, while small pieces are sold at from 10 cents to 50 cents per catty. The quality is judged of chiefly by the pungency of the scent. I have dwelt at so much length on this wood, of so much value in the Chinese market, because I saw to my extreme astonishment in the Manwyne valley, in the Kakhyen Hills, and again in Lower Burmah, in places comparatively accessible, trees whose resemblance to the nan-mu was very striking; while I have since learnt from the Chinese official encyclopædia that this tree formerly grew in the neighbourhood of Ta-li fu and other places in the west of the province. The tallow tree (Stillingia sebifera) is common in this part of Yunnan. The tallow is detached from the berries after being steamed, but it never becomes very hard in hot weather, and it is, therefore, usual to coat or line candles made of it with hard insect wax. White insect wax is also an export from this part of the province, being deposited by insects resembling slugs or young snails on the twigs of a tree resembling the apricot tree. Unfortunately, the twig with the insects and wax I gathered was thrown away by a tidy-minded Chinese, and during the whole journey I did not see another tree. This was the more unfortunate as the tree generally known or supposed to rear these insects is the fraxinus sinensis, whereas the tree I saw had no resemblance to the ash. Tung oil is in much request all over China. It has three special uses—(1) as an ingredient in a polish or varnish which preserves timber, and so is in great demand for houses, furniture, junks, and boats; (2) for lamp oil; (3) for forming, in combination with lime, a plaster or chunam much used in repairing small breaches in woodwork, in calking the bottoms and sides of junks, and the like. It is sold in Shanghai at from Tls. 4 to Tls. 5 per picul, i.e., 133⅓ lb. avoirdupois. This tree is a very good complement to the minute system of agriculture in practice here, as it will grow on the sides of precipices and in any impracticable corner. Its leaves slightly resemble those of the walnut tree, for which it has been mistaken by European travellers. The oil is produced in considerable quantities between this part and the Kin sha kiang.

The Plains.

On the 17th of February, after fourteen days' travel, the Mission emerged from the confused sea of hills, up and down which we had been laboriously walking for a fortnight, into an undulating plain, or rather long valley, covered with winter crops, of which the chief was opium, and which were far more backward than those we had left behind in Szechuen. We had got well to the southward of the Szechuen fogs, and were enjoying a fine, bracing air and constant sunshine. Amongst the mountains we had passed, the winter was only just over, as was testified by lumps of ice still remaining at the bottom of the large earthen water vessels. So far the country was, considering its capabilities, well populated, but the people had not the well-to-do appearance of the inhabitants of Szechuen. The elevation of this plain Mr. Baber estimated at about 6,000 feet; curiously enough, it was infested with flocks of Brahminy ducks, which devoted themselves entirely to feeding on the poppy plant, in exclusion of other food (according to the natives' statement), and were remarkably tame, the inhabitants being too poor to be able to purchase gunpowder, and I have already observed that the people of these provinces seem to be wanting in the usual skill of the Chinese with regard to the working of nets.

The greater part of the plain was under cultivation, and the city, although bearing many traces of the rebellion, was tolerably well filled with a ragged population. It was of the usual Chinese shape and appearance, and about three miles in circumference, situated on a rising in the centre of the valley, and, with its numerous pavilions, backed by cloud-capped mountains, looked almost picturesque. The Commandant informed us that he had just suppressed a rising at Pi-tsi, in the adjoining province of Kweichow. He said that the inhabitants rose because the local authorities had acted unjustly in a certain place, but that on his going there he merely killed some people and the place was tranquillised. The products of the neighbourhood of Chautung are coal, to be found on every hill side; copper, from two large mines amongst the hills to the westward; lead, said to be brought from a mine in the Lo-p'ing district, on the borders of Kweichow; and medicines, of which, being unknown to me, I forward herewith specimens, with their Chinese names and prices. They are all exported to Szechuen, and from thence distributed over China. The shops contained a considerable supply of foreign goods, supplied wholly from Szechuen, of which the more prominent were foreign cloth (Russian), of three different kinds, sold at the average rate of Tls. 40 per piece; two kinds of long ells, at Tls. 10 per piece; white and grey shirtings, Tls. 2·80 per piece; two kinds of camlets, at Tls. 18·90 per piece; imitation camlets, Tls. 5 per piece; red flannel at Tls. 18 per piece; velvet, per foot, 5 mace. A comparison of these prices with those ruling in England will show that, notwithstanding the oppressive inland taxation and the expensive carriage by land and water from Hankow, the prices asked here for British goods are not prohibitive. Likewise there were to be seen in the shops foreign clocks and watches, Canton-made watches, Korean handkerchiefs, Birmingham buttons, foreign iron ware, Canton brass lamps, with glass globes, Canton candlesticks, glass, sandalwood, Canton counting-boards, black pepper, prepared tobacco for water pipes, Corean, Liautung, and foreign ginseng, foreign gold, silver, and cotton thread. Foreign opium is not imported into Chau-tung, there being no demand for it. In addition to this, on account of the great intervening belt of country inhabited by the Lolo tribe, Chau-tung fu serves as the entrepot for the metals extracted from the mountains on the left bank of the Kin sha kiang in the southern part of Szechuen Province, in the department of Ning-yuen fu.

The White Copper District.

First in order comes the famous Yunnan white copper, called also "petung," which is obtained from the neighbourhood of Hui-li chou in this department, and I was informed by a Chinese General, who had spent many years in aiding to suppress the rebellion in this province, and who was himself a native of Szechuen, that the only supply in this province came from that city. On the other hand, the Ming dynasty Encyclopædia places these mines near the city of Mien-ning much further to the north, and most probably they are to be found in the defiles worn down by the T'ien ma River, which runs past both cities. This white copper is in common use in every temple and private house in all parts of the Empire I have visited, being in great request on account of its handsome silver-like appearance and its durability under usage. It is much used for saucers, candlesticks, lamps, locks, tea-pots, small hand stoves, water pipes, &c. Next in importance are the red and blue copper, which also come from the same productive neighbourhood; while, according to the Szechuen Topography, an authoritative work, gold in the ore is to be found at Yueh-sui t'ing, silver at Hui-li chou, iron at Yen-yuen hsien and three other places, and in the department generally lead, green jade, and other precious stones, silk, musk, China root, flint, and a kind of asbestus, from which a cloth is made called "ho pu," or fire cloth, which is cleansed by passing through the fire, while another variety is used in the neighbourhood for the wicks of lamps. The price of Yunnan white copper in Shanghai is

Tls. 50 per picul; red copper, from Tls. 18.50 to Tls. 20; yellow copper, Tls. 12.50.

On leaving Chau-tung the Mission again entered the hills, which appeared less fertile than those we had hitherto passed, the soil being a very thirsty red marl, through which water would soak as through a sieve. The country had been very much harried during the Mahommedan rebellion, the town of Lu-tien, a few miles from Chau-tung, having been captured and recaptured upwards of ten times, and the inhabitants, as is usual under the circumstances in China, having for the most part disappeared. The state of the remnant was almost indescribable. A Chinese Likin official living near the banks of the Yangtsze wrote asking for advice to Mr. Grosvenor, and stating "that so great was the wretchedness of the neighbourhood that the poor lived on husks, with scarcely a cloth to wrap around their loins, while grown up girls of sixteen years of age had no clothes whatever to wear. The fields remained unploughed, the mines unworked, the hills bereft of trees, and the water unapplied to irrigation." This condition of affairs in out-of-the-way districts may be easily understood, seeing that on the highways even the women were in rags, and occasionally without any trowsers. Prior to the rebellion the country was reported to have been well wooded, having Chinese pines on the hills, and white insect wax trees, pear, walnut, peach, and other fruit trees in the valleys. We saw little cultivation, except opium; coal was everywhere to be found in the hills, and in the neighbourhood is situated the Lo ma copper mine.

TUNGCHU FU.

On the evening of the 25th the Mission reachd the city of Tung-chuen fu, which was small, ruinous, and under-populated. Like all the other towns we saw in Yunnan, it was situated in a valley, a great part of which was a peat bog, which was used for fuel, an uncommon practice in China. This town was formerly a great centre for the mining trade, lead being found in its immediate vicinity, while, according to Chinese authorities, there are no less than six copper mines in the prefecture, and also zinc on the Kweichow border; there was also a silk trade here. From Tung-chuen fu to Yunnan fu we observed considerable quantities of opium, sugar, and wheat growing, with parcels of salt going both ways. The mountains were barren-looking and the valleys for the most part uncultivated. At a village called for its bleakness Lai t'ou po (scald-headed ridge), on a hill estimated by Mr. Baber to be about 8,000 feet above the sea level, having a dry marly soil, I obtained some specimens of the seeds cultivated at so high an elevation, which are forwarded herewith. From the plants known as Tsai tze and Hiu tsai tze, winter crops, an oil is made, used in cookery, giving out an unpleasant odour, as of a putrifying corpse. The chief winter crop is still opium, followed in May by a crop of paddy, watered by the monsoon rains. Owing to the difficulty of transport and the dearth of population amongst these mountains, rice is ridiculously cheap, and the natives said that a man could live there for less than seven cash (a halfpenny) a day Hitherto we have been informed that no cotton was now grown in this province, and so far we have seen no stalks. The only place passed by the Mission worthy of note was the town, or rather the ruins, of Hsun-tien. During the Ming dynasty it was a place of importance, having been surrounded with a brick wall during the reign of the Emperor Kia-tsing 1722-67, and made into the capital of a prefecture. It was formerly a seat of silk manufacture, and lead and copper mines are said to exist in the district, which likewise contains a black variety of the Lolo people, no specimen of whom, however, was, seen by the Mission.

YUNNAN FU.

On the 6th of March the Mission reached the city of Yunnan fu, which is situated at the head of a plain in a great measure occupied by the Yunnan lake. The town is of great antiquity, Chinese history recording that a director of public education was appointed here during the reign of the Emperor Changti A.D. 76-89. At the present day the atmosphere is not literary, the officials stating that the people were so unlettered that they were unable to obtain persons sufficiently educated to act as clerks in the Government offices. The city is upwards of three miles in circumference, and has six gates. Its southern face is well populated, but the northern half is chiefly composed of cultivated fields, a fine parade-ground, and a large swamp. Formerly there was a very extensive, populous suburb, extending for three miles outside the south gate, but it was wholly destroyed during the rebellion, and is only being slowly and in part rebuilt. The immense number of tombs covering the high ground in all directions for miles around the walls support the tesimony of the inhabitants that it was formerly a populous and busy centre of commerce. At the present time, the Salt Commissioner told us (salt here, as elsewhere in China, being a Government monopoly) that nine-tenths of the inhabitants had "run away," a mandarinic euphemism for "died," during the Mohammedan rebellion and subsequent plague; and that, consequently, there was no population to consume his salt. Nevertheless, the main streets were lined with shops and purchasers, including members, chiefly female, of the Lolo tribes; while a considerable traffic was going on along the stone-paved roads leading to Chau-tung fu, Kuei-yang fu, and Ta-li fu. In the shops were to be seen Russian broad-cloth at 3 m. 6 c. to 4 m. per foot (at the exchange of 5s. per tael = 1s. 7½d. to 2s.). Camlets were 1 m. 2 c. per foot; Dutch camlets 2 m. per foot; shirtings 2 t. 2 m. to 2 t. 4 m. per piece; chintz, Tls. 2 per piece; long ells, Tls. 10 per piece; cotton, Tls. 20 and upwards per picul, the retail price being 3 mace a catty; it comes entirely from Burmah, or almost so, as the Hupeh cotton could not be laid down at so low a price; even at Shanghai; cotton averages Tls. 11 a picul. Black pepper was sold at 18 t. 5 m. per picul. The price of rice averaged 9 mace, or 4s. 6d., per picul, and other grain at a proportionate rate. The high price, of course, only exists in the large cities. In remote valleys it has scarcely any money value. Opium was sold in cakes weighing 100 liang or 6 4-10 catties weight, for Tls. 13 to 14. Old opium of the same weight, from Tls. 17 to 18. There was also a variety of other foreign goods similar to those already mentioned as having been met with at Chau-tung fu.

As to native goods, there are, excluding the ordinary articles supplied by Chinese towns for local consumption, no less than thirty-eight kinds of medicine exported from this city, being brought down from the neighbouring mountains by the Lolos. The only one recognised was China root, which this province mainly supplies to the rest of the Empire; it resembles sarsaparilla, and is a favourite with the Chinese faculty. It is also used by Chinese dyers, previous to the applicati of any colour, for the purpose of preparing the cloth for the reception of blue dye.

The mission left Yunnan fu on the 26th of March, and the same day arrived at the district city of Gan-ning chow, a broken down, small town, having scarcely any house standing, and a limited ragged population. It is situated in a valley, and being formerly of importance on account of the salt wells in its vicinity, it was provided with a wall during the reign of the Ming Emperor Hungwu (1368—99.) On the 28th the Mission reached the district city of Lu-fung, situated as usual, in a valley. It first became of importance in the reign of the Emperor Kublai Khan, at the end of the thirteenth century, but it is now in ruins, having very few inhabitants. The country passed through was quite waste; the hills were covered with long grass, sprinkled with scent fir, with Chinese pines growing in favoured localities. There were no traces of either sheep or cattle on these hills, and no cultivation except at the bottoms of the valleys. We passed a considerable quantity of salt coming from Wu-ting fu, bound for the provincial capital, together with, in smaller quantities, josticks, sugar grass, figs, potash, and rhubarb, brought from the Burmese frontiers by members of the Shan tribes. At Kien-chow, in the sub-department of Wu-ting, are two salt wells, and in this neighbourhood the camphor tree formerly grew. On leaving this town we passed over a many-arched, handsome stone bridge, resembling Lü ko chiau, near Peking. It crosses an affluent of the Sang koi river. On the 81st the Mission reached Kuang-t'ung hsien, built in the reign of the Emperor Hungwu, of the Ming dynasty, situated in a valley, and more populous than most of the places we had lately passed through. The valley was well filled with cottages, but a great proportion of the paddy land was not broken up. The country traversed was, as usual, mountainous. The northern sides were often well wooded with pines, &c., but there was little cultivation, although no deficiency of water. We observed little passing traffic except Burmese cotton.

CHU HSIUNG FU.

On April 1 the Mission reached Chu-hsiung-fu, a walled city built in the reign of the Ming Emperor, Hungwu, and a little more than two miles in circumference. The general aspect of the country passed through was beautiful and impressing, while the houses were of a better description, having tiled roofs, &c. A considerable part of the paddy land was still not broken up, but there were fine winter crops of white poppy, wheat, peas, beans, &c. This was not the first place where we observed oak shrub on the hills, which, though common enough in northern China and Manchuria, is rare here, as well as any other shrub capable of affording food for game in the winter. This city formerly contained a comparatively large and wealthy population, who lived on the salt trade, there being fine wells in the neighbourhood. Also silver mines were once worked here. A Chinese official informed me that gold was found here also, but I could not obtain any confirmation of the statement. The Encyclopædia mentions that iron and lead are found here, also "sounding stone," which may possibly be the material which furnished the ancient Chinese Emperors with musical instruments.

The Chinese work published by M. Garnier refers to four copper mines in this department, one distant 100 miles to the north-east of the district city of Nan-gan, another eighty miles to the south-west, a third seventy miles to the south-west, and a fourth forty miles to the southward of the district city of Ting-yuen. Also four silver and one iron mine in the Nan-gan district. The people of this town appeared to be comparatively well-to-do, and as a natural consequence there were beggars, the inevitable accompaniment of wealth, in the streets. Many of these wretches were affected with leprosy, which, as is well known, is now prevalent in this province, in consequence of continuous exposure to rain and damp, in conjunction with want of proper food, clothing, lodging, and cleanliness. The only outward symptoms I observed were the ulceration and falling off of the toes and fingers. I saw neither tubercles on the face nor ulcerations on any other part of the body. Owing, probably, to long habituation on the part of the wretched survivors of the civil war, these lepers were not shunned, as is the case at Canton. While on this subject I may remark that since first reaching the gorges in Hupeh and eastern Szechuen I never observed a single case of elephantiasis, so common both with men and women in the Yangtsze plain. On the other hand goitre is regularly spread all over or nearly all over the country from the Yangtsze to Momein, apparently irrespective of the heights of the valleys above the sea level. It attacked people of all ages, from little children of two or three years old to men of fifty, and was universally attributed to the mountain water combined with the mountain wind.

TALI FU.

On the 11th April the Mission reached Ta-li-fu, after crossing a stream conveying the surplus waters of the Tali Lake, called Erh hai, to the Lantsan or Mekong or Camboy River. By the side of this stream stands the lower pass (Hsia kuan) of Ta-li. It is protected in front by the lake and river, in the rear by the Ta-li-fu range of mountains, and on the outer flank by the river, which has worn a deep channel through the range. At this spot a Chinese military officer of high rank, who was an actor, informed me that upwards of 3,000 old men, women and children were drowned, after surrendering themselves (hsiang) to the Chinese Imperial army on the surrender of the city by the insurgents, who called themselves Mahommedans, but who apparently had no great pretensions to that name, their doctrines being dissimilar and their bodies uncircumcised. The reason of the noyade, this officer informed me, was that so large a number had been already slaughtered that they feared to create a pestilence from inability no bury such an enormous number of bodies. As a matter of fact, the plague has been endemic in the city from that time until now.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

WE cannot but regard with great satisfaction the very creditable efforts which have been made by the foreign residents in Shanghai and elsewhere in China to afford relief to the unfortunate Chinese who have been the sufferers from the terrible famine which has so long raged in the North. From time to time we have called attention to the extent of this calamity, and the unceasing endeavours which were being made by missionaries and benevolent persons of all classes to afford aid to the distressed. Much good has no doubt been done by them, though unfortunately not sufficient to avert wide-spread calamity. It seems, indeed that the full extent of the disaster had not been appreciated by those in China in time to take as active measures as would otherwise have been adopted. The accounts came only in a scattered form, and in a way which made it difficult to arrive at any estimate of the degree to which the suffering might extend; but it appears by this mails reports to have gone far beyond anything which had at first been considered as likely or possible. Had there been any means of forming a more accurate estimate of the extent of the disaster there can be no doubt that as great efforts as were made towards the end would have been put in force at the commencement of the famine. As it is, however, the foreign residents in China who have aided in this benevolent work have the satisfaction of knowing that they have rescued many from misery and death; and it will be gratifying to them to know that their good deeds have been the subject of notice in the most influential and most widely-read paper in this country. We are confident that nothing will tend more to improve our relations with the Chinese than such acts of kindness; and we have no hesitation in expressing not only our appreciation of what has been done, but our conviction that much general good must result to our intercourse with China from this "touch of nature" which makes the whole world kin.

PROPOSED COIN FOR HONG KONG.

THE China papers to hand by the last mail publish the correspondence which has taken place between the Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong and the local Government with reference to the supply of a suitable coin for currency in the Colony. The Chamber have in fact revived a suggestion made some two years back, that it would be greatly to the interests of trade that the Home Government should take steps to supply a dollar coin equal in fineness and weight to the Mexican dollar for circulation in Hong Kong and other Colonies. Mr. W. KESWICK, the Chairman, endorses, on behalf of the body which he represents, the arguments which are set forth by the local bankers in favour of this measure, and which are certainly of a very weighty and forcible character. It is urged that a coin guaranteed by being issued from the British Mint would soon command confidence in China; that a great need of reliable silver coin is felt, the supply of Mexican dollars being very irregular; and that there is an inconsistency in England depending upon Mexico for a coin to be current in her own colonies. For these reasons the China bankers are of opinion that the abandonment of the Hong Kong Mint was probably a mistake; but as it would be hopeless at the present time to expect a repetition of that experiment, they confine themselves to suggesting that Her MAJESTY'S Government should coin in England dollars equal in fineness and weight with the Mexican dollars; and they further suggest that in the event of this being favourably considered the representatives of the Eastern Banks in London should be consulted as to designs and other details. It is needless to enforce the above arguments, as they are of so obviously sound a character that it is scarcely to be supposed they will be gainsaid. The present state of affairs simply proves the justness of the position we have always maintained as to the serious error which was made in giving up the Mint in Hong Kong. It was one of those rash acts of Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL, which so much detracted from the advantages which the colony would otherwise have obtained from his undoubted administrative powers. It is only to be hoped that it is yet not too late to repair the mischief, and that some such step as that which the Chamber of Commerce has suggested may be set on foot.

Admitting, therefore—as in face of the weighty financial and mercantile authority on the spot, indisputable—the advantage to trade in Hong Kong, China, Singapore, and other places in the East, of the introduction of a coin as proposed, we have to consider whether such a step would be advisable upon grounds of general policy; whether it would be desirable as respects the interests of this country upon financial considerations; and, lastly, whether, supposing that such a step appeared to be satisfactory on these grounds it would be practicable for the Mint either here or in India to supply a coin of the kind required. Upon the first point it is important to bear in mind that there is nothing which tends more to increase a nation's influence abroad than its coinage becoming familiar to the people; and our prestige in China would therefore be beyond doubt raised in a very legitimate and also a very important way if a coin such as that suggested came into circulation and became as well known as the Mexican dollar. In regard to the second question, it would certainly seem likely to be advantageous to this country that improved facilities should be available for passing on, in a form in which it would obtain currency, the silver from time to time redundant in the market; and the step would in all probability tend, at least to some extent, to diminish the "silver difficulty," which has been so much felt of late. With respect to the last question, but by no means the least namely, the practicability of the measure proposed, we believe that this must mainly depend upon details of calculation as to whether it would pay the Mints (or at least not be a source of loss to them) to supply the coins required. The whole question is at the present time already under the consideration of the Government; and this point will doubtless ere long be decided. Should it appear that the step proposed is practicable in respect to the actual production of the coin, there can, we think, be no question as to its desirability upon general grounds of policy and finance.

THE Church and State question in Ceylon has been discussed in the House of Commons, and the motion for "disestablishment" rejected by 147 to 121 votes. The number in favour of some alteration in the existing state of affairs is significant as to the opinion entertained on the subject; and in face of this, it may be hoped the Government will take some steps on its own motion. The amount of £14,000 now paid annually in subsidies is certainly very large, and some reduction might probably be made with advantage.

THE amended Order in Council for the working of the Supreme Court of China and Japan has been somewhat retarded, owing to the great pressure on the Foreign-office officials in connection with the "Eastern Question." In another column will be found an Order in Council just passed by Her MAJESTY at Windsor, extending the powers given in Art. 25 of the China and Japan Order of 1865.

WE beg to call the attention of our readers to a Report from Mr. ARTHUR DAVENPORT, who accompanied the Hon. THOS. GROSVENOR in his Expedition to the Provinces of Yunnan and Burmah. It is one of the most able and valuable reports ever written by a Consular officer. Nothing has transpired in reference to the Chefoo Convention or Mr. GROSVENOR'S report.

IT is stated by the Berlin correspondent of The Times that Prince KITA SHIRA KAWA JOSHI-HISA, a relation of the Emperor of JAPAN, who has been studying at the Prussian War Academy for some years, has been summoned home to assume the chief command of the army.

WITH reference to the rumour of the probable retirement of Sir THOMAS SIDGREAVES, the Chief Justice of the Straits Settlements, we understand that there is no foundation for the suggestion. It is the intention of Sir THOMAS to resume his post at the expiration of his leave.

ORDER IN COUNCIL FOR CHINA AND JAPAN.

At the Court at Windsor, the 30th day of April, 1877. Present: The Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas, by the China and Japan Order in Council, 1865, Her Majesty the Queen was pleased, by, and with the advice of Her Privy Council, to make provision for the exercise of Her Majesty's power and jurisdiction over Her Majesty's subjects resident in or resorting to China and Japan. And whereas in China and Japan additional ports may be from time to time opened to foreign trade, and it is expedient to provide for the exercise at those ports of Her Majesty's power and jurisdiction before the establishment there of Commissioned Consular Officers. Now, therefore, Her Majesty, by virtue of the powers in this behalf by the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, 1843 to 1875, and by the Act of the Session of the sixth and seventh years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter eighty, "for the better government of Her Majesty's subjects resorting to China," or otherwise, in Her vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

1. The provisions of Article 25 of the China and Japan Order in Council, 1865, and all provisions of that Order consequent thereon or relative thereto, shall extend and apply to every person (not holding a Consular Commission from Her Majesty) from time to time appointed by Her Majesty's Minister in China or Japan to be Acting Consul, and to be resident at a port in China or Japan, which is for the time being open to foreign trade, and at which no Commissioned Consular Officer of Her Majesty is resident.

2. For the purposes and within the meaning of the said Order, every person so appointed as an Acting Consul shall be deemed a Consular Officer, and the district for which he is appointed to act shall be deemed a Consular District, and the Court held by him shall be deemed a Provincial Court.

3. Words in this Order have the same meaning as in the said Order.

JAVA.

The Consular Reports on Trade for 1875, which have just been issued, contain that from Mr. Consul Fraser on the trade of Java. Referring to the war with Atchin, he says that during the year the Dutch army continued slowly to advance, but since the fall of the Kraton, on 23rd January, 1874, although there had been several encounters, no important action had to be recorded, with the exception of the capture of a fortified church, or missigit, called Longbattah, which had for some time obstructed the progress of the invading army, and was obstinately defended by the Atchinese. The policy of conciliation adopted at first by the general in command having failed to produce the desired friendly feelings on the part of the inhabitants of the villages immediately adjacent to the encampments had been replaced by a sterner mode of proceedings, by which all outbreaks and outrages are visited with severe punishment, thus compelling that part of the country within range of the guns to remain tranquil, and in some degree alleviating the hardships of the troops. This war had proved so much more protracted and expensive than was anticipated that it had in a measure retarded the progress of the colony, obliging the Government to practise a severe economy which renders it practically unable to expend money in developing the resources of the country, besides leading to its being threatened with the infliction of new taxes, income and furniture tax, which has raised a spirit of dissatisfaction.

Business throughout the year was even more unsatisfactory than in 1874. The failure of the rice crop coming after a short outturn in the previous year occasioned such a depression that prices of every staple gave way; this, combined with the high prices ruling at Manchester, rendered it a disastrous year for importers generally. The depression experienced at the close of 1874 extended over the earlier months of this year, and was further increased by the heavy rains retarding the paddy harvest, rendering it extremely difficult for the country dealers to dispose of their goods at paying rates. Shipments also being slightly above the average, and confidence in the dealers being shaken, through the several failures in the Chinese camp, further increased the difficulty experienced by importers in clearing their stocks, cotton goods in many cases during the last months of the year being sold even under the low quotations given. The impoverished state of the mass of the population holding out no prospect of an increased demand on the part of the consumers, rates maintained their downward tendency till the end of the year. Dutch staples participated in the general deterioration of trade.

No legislative measures of importance have been passed during the year, but the project for the imposition of the new taxes before referred to, the Bill for which has already been introduced into the Chambers in Holland, has raised much discussion here. The intelligence lately received of Mr. Mees having assumed the portfolio of Minister of the Colonies renders it very unlikely that the taxes referred to will be enforced, as it is believed that he is personally opposed to the measure. This country has also suffered from the depreciation of the silver currency, but apparently not so heavily as British India, the Java rupee being worth, on the average during the year, 1s. 7d., or a 1d. below its par value; had the demand for bills been more active, it is probable, however, it would not have maintained this rate. The internal condition of the colony has undergone no change since my last report, the native population remaining tranquil, although much distressed by the repeated failures of their rice crop. The country has been severely visited by the dreadful scourge, cholera, the virulence of its ravages having exceeded any former visitation for several years.

RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS.

A project has been entertained by the Government to connect Batavia with Bandong, and Sourabaya with Passaroean and Malang, by lines of railway, and surveys of the peoposed routes having taken place.

The existing railways connecting Batavia with Buitenzorg, and Samarang with the Worstenlanden, have worked satisfactorily, carrying merchandise and passengers at moderate rates. Their receipts have been as follows:—Samarang—total number of passengers 794,775, equal fl.475,506 15c.; merchandise and baggage 110,571 tons, equal fl.1,217,971 15c.; Batavia—total number of passengers 610,371, equal fl.282,337 4c.; merchandise and baggage 159,626 tons, equal fl.141,241 63c., to the beginning of the year 1875, during which year the traffic in passengers and merchandise has largely increased.

The lines connecting Java with the various ports of the world, China, Australia, Europe, and America have worked satisfactorily with a few interruptions, the most frequent and injurious to trade being the interruption of the line to Singapore. The charges are not excessive, and as a rule the messages are correctly delivered. Inland, the Government are gradually extending the system, bringing the chief produce districts into direct communication with the centres of trade. The receipts on the Government lines have increased during the year 1874-75 by fl.4,600. Trade in the island has been materially benefited by the facilities of communication, by telegraph and steam, now existing with the chief centres of commerce in the world, immediate advantage being taken of the fluctuations of the home and foreign markets.

STEAM NAVIGATION.

The Netherlands Indian Steam Navigation Company still monopolises the coastward and Sumatra traffic, as well as the trade with the several islands of the Archipelago; its fleet consists of sixteen vessels, measuring 14,433 tons. The rate of freight is moderate, and the boats of the company well and regularly worked. The direct steam communication between Java and Europe at the commencement of the year was in the hands of six companies, but the very unsatisfactory results from several voyages, owing to the low freight obtainable, tonnage being in abundance and produce comparatively scarce, caused the owners of the several vessels to withdraw them from this trade, one company, the Java line, incorporating itself with the old-established Netherlands Steamboat Company, while the Star Ball line boats have ceased running. The lines at present connecting Java with Europe are Netherlands Steamboat Company's vessels 12, tonnage 33,500; Rotterdam Lloyd's vessels 4, tonnage 10,600.

THE TRADE OF LABUAN.

In his explanatory remarks on the Blue-book of Labuan for 1875, which has now been issued, Acting-Governor Low states that the total imports into the Colony during the year were valued at £119,362; of these there came from Singapore £67,105, and from the coast of Borneo £52,257. The exports were in all £114,532, of which £63,229 went to Singapore, and the remainder to Borneo. The increase in the value of the imports in the year was £29,385, and that of the exports £15,228. The improvement in the trade is considered to be due to some extent to the liberal policy of Sir Henry Bulwer, in relieving commerce from some obstructions which had been injurious to it, and partly also to the introduction of a plentiful supply of copper coinage, which is replacing on the coast of Borneo the cumbrous forms of metallic currency formerly in use. The trade of the Colony and of Bruni was chiefly carried on by a steam-vessel, the establishment of which is due to the persistent efforts of the late Governor. It has turned out a profitable speculation and a great convenience in many ways, though the monopoly it gives to its proprietor is beginning to be felt as too oppressive, and measures are in contemplation which it is hoped will result in a removal of the grievance. Mr. Low is unable to report anything satisfactory of the coal mines, the year under review having presented nothing but a continuous succession of disasters. In regard to education, he states that the Labuan National Free School—another of the many benefits for which the Colony is indebted to Sir Henry Bulwer—was tolerably well attended during the year, the average number of scholars for the whole year being 21·91, against 13·5 in the previous year. The long-continued prevalence of cholera appears to have had a very prejudical effect on trade; that in sago—the most important staple of the Colony—had at one time increased considerably beyond any previous experience, but towards the close of the year it fell off from this cause, and continued depressed at the date of the report.

Literature, Science, &c.

The arrangements for the Caxton celebration have been one of the chief subjects of discussion in literary circles. It has been decided to hold this Loan Collection in the western galleries at South Kensington, but it is objected that this will have the effect of excluding many apprentices and workmen from visiting it. The Archbishop of Canterbury will contribute some valuable treasures from the library in Lambeth Palace. The first book ever produced in England was printed by William Caxton, in the Almonry at Westminster, in the year 1477, and was entitled "The Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers." This pioneer of English literature is necessarily a book which has the greatest interest for all Englishmen who to-day enjoy the blessings which have come down to them from the printing press during the last four centuries. A copy of the original is extremely rare and valuable, fetching when sold many hundreds of pounds. It is a small folio volume very beautifully printed on ash-grey paper, with red initial letters, and is remarkable for its evenness of colour and clearness of type. There is a fine copy of the "Dictes" in the British Museum, and it is understood that Mr. Elliot Stock is engaged in producing a facsimile of it, by the permission of the trustees of that institution, which will put this, the earliest work of the English printing press, before the readers of the present day. A new novel, entitled "Mrs. Arthur," by Mrs. Oliphant, will be published this month by Messrs. Hurst and Blackett. Messrs. Macmillan have just issued a work entitled "New Commentaries on the Laws of England," by Jas. Paterson, M.A., Barrister-at-Law. It is intended to give the information formerly looked for in Blackstone in a modernised and practical shape. Dean Stanley contributes a very important article entitled, "The Hopes of Theology," to Macmillan's Magazine for this month. Amongst the curiosities of literature there is one advertised which should take the first rank, the Journal des Aveugles, to be published at Geneva. Not only is it for the blind, but the editor, compositors, pressmen, and others in the office are blind. This, it is presumed, includes the publishers. The library of the late Bishop Thirlwall has been disposed of by public auction; the sale extended over six days. The volumes numbered about ten thousand, and they realised upwards of £1,200. It was curious that of all these books only one contained the bishop's autograph.

The Friend of China (organ of the Anti-Opium Society) for this month states that it has received a Chinese work against the use of opium, which extends to the length of four volumes of printed matter, which must have cost a considerable amount of money. The fact is considered by itself to indicate that the Chinese Anti-Opiumists in number, zeal, and resources are not contemptible. Of these volumes the first two are entitled "Miscellaneous Publications of the Canton Association for the Promotion of Abstinence;" and the remaining two, "Selected Discourses upon the Suppression of Opium-smoking by China and Foreign Countries combined." These selected discourses are, it is stated, a few of the thousand essays which have been written in response to the offer of prizes by the Canton Anti-Opium Societies.

Mr. J. Thomson (formerly of China) is continuing his Street Life in London, published by Sampson Low and Co. The subjects of the May number are cane chair menders, dealers in fancy ware, and the "Temperance Sweep."

The Japan Hong List and Directory for 1877, for which Mr. F. Algar, 8, Clement's-lane, is agent, gives the usual carefully compiled list of resident firms, clubs, public institutions, &c., in Yokohama, Tokio, Hiogo, Osaka, &c.

Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. have in the press a second edition of M. Gaston Tissandier's "History and Handbook of Photography," edited by J. Thomson, F.R.G.S. This edition will be revised by the editor, and a new chapter, giving a more detailed account of the part belonging to Englishmen in the discoveries and improvements in Photography, will be added.

The Academy says:—We hear that Mr. Frank Dillon has returned from Japan with a number of sketches and other works in water-colour, of new and rare interest. Mr. Dillon, who has always been a good deal given to distant travel, and who, among English artists, may be said to have been almost the first to discover the resources of Egypt for artistic treatment, has now, it appears, been not less fortunate in his further explorations. We hear that it is proposed to exhibit this collection of the landscape views of Japan from Mr. Dillon's pencil, in the rooms of an eminent West-end picture-dealer, where both subject and treatment will, even in the midst of a busy season, secure interest.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Asiatic Society on April 16, Sir E. Colebrooke, Bart., President, in the chair, Mr. J. W. Redhouse read a paper, in which he suggested the identity of the "zodiacal light" with the phenomenon called the "Wolf's Tail" and the "False Dawn" in Arabic, Persian, and Turkish; which are described by Orientals as being seen in the eastern sky, in the shape of a tall, slender pillar of faint light, a short time before the appearance of the "true dawn" or daybreak.

At the Society of Antiquaries on April 19, F. Ouvry, Esq., President in the chair, Mr. J. Malcolm exhibited a bronze socket celt with loop, found on his estates in the parish of North Knapdale, Argyllshire. Mr. A. W. Franks exhibited two bronze objects recently dredged up in the Thames—a socket celt, quadrangular in section, found last month near Kingston-on-Thames, and a bronze spear-head, with a deep groove on each side of it, found at Thames Ditton, Surrey, in the present month. Mr. F. Peake exhibited a drawing of a mosaic pavement recently uncovered at Medburn, Leicestershire.

At the anniversary meeting of the Royal Society of Literature, on April 25, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the year:—President, H.R.H. the Prince Leopold; Vice-Presidents, the Duke of Devonshire, the Very Rev. the Dean of Westminster, Major-General Sir H. C. Rawlinson, H. Fox Talbot, Sir P. de Colquhoun, Sir C. Nicholson, Bart., Lieut.-General Sir C. Dickson, the Rev. C. Babington, C. Clark (Treasurer), and C. M. Ingleby; Council, W. A. T. Amhurst, W. de Gray Birch (Hon. Librarian), J. W. Bone, E. W. Brabrook, C. H. E. Carmichael, Rev. Dr. Dicksee, C. Goolden (Foreign Secretary), T. B. Green, E. G. Highton, W. Knighton, C. H. Long, G. W. Moon, J. A. Rose, H. T. Steward, W. S. W. Vaux (Secretary), H. W. Willoughby.

The Council of the Royal Society have made their selection of fifteen from among the fifty-seven aspirants for the distinction F.R.S., who have entered their names during the present session.

The Council of the Royal Microscopical Society have resolved to institute a lecture in memory of the late Professor John Quekett, to be delivered from time to time by eminent microscopists, to whom will be presented the Quekett Medal provided out of the Medal Fund collected some years since. The first of these lectures was delivered on May 2, by Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., the subject being "On some Points in the Anatomy of Ants."

Naval and Military.

The Mediterranean Squadron, under the command of Vice-Admiral Hornby, consisting of the ironclads Alexandra, Monarch, Swiftsure, Devastation, and Hotspur, arrived at Corfu on the 1st inst., where, we understand, they will remain until the 6th, and on being reinforced by the Raleigh, now at Salonica, will proceed eastward to the Piræus to await orders. The Rupert, now undergoing repairs at Malta, will probably soon join the squadron, and the Salamis, paddle despatch vessel, tender to the Channel Squadron, has received orders to leave to-day for the Mediterranean as an additional despatch vessel at the disposal of the Admiral Commander-in-Chief of the squadron. The dockyard authorities at Portsmouth have received instructions to use all possible expedition in refitting and completing the Minotaur, Hercules, Triumph, Active, and Inconstant for sea. The Thunderer, double turret-ship, and the Boadicea, unarmoured corvette, are ready for the pendant, and could be despatched to sea at once. Orders have been received both at Portsmouth and Devonport for the dockyard officials to report the length of time which would be required to prepare for sea the various ships in the several divisions of the steam reserve, and the new vessels which are completing their fittings at those ports. They are to press forward with all possible despatch the necessary works upon both commissioned and non-commissioned vessels in hand, and to direct their sole attention to this matter, leaving all works of a secondary nature, such as carving, embellishing, and fitting up of officers' cabins for future completion.

Mr. John Thomson, the Senior Paymaster in Chief of the Royal Navy, died a few days since. This veteran officer was appointed to the Redpole, as paymaster and purser, in 1812, in which ship he served until 1815. He afterwards served in the Brazils and South America, in the Blossom, 26, from 1819 till 1824; in the Lightning, 18, also in South America, from 1829 till 1831; in the Eagle, on the North American and West Indian station, from 1844 until September, 1846, and from the latter date until paid off, in 1849, in the Vernon, flagship in the East Indies. He was appointed to the Excellent, gunnery ship at Portsmouth, in 1852, from which ship he was promoted to paymaster-in-chief 1856. He obtained the Greenwich Hospital pension March 29, 1866. In the summer of 1848, while on duty in Hong Kong harbour, he sustained a severe sunstroke, which rendered him insensible for twenty-eight hours, and from which he only recovered with the total loss of sight of the right eye.

The Admiralty authorities have sent orders to the Clyde for the speedy completion of all the war vessels at present in construction. These are the Nelson and the Northampton, launched in November last, ironclad corvettes, of 7,323 tons, and are to be armed with four 18-ton, eight 12-ton, and six torpedo guns. Messrs. John Elder and Co. have six steel corvettes on the stocks, each intended for store-carrying purposes; their several armaments will consist of fourteen guns. Messrs. J. and G. Thomson, Dalmuir, are also building two gunboats, both of which are in a forward state. Additional hands have been engaged on all these vessels, and the men are working two and three hours extra every day in order to expedite operations.

Rear-Admiral John Corbett, C.B., the newly-appointed Commander-in-Chief in the East Indies, left Southampton, per P. and O. steamer Cathay, on the 26th ult. for Bombay, to assume his command. The Admiral was accompanied by his secretary, Mr. W. Perry, paymaster R.N., and by Lieutenant Thomas Holmes, his flag-lieutenant. Capt. Bowden-Smith, flag-captain, will follow the Admiral a few weeks hence.

Letters have been received from Rear-Admiral Lambert, in command of the Detached Squadron. The squadron left Ascension on the 1st of April, and reached St. Vincent on the 15th. The squadron would leave on the 19th of April for Devonport, and is due about the 17th inst.

Holt's steamer Patroclus arrived at Portsmouth on the 28th ult. from Hong Kong, and landed Major Bridger (Royal Artillery), Mrs. Bridger, and child, Deputy-Commissary Arder, Assistant-Commissary W. Gamnell, Deputy Paymaster C. B. Griffiths and Mrs. Griffiths, 34 men 2nd Brigade Royal Artillery, 22 invalids of the Royal Artillery and 28th Regiment.

Official advices received at the Admiralty from the China Station state that Vice-Admiral Ryder would leave Hong Kong, in the Audacious, with the Vigilant, for Nagasaki, on March 15. The Charybdis, Modeste, Sylvia, Nassau, and Hart are ordered to be at Hong Kong by May 6, to meet the Tamar with their fresh crews on board.

The Distinguished Service Reward left vacant by the appointment of Lieutenant-General C. A. Edwards, C.B., to a regimental Colonelcy, has been given to Major-General W. L. Ingall, C.B. General Ingall served in the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46 and also in the Crimea.

Under instructions from the Treasury, the rate at which the dollar is to be paid to the Army, Navy, and Consular Service in China, from April 1, 1877, for six months, has been fixed at 3s. 9d.

On the 30th ult. the first of two gunboats, of 400 tons, which are being built by Messrs. Thomson, Clydebank, for the Government, was launched. It is named the Firebrand.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, MAY 1.

The long-expected Declaration of War between Russia and the Porte met here with full satisfaction, everyone being of opinion that the long and destructive slackness in all branches of business now would be at an end. The business at the Exchange-hall during the first days after the event, indeed, was very lively, but this was not of long duration, and already at the end of last week a reaction took place, which is the more complainable, as it plainly proves that the influence hitherto attributed to the Oriental disturbances upon business in general appears to have been very much overrated, and that the reasons for the rapidly-increasing pauperism and worklessness is to be sought elsewhere. The short speech made by Count Moltke in Parliament on April 24, in which the great tactician asserted the necessity of granting the means for the creation of 105 new captain-charges for the army, did not send to quiet the minds of the tradesmen, the more so as the Count especially assented that he also wished a long peace, but that such a one was not to be hoped for at such a time as the present, and that perhaps the time was not far when every Government would have to exert all its power to secure its existence. This expression, made by such a capacity as the Field-Marshal, certainly was regarded as an oracle, and although afterwards modified and reduced upon its real meaning by Dr. Lasker, could not fail to raise deep reflections in the minds of all honest people.

The circumstances up the Baltic, in regard to shipping, at present are still very unpromising. The principal ports of Russia, such as Riga, Reval, Cronstadt, &c., are still blocked by barriers of ice, and the re-opening of shipping will still last some time. And yet the re-opening this spring is far more anxiously waited for as at other times; there seems to be a feeling prevalent in the Russian Baltic provinces that ere long their ports very likely might be blockaded, not by ice but by ironclads, and exporters, therefore, will exert all possible means to get as much of their staples shipped as possible, as soon as the ports are again accessible. Freight, therefore, undoubtedly will be very good from these directions, and even at Koenigsberg (Prussia) rates have considerably bettered since the declaration of war.

A very interesting document was published on Saturday last, viz., the report of the Norddeutsche Lloyd at Bremen. According to it a dividend cannot be paid for the past year, as the net profits in 1876, to the amount of m.1,869,042, have found application for rebates and deductions of the property of the establishment. The most remarkable point in the report is the circumstance that the newly-established line between Bremen and South American ports has not worked with a profit. You will remember that this new line has only been established since the beginning of 1876 to rivalise with our Hamburg South American Steamship Company, and if the directors of the Lloyd are hoping for the running year a better result the perhaps more favourable prospects which are the base of such a hope will also be a benefit for our Hamburg establishment. The trading between Bremen and London shows an improvement from m.999,293 in 1875 to m.1,062,103 in 1876; the trading between Bremen and Hull has decreased from m.657,853 in 1875 to 572,379 in 1876.

I referred in my last to a motion brought in by Mr. Loewe, member of the Reichstag, according to which an excise of m.0.75 per cwt. should be levied by rather all imported iron and iron-wares with the exception of machinery. In addition to this, the Imperial Government has brought in a similar motion, proposing a duty of the same extent (m.0.75) from iron and articles made thereof, as compensation of the French acquits à caution. The debates in the Reichstag concerning these motions have lasted three days, and on Friday last has been passed a resolution with 211 votes against 111, that is with a majority of 100 votes, according to which the abolition of iron duties in Germany remains in permanence. This resolution has had an encouraging effect for all freetraders, and the more as there is shown by it as all future protectionate inclinations of our leading government, people are not probable to find the necessary support by the present Reichstag, and also rather not by a future one, as the elements of this assembling will at all times be the same.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company at Copenhagen has held its annual meeting, Mr. Tietgen chairman. It appears that the company during the past year has done well, as the income increased on both lines; the European line had an increase of f.2,296.646, for 684,985 telegrams (against, respectively, f.2,256,675 and 691,790 telegrams in 1875); and the Asiatic line had a total of fully f.2,889,700 for 110,007 telegrams (against, respectively, f.1,899,230 and 86,063 telegrams). The Asiatic line profited much by the long interruption of the English lines, whereas the European one suffered under the general slackness of business. The plan adopted on the Asiatic line, to admit the telegraphing of single words, instead of only allowing despatches of twenty words each, has proved successful; at present every word pays f.10, against f.150 formerly paid for a telegram up to twenty words. The station in France will be removed from Calais to Paris. The construction of the land line in China has been interrupted, but a special institute of the company is now instructing young Chinese in the science of telegraphing, and the works in China will soon be taken up again. The first four months of the present year have yielded an income sufficient to pay the expenses for the whole year, and a super-dividend of five crowns (about six shillings) is to be distributed; 340,565 crowns are transferred upon 1877. One of the Asiatic cables of the company has been sequestered by the Russian Government, and the chairman was of opinion that the company will benefit by the Russian-Turkish War.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The declaration of war between Russia and Turkey has had the anticipated effect on our Produce Markets. Caution prevails, and the tendency is a dull one. Money remains abundant.

RICE.—Inferior qualities remain in good demand, notwithstanding the about m.0.25 higher quotations, and holders are more or less reluctant. Medium and fine lots are equally sought for. Of raw quality each 25,000 bags arrived per steamers Egeria and Atalanta, from Rangoon, but these parcels have already been disposed of before arrival.

TEA is quiet, and without transactions of importance.

COTTON.—Buyers are holding aloof, and values are in favour of them. Only several parcels of American provenience changed owners.

SPICES.—Nutmegs, prime quality, are quoted m.5.60 to 6.20; quotation for prime quality of Mace m.4.70 to 4.90 per kilo. Ginger quiet; Bengal m.25½ to 26; Cochin m.61 to 81. Cloves in good demand; m.141 to 142 per 50 kilo. Pepper dull; Singapore m.38 to 38¼; Penang m.36 to 36¼; White m.68 to 80 per 50 kilo. Exchange, London, 3 months, m.20.37 to 20.31 per £.

SHIPPING.

During the first part of the past fortnight the arrivals and departures fell rather short, in consideration of the present time of the year, but during the last week have taken up again. Of arrivals from the Far East are only to be noted the two steamers Atalanta and Egeria, from Rangoon, with rice, &c. (both belonging to the Deutsche Dampfschiffs-Rhederei). Of departures we can name the Vesta, Schoemer, for Manila; Hermann, Haack, for Tientsin; and Ino, Mahr, for Bangkok. On the berth are—Bellona (str.), to leave to-day, and Atalanta (str.), to leave on the 10th; Anna, Moennich, for Singapore; Gerhardine, Hansen, for Singapore and Penang; Woodville, Nelson, for Hong Kong; Meteor, Dinckelberg, and Marco Polo, Jaeger, both for same destination; Adolph, Hupfer, for Shanghai; and Johan Wieghorst, Herjenga, for Japan.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

Business was in suspense during the beginning of last week, pending the declaration of war between Russia and Turkey; afterwards a great buoyancy took place, which, during the last days, was followed by a dullness on our Stock Exchange. HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, MAY 2.

The Members of the Second Chamber are at present occupying themselves with local affairs of little or no political interest. They are on the eve of again leaving the Hague, not to meet before the closing of the Session. There is now no chance of dealing with the Lower-Class Instruction Bill before the elections take place. The Liberal party seems to be quite content, or at least resigned to this volte face of the Minister, who was in a hurry to lay the said Bill before the members, but who since became markedly slow. I need not add that the anti-revolutionary party is very angry at this behaviour of Mr. Heemskerk Not only this Instruction Bill will belong to the murdered innocents, but most probably also that about the reorganisation of the Military Academy, because the Commission of the Section Reporters was of opinion that another deliberation with the Minister of War was necessary. The Second Chamber appointed Messrs. De Jong, Wybenga, Schepel, Begram and De Jonge as members for the commission to make inquirements about the pulmonary disease which prevails amongst our cattle stock. In the course of last week the M.P.s carried the Bill to increase the pensions of the officers by 52 against 7 votes. This proposal stipulates that a lieutenant-general will be pensioned with f.3,000 ; a major-general f.2,700 ; a colonel with f.2,100 ; a lieutenant-colonel with f.1,800 ; a major f.1,600 ; a captain f.1,400 ; a first lieutenant f. 900 ; a second lieutenant f. 800. A good deal was said on behalf of the wish to make the law retrospective, in order that the officers serving in our East Indian Army might be influenced by it, but though most reasonable motives were advanced, the amendment was rejected with 36 against 23 votes.

In several districts candidates are brought forward for the general elections, which must take place in the month of June next. I would be inclined to think that amongst the new ones Mr. G. J. Grathius has some chance.

For some days the police have been on the track of a complot of Germans, who in different places have issued false Muntbiljetten of f.10. These biljets all bear the date of Nov. 1, 1871. The police caught three of these distributors, upon whom they found about 400 pieces. It is indeed much to be feared that they are already largely spread, so that it is every one's duty to be most cautious.

Het Vaderland of to day says that also false bank notes are in circulation. Yesterday some Germans were taken when endeavouring to change a billet of f.200.

H.M. has acknowledged and approved the nomination of Mr. B. Garnier as Consul of France at Batavia.

The hundredth birthday of the "School for Scandal," by Sheridan, will be celebrated in the Hague by a representation of this beautiful play.

Within a few days an important book will be published about Atjeh, by Mr. Gualt Kolff, at Leyden. Its author is Mr. J. A. Kruyt, naval officer of administration, who was stationed two years in that part of the world.

Yesterday the new tariff for the postal communication between our country and our colonies in East and West came into operation. It states that a single letter of 15 gram. will cost, prepaid, 25c., and when not prepaid 40c.; post cards can be forwarded for 12½c.; printed works, samples, &c., are to be prepaid with 7½c. for every 50 gram. of a part of it. When the letters are sent by Dutch steamers the single ones of 15 gram. are to be prepaid with 20c.; whilst for printed works 5c. are to be paid for every 50 gram.

I regret that I have to report the death of Jhr. Dr. F. A. Hartsen, well known in Java. He died at Cannes (Alpes Maritimes). Since his marriage with an English lady he had become a member of the Roman Catholic Church. It is much deplored that Mr. Dr. A. de Jager, an eminent philologist, died at Rotterdam, at the age of seventy-one years. I hear that the Minister of the Department of Justice is seriously ill.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The transactions in our market for Colonial Produce have been most satisfactory. Considerable business has been done in some articles, and prices, as a rule, have risen. The tone of the market at the close is very good.

COFFEE.—The market closes firm, and for several numbers out of the last Company's sale a good demand prevails. The transactions are not, however, of much importance, because holders decline to operate at the current quotations. Several small parcels, however, changed hands. The unsold stock of the Dutch Trading Company is 349,960 bales.

TEA.—Nothing to report. On May 16 will be sold at Rotterdam 64⁰/4, 4,236/12 chests Congou, 1,719/12 chests Souchong, and 74/4 chests Pecko.

RAW SUGAR has made a further advance in price, so that for some numbers the January value is obtainable.

TOBACCO has met with a good demand. Several small lots have been sold, and have realised very high prices. The stock in the first hands includes 11,897 bs. Java, 8,471 bs. Sumatra, and 3,000 bags East India.

COTTON.—The market is very dull.

SPICES of every kind are very firm, but at the same time quiet.

RICE (uncleaned) has met with a good demand, and a good business is going on. Our home stock is, however, very small. Java Rice (cleaned) has also met with a good demand.

RATTANS.—140 pieces ex Jonge Cornelis have been sold.

GUM DAMAR.—About 200 chests ex Holland have changed hands.

INDIGO.—The market is very quiet. The trade is inspecting the parcels which will be offered for sale on the 8th of May.

TIN remains unaltered ; Banca is quoted nominally at f.42½, and Billiton at f.41½.

HIDES.—Some lots have changed hands at advancing prices.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—April 25, at Ymuiden, from Batavia, William Melhuish ; at Nieuwe Diep, from Samarang, Veritas ; 26, at Ymuiden, from Passarpeang, Aurora ; 28, at Texel, from Rangoon, Madeline.

DEPARTURES.—April 29, from Ymuiden, for Sourabaya, Cornelia ; May 1, from Ymuiden, for Samarang, Vryheid.

THE FAMINE IN NORTHERN CHINA.

(THE TIMES.)

The famine which rages in the North of China is a disaster of woful magnitude. It extends over a very wide region of the Empire, it is carrying off the population daily by thousands, and there is no near hope that its ravages will soon be over. Through the north and east of the country, from the near neighbourhood of the Imperial city and from the shores of the Yellow Sea, beyond the line of the great wall which shuts off China from the Western world outside, the terrible visitation extends. The Government is making the semblance of an effort to relieve the widespread misery ; but the means it employs are wholly inadequate. An expression of verbal sympathy, a grant of money which allows about a farthing a day for the relief of each case of distress, and some well-meant but mistaken edicts, which have had the effect simply of making matters worse than before, are the measure of the assistance which the Chinese rulers can bestow. Meanwhile, there is no remedy to be found, except in the readiness of the people to do anything, and to submit to anything that will furnish them with the bare means of preserving life, and in the willing but insufficient relief fund which is subscribed among the foreigners resident in China, and distributed by the Protestant missionaries in the North. The cause of the famine is the same as of that from which India is now suffering. The crops of last summer were, we are told, almost entirely destroyed by drought, and the peasantry have now come to an end of their slender reserves of grain, and have nothing left on which they can fall back for support. China is a country in which at the best of times the population presses very closely upon the means of subsistence. There are no waste stores anywhere. Everything is already turned to account, and when the necessity comes there is little room for any further saving or reduction. Land and water are alike taxed to the uttermost to furnish food and dwelling-space for the teeming multitudes which cover them. The Chinese are hard workers, contented with slender fare, and able to put up comfortably with a general scale of living which would be simply intolerable to Englishmen. These qualities and habits, which turn to their advantage abroad when they are brought into competition with other races, are a source of danger to them at home. The Chinese can undersell the Irish immigrant and the native "white trash" in the distant labour market of California. They cannot be equally sure that they will obtain the poor pittance with which they will be satisfied in China. In ordinary seasons they can pull through well enough, and can thrive and think themselves well off on the slender material supplies with which they have learnt to be content. But when the pinch comes, as come it must sometimes, when the parched earth will no longer yield its accustomed increase, or when the store of food for any reason begins to fail, the suffering is speedy and severe. It is a question then, not of the surrender of luxuries which can at any rate be spared, but of the want of bare necessities which it is impossible to forego and to live. To the great Eastern hive, thickly swarming with its uncounted millions of inhabitants, the chance of famine is never far distant, and the worst reality of famine arrives very easily. It is present among them now, and it is fearful to think of the intense and widespread misery which it will bring with it before it has run its course. The numbers of the dead, it is clear, must be already reckoned by millions, but we can hazard no conjecture as to the total which will have been reached before the return of summer. It is natural to contrast the present Indian Famine and the successful measures which have been adopted by the Indian Government for relieving it, with the far more fatal Chinese Famine and the utter inadequacy of the assistance from the Chinese Government or from any other quarter. The reality is almost ridiculous when we set it side by side with the high-sounding pretensions in which the Chinese Government persistently indulges, and the vast promises which are separated from the performance by so immeasurable a gulf. The Imperial Order runs that not a single Chinese subject is to be left in a state of destitution. We have already seen sufficiently the degree of effect which has been given to this invitation to a Barmecide feast. The task, however, which the Government has thus noisily assumed and declined to execute must be admitted to be no easy one. The combined resources of a large Empire would, no doubt, furnish the means of supporting one of the Provinces, but the outlay would be enormous, and we doubt, moreover, whether it would be willingly contributed by the rest. An exposure to occasional famine seems, indeed, to be the too certain fate of all but highly civilised communities. A prolonged winter and the failure of fresh supplies of food from hunting or fishing tell at once and with fatal force upon a tribe of savages. They are as helpless against it as the birds or beasts which suffer with them. The Chinese, of course, are far above this state. They are not savages, but neither are they highly civilised. They have not the machinery to hand which would make their whole strength available at each point, and, so to say, press the past into the service of the present, nor have they the will to use it if they had got it. Their condition thus far is not unlike that of Europe in the early middle ages, with its constantly recurring periods of famine, each suffered to run its course and work out at length its own terrible cure. We are glad to think that the foreigners who have had such difficulties in forcing their way into the country have seized the occasion to prove the kind of benefits which may be expected from their presence. It is but little that Mr. Richard and his fellow labourers can accomplish, but we learn with pleasure that it is by men of our own race and creed that the benevolent work has been taken in hand most heartily.

Mr. Joseph Tritton, treasurer of the Baptist Missionary Society, referring to the above article, forwards extracts from letters received by the last mail from Mr. Richard, of Chefoo, addressed to the secretaries of the society, and informs us that a telegram has been sent to Mr. Richard authorising him to draw £250 towards immediate relief. Mr. Tritton adds that he shall be glad to receive contributions and forward them, without delay, to the society's missionaries on the spot. Mr. Richard writes from Chingchowfoo, under date March 1:—"The famine is still very severe. News has got abroad that I receive children, and yesterday some came thirty miles in order to have their children taken charge of for two or three months. The funds at my disposal, I am sorry to say, only enable me to receive about 200 children as yet. People of all ages die of actual starvation by thousands. This is no exaggeration. The famine extends over a district which includes at least 5,000 villages, and in these, taken together, I am certainly within the mark in saying that 500 die daily, perhaps 1,000 may be within it. A few days ago I traversed the worst part. It is most heartrending. Can anything be done immediately at home? Friends in Chefoo have sent me $500. Shanghai and other places I have not heard from yet. The first steamer of the Spring is expected north to-day; perhaps $1,000 more will be made up. Funds will save lives on to the end of May. It will be only charity after that. If you can do anything, telegraph." Under date March 5 Mr. Richard says:—"I draw another £50 to-day, making in all £250. If I die before the year is out, let my property here make up the deficiency, so long as I have anything to mortgage. I cannot abide the sight of people dying about me without giving them relief. Thousands upon thousands have perished already. Houses are pulled down in every village to sell the timber and thatch in order to get food. Those who can get husks and dry leaves ordinarily used for fuel are considered well off. Most of the poor young girls have been sold; old men, middle aged, young men, and children die daily of sheer starvation, and others freeze. The dead cannot get a burial; they are too many, and none can afford the expense; so they are cast daily into large pits. Terrible!" Mr. Jones, missionary at Chefoo, writes under date March 12:—"The Chinese merchants have given $200 for the famine fund—a large thing for them, but it must open their eyes to see the 'hated foreigners' taking the active and chief part in the relief. One of the native merchants here remarked the same thing to me to-day. It is literally fearful to see men half naked, no trousers, a clouded sky, a north-west wind and the thermometer in the twenties, no cap, no shirt, something called a coat round them, and it in rags, and the men worn down with months of gruel food."

Messrs. John Bourne and Co. write from 66, Mark-lane that they are sending a good deal of machinery to Shantung, the province in China desolated by the famine, and are willing to take charge of subscriptions from this country to relieve the distress.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

During the past week the Envoys have paid a visit to one of our great charitable institutions, namely, the Orphan Working School, Haverstock-hill, on the occasion of a lecture by Mr. G. S. Measom, a member of the committee, on behalf of the children's summer treat fund, at which Sir Charles Reed, chairman of the London School Board, presided. They were conducted through the various rooms, dormitories, &c., of this excellent institution, which with its junior department at Hornseyrise (the Alexandra Orphanage) provides a home and education for 540 boys and girls. They expressed themselves greatly pleased with what they saw. They remained throughout the lecture, which was on the subject of Mr. Measom's experiences in Rome in 1875, illustrated by dissolving views. At the lecture, which was largely attended, Sir Charles Reed spoke very highly of the education given in the school, and expressed deep interest in the institution. Votes of thanks were cordially awarded to the lecturer and to the chairman.

CHINESE COOLIES IN PERU.

The Panama Star and Herald states that the Oliphant contract for introducing free Chinese labour has been partially remodelled. The principal conditions are that the subsidy be paid in silver or its equivalent, or in nitrate at current market price in the port of embarkation, Messrs. Oliphant and Co. in five years to make twenty-eight round trips by steam from Hong Kong or another Chinese port, bringing to Callao by each steamer at least 500 free labourers, or at the most 1,000 labourers, to pay a stipulated price for the passage. The Peruvian Government to engage to give the steamers a return freight of guano. The Peruvian Government also undertakes to watch over the welfare of the labourers, and to guarantee them good treatment. Wages to be arranged between employers and labourers. The Peruvian Government has not yet given its sanction to the scheme.

WESLEYAN MISSIONS.

The anniversary breakfast in connection with the Wesleyan Missionary Society took place at the Cannon-street Terminus Hotel on the 28th ult., when there was a very large attendance of the friends and supporters of the society. After breakfast the usual meeting in connection with it followed, presided over by Mr. J. Lindsay, of Belfast, who in opening the proceedings congratulated the members on the successful result of the past year, and urged them to redoubled efforts in order to meet the constantly increasing demands on the society. The Rev. G. T. Perks, one of the secretaries, stated that the event of the year would be accomplished when the first Wesleyan Methodist chapel would be opened in the city of Rome. The Rev. J. B. Anderson, of Halifax, the Rev. W H. Dallinger, of Liverpool, the Rev. W. Scarborough, of Hankow, the Rev. W. Burgess, from Madras, and the Rev. J. C. Barratt, from Canstatt, also addressed the meeting. The annual meeting of the Society was held on the 30th ult., at Exeter Hall. The Chairman (Mr. S. D. Waddy, Q.C., M.P.), spoke of the growth of Methodist missionary work during the past two generations since 1818, and said that from eighty-two circuits and 107 missionaries the numbers had grown to 651 and 797 respectively. The Rev. A. M'Aulay (the President of the Wesleyan Conference) moved the adoption of the report, which stated that there were 675 circuits occupied by the society, which possessed 6,262 chapels and other preaching places, employed 829 ministers and missionaries, 5,341 other paid and 23,002 unpaid agents, and there were 139,917 Church members, 18,647 on trial for membership, and 148,770 scholars. The total amount of home receipts for the year was £122,630 17s. 11d., and the foreign receipts had reached £22,600 4s. 2d. The payments amounted to a total of £164,195 5s. 5d. Referring to the work of the society in Italy, the report recorded that the first Methodist chapel in Rome was dedicated to Almighty God. Among the contributors to the work of the society was the King of Holland, who had granted £283 6s. 8d. towards the St. Eustatius and St. Martin's Missions, in the West Indies, in support of which the French Government had also granted £93 14s. During the year missionaries had been sent out to Barcelona, Ceylon, Calcutta, China, Africa, the West Indies, Sydney, Melbourne, and New Zealand. The Secretary stated that, as the expenses of the society were in excess of the receipts, its friends must show an increased liberality, or else the work of the society must be retrenched. A number of other speakers followed, and the report was adopted. This report stated that in China there were 11 missionaries, with about 30 subordinate agents, who have charge of 301 members and 419 scholars. They have outlived opposition, and the work is being vigorously prosecuted. The hope is expressed that before long some plan may be matured for the pushing of missionary operations inland, even beyond the treaty ports and among the masses of the Chinese people.

ENGLISH PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONS.

The annual meeting of the Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church of England has been held at Exeter Hall, under the presidency of Mr. J. C. Stevenson, M.P. According to the report, there were 49 native evangelists and 27 students to the ministry, the districts occupied by the missionaries being Amoy, Swatow, and Formosa. The income of the society was £9,402, while the expenditure amounted to £9,022. The Chairman in opening the proceedings, trusted the result of the gathering would deepen in all of them the sense of the importance of the great and honourable work in which their Church was engaged. They were able to do their missionary labours by means of their own church organisation, which was a great advantage, because all its members also belonged to the missionary society. They now looked with confidence to the future, as regarded the large fields of heathenism that had not yet been reached in China. Their mission was not only to the heathen, but also to the Jews. The Rev. Theodore Meyer, missionary to the Jews, then gave a detailed account of his labours. Dr. Donald Fraser said that events were now occurring in the East in which a marvellous and an ancient people, the Jews, who were dwelling among them, would be greatly interested. There were many signs of spiritual coldness and doubt among the Jews, but in them there was a kindling desire for the restoration of their national existence, and of the possession of that land which was given to their fathers. One of England's greatest writers had surprised most of her admirers by giving prominence to this in "Daniel Deronda." The events that were now transpiring in the East could not but have the effect of altering the political condition of those regions. The Rev. Hugh Ritchie, a missionary from Formosa, stated there were 12,000 members of the Church on the main land at China, and a similar number at Formosa. The Rev. Daniel M'Ewen, D.D., referred with pleasure to the success of their mission in China, greatly brought about, he said, by the labours of earnest and thoughtful missionaries. It was an incalculable blessing, because it opened up to them a spiritual life, and showed that they had a bond of communion between them. The field itself was one of great attraction, and enlisted their sympathy, because the Chinese Empire had such an immense territory, comprising one-ninth of the land area of the globe, and with its hundreds of millions of people, with its ancient civilisation, with its singular history, it might in the future exercise a powerful influence over the destinies of the world.

THE JAPANESE AMBASSADOR AT THE GAIETY THEATRE.—The Japanese Ambassador, accompanied by his wife and a large party, attended the Gaiety Theatre on the 4th inst., and at the conclusion of "Artful Cards" his Excellency complimented Mr. Toole upon his performance.

Monetary and Commercial.

The general state of trade in the country has, on the whole, been better than might have been anticipated, in view of the two potent causes which have combined to bring about depression during the past week, namely, the outbreak of war and the continuance so late into the year of cold weather. In the iron districts, and especially at Leeds, considerable depression has been felt; but by last accounts, though business was still in a very inanimate condition, matters were looking a little better, and there was somewhat more demand for shipment, the feeling being that if the war be confined to the present combatants trade was not likely to be placed in a worse position than it has been during the present year. In the woollen trade, however, the cold winds have militated against the summer business and caused orders to be kept back in all directions. At Nottingham much machinery is unemployed, and the remainder working on short time.

The Tea market still continues in a very dull condition, and presents little calling for special notice. The sales have been lighter than last week, but prices remain much the same. The weekly sales, without reserve, which have so long been a prominent feature in the market here, are now being held at the Commercial Sale Rooms instead of at those of the broker. It is to be hoped that this improved accommodation to the public may lead to more spirited bidding. It is generally considered that the cautious limits which have been sent out to China may lead to a favourable opening there. At present the feeling of depression is as great as ever, and there is little likelihood of their being increased.

The stagnation in the Silk Market continues unabated, and prices are unaltered. As yet nothing definite is known with reference to the European crops, but the reports are not satisfactory. No positive mischief is supposed to have resulted, but the cold weather has retarded matters fully ten days, and many holders of silk are not without expectation that from this and other causes the crop may be seriously compromised. In estimating the value of the opinions expressed, it is, however, very necessary to bear in mind that there is, of course, considerable likelihood of the wish being father to the thought. Upon one point bearing on the future prospects as to supply but little has hitherto been said, namely, the possibility, or, indeed, likelihood of there being less silk than usual in China this year, the supplies having been larger than usual, on account of the great rise in prices last season.

During the week which ended on the 28th ult. the total quantity of tea withdrawn from the bonded warehouses in London amounted to 3,425,535 lbs., which was an increase of 124,654 lbs. over the quantity taken out of bond during the corresponding week of 1876. Of this quantity 2,322,273 lbs. went for home consumption, 336,542 lbs. for exportation, 5,289 lbs. for ships' stores, and 761,431 lbs. went coastwise to various outports, 145,297 lbs. having been for immediate exportation. The sum paid in London for tea duty during the week amounted to £58,056 16s. 6d., which was £225 18s. less than was realised from the same source during the corresponding week of last year.

In the Produce Markets several articles, under the influence of continued speculative operations, show a further advance, although the excitement which followed the outbreak of war has to some extent abated, and a slight reaction has been occasioned by the advance in the Bank-rate. Coffee has been in strong demand, and large supplies of Plantation Ceylon have been purchased at an advance of 2s. to 3s. per cwt. Cotton shows a slight improvement. Sugar is again active, and a rise in value of 3d. to 6d. per cwt. has been established. Quotations of Rice have continued to advance until near the close, when a slight reaction has set in. Camphor, Cantharides, Cocoa-Nut Oil, Galls, Gambier, Manila Hemp, Japan Wax, Nutmegs, and Tin all exhibit an improvement. Coir Goods, Plumbago, and Pepper are dull, with a declining tendency.

The Stock Exchange Committee have allowed the Bonds of the Chinese Imperial Government Eight per Cent. Loan, 1874, to be officially quoted.

The Eastern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of April, 1877, amounted to £39,861, and to £30,354 in the corresponding period of 1876. The traffic receipts of the Eastern Extension, Australasia, and China Telegraph Company (Limited), for the month of April, 1877, amounted to £23,688, and to £14,497 for the corresponding period of 1876.

The P. and O. Company announce under the authority of the Director-General of the Post-office of India that the rate for the conveyance of book packets from London to British India has been reduced to 6d. per pound or fraction of a pound.

India Council drafts to the amount of 26½ lacs (say £265,000) were tendered for at the Bank of England on the 2nd inst., and £310,000 was allotted, which includes £45,000 left unallotted last week. Calcutta obtained £180,000, Madras £119,000, and Bombay £11,000. Tenders for telegrams on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 8¾d. per rupee receive 73 per cent., while bills obtain in full, and those on Bombay at 1s. 9d. obtain in full, there being no allottment below so far as that Presidency is concerned. As compared with last week, the minimum has been reduced ¼d. per rupee.

A good amount of silver has been disposed of during the week, at prices varying from 54½d. to 54¼d., according to fineness. The market is weaker at the close, in response to the receipt of lower exchanges from India, and the nearest quotation is 53¾d. per oz. standard. Mexican Dollars have been sold at 54¼d. per oz.

Our advices from the Continent intimate an increased demand for silver, consequent on the war, and prices will improve in the course of this month materially.

The P. and O. steamer Deccan, which left Southampton Thursday with the heavy portion of next outward mail, has on board silver to the amount of £77,800 for Penang, £13,900 for Singapore, and £41,800 for Hong Kong.

TEA.

Mr. D. D. Lewin's Market Résumé says :—There is no change for the better to note in the position of our market; in fact, business is more dull and depressed just now than it has been for many seasons past at this time. The slight improvement in common Congous has again been lost, and all low grade descriptions have reached a point exceptionally cheap. The business, as for some time previously, has been chiefly confined to public sale Teas. The clearances, both for home use and export, are good and improving. Congou: Siftings, being scarce, maintain quotations. Black Leafs: Sound to good common must be quoted fully ½d. per lb. lower. In fair to good medium, ranging from 9d. to 1s. 3d., there is little doing, and prices are quite nominal. Fine and finest are without much change, and stocks; running down, are held pretty firmly for price. Red Leafs: Common kinds continuing to be freely offered at auction, recent sales have gone off very heavily. Fine and finest, being comparatively scarce, command attention. Souchongs are in limited inquiry. Pak-lings: A few transactions at about former values. New Makes, at from 3d. to 10d., wanted. Fine also in some request. Oolongs: Fine parcels Formosa readily saleable; Common kinds neglected. Scented Teas are without noticeable change. Greens continue depressed in value, except for the finer lines, which still realise fair prices. Indian Teas have latterly sold less briskly, and previous quotations are barely maintainable.

Quotations:—Congou: Black and Red Siftings and Leafy Tea, 6d. to 7½d. Black Leafs: Low to good common, 6½d. to 8d.; fair to good medium, 8½d. to 1s. 3d.; fine and finest, 1s. 5d. to 2s. Red Leafs:

Amoy: Common kinds, 8d. to 9d.; fair to fine, 9½d. to 1s 4d. Tayshans: Common to fair and good, 8d. to 1s.; good to fine, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 6d. Souchong: Low to good common, 7½d. to 9d.; fair to medium, 9½d. to 1s. 3d. nominal. Oolong: Canton kinds, common to good, 11d. to 1s. 1d. Formosa, good to fine, 1s. 4d. to 1s. 8d. Scented Capers: Low to good, 11d. to 1s. 2d.; fine and finest, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. nominal. Scented Orange Pekoe: Low to good, 10½d. to 1s. 2d.; fine, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—The public sales being smaller this week and containing a less quantity of Congou has checked the downward tendency of the market, and the prices obtained for common or fair common black and red-leaf Congous show a slight improvement. Scented Teas and Green Teas on the other hand have sold in favour of buyers. Business by private contract is still on a limited scale, but the prices obtained for fair to medium kinds have been better than those ruling lately at public auction.

SILK.

Messrs. John Kershaw, Kilburn and Co.'s Circular says:—The market for all classes of Silk has been exceedingly dull and depressed. There is hardly any demand for Silk; even the ordinary hand to mouth trade, which in dull times generally keeps the market going, has become so small that the total operations are most insignificant. The deliveries of Chinas during the past month were very small, only 1,238 bales, but of Cantons and Japans on a better scale, being 449 and 539 bales respectively. The total stocks of Silk, however, owing to the small arrivals, show a decline on the 1st May from those of the previous month. Holders of silk are not pressing sales, preferring to await the result of the European crops.

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Circular says:—The position is still very unsatisfactory, scarcely any business and drooping prices. Small as were the transactions in March, especially the latter part of the month, those of April have been upon a far more limited scale. We hear on all sides of a large number of looms and mills being stopped or going upon very short time, and the same state of things is supposed to exist on the Continent, hence the extreme smallness of our deliveries, but hence also one ground of hope for the future in the relief that will be thus afforded to the stock of manufactured goods, for although the demand appears to be very limited, and prices very unsatisfactory, yet considerable parcels are sold occasionally, and stocks are gradually diminishing, so slowly probably as to be scarcely perceptible; still the sales must be in excess of present production:—

COFFEE.—Supplies of Plantation Ceylon at the public sales last week have not only been much in excess of any previous week this year, but also of any day during 1876. Early in the week the demand was active, and a further advance of 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per cwt. was established, making a total rise in the past fortnight of about 5s. per cwt. Within the last two days, however, although the supply has been lighter, there has been less demand, and prices at the close are in some instances 6d. lower. Closing quotations are, Plantation triage 80s. to 85s. 6d., grey to coloury small 92s. to 96s., low middling 97s. to 98s., middling 98s. 6d. to 101s. 6d., good middling 102s. to 104s., dull to fine bold 106s. to 115s., pea-berry 105s. to 108s., Native small and broken, 72s., good ordinary 81s., bold at 84s. 6d., per cwt.

CHINA STAR ANNISEED.—100 cases good fair China Star, rather stalky, sold at 92s. 6d. to 93s., the first lot 93s. 6d.

CANTHARIDES have advanced, and business has been done in China at 2s. 7d. to 2s. 8d.

CHINA PRESERVES.—330 cases China Ginger (Chyloong) bought in at 8d. to 9d., except 150 cases (containing jars with various defects), which sold at 5d. to 5½d. per lb.

CUTCH.—At auction 322 boxes Pegu have been bought in at 25s. 6d., also 728 boxes Calcutta Pegu (C.B. and Co. in triangle) at 23s. per cwt.

CAMPHOR.—A good demand has prevailed; 1,500 tubs Japan have been sold for arrival, per Jumna, particulars not reported; 60 cases damaged China have been sold at 87s. 6d., and 90s. has been paid for sound Japan, and at the close that price is required for China, and 92s. 6d. to 95s. per cwt. for Japan.

COCOA NUT OIL.—A further advance has occurred, £38 having been paid for Ceylon in pipes. Cochin is quoted £42 per ton.

GALLS.—China have been sold privately at 54s. per cwt., and in public sale 100 cases have been bought in at 60s. per cwt.

GAMBIER.—Early in the week at auction 322 boxes 817 bags pale free cubes sold at dearer rates, viz., at 30s., first-class damaged 26s. to 28s. For arrival 100 tons March-April were sold at 21s. ex ship all faults. Subsequently the market has become quiet, 50 tons have been sold at 20s. 6d. ex ship arrived, business has been done on the spot at 20s. 9d. for whole bales, and for arrival 50 tons March-April shipment have been sold at 20s. 9d. ex ship.

GUM BENJAMIN.—30 cases Sumatra, seconds, sold, fair rather badly mixed with dark at £7 5s., grey, £5 17s. 6d. to £6. Of 101 cases thirds 15 cases common sold at 56s., the remainder bought in at 65s. or withdrawn.

HIDES.—Messrs. Dyster, Nalder, and Co.'s Monthly Circular says:—The business done in Kips in the Hair at the public sales (one series only having been held during the month) has been unimportant, and prices were frequently the turn in favour of buyers. By private, transactions are limited at about former rates. Singapore, Penang, Rangoon, &c., Ox and Cow Hides: The Penang Hides offered at public sale were of good quality, and realised full prices. The Rangoon Hides were chiefly remnants from previous sales, and were again taken in. China Hides have been in unprecedentedly large supply, and considerable clearances were effected by public and private at a decline of ¼d. to ½d. per lb.; but the market has assumed a firmer tone, and better prices are now obtainable. The sales comprise 3,557 Penang: Light, seconds, 8d. to 8¼d.; thirds, 5½d.; Heavy, seconds, 6½d. to 7d.; extra heavy, 5½d. to 6¾d.; small, seconds, 7½d. to 8¼d. per lb. 100 Manila: Mixed weights, 6¼d. to 6¾d. per lb.; 30,856 China: Light, 6d. to 6¾d.; heavy, 5¾d. to 6¾d.; extra heavy, 6d. to 6¾d.; Kips, 6½d. to 8d.; thirds, 4½d. to 5½d.; fourths, 2½d. per lb. Singapore, Penang, &c., Buffalo Hides have been in fair request, but prices, in some instances, have slightly receded. The sales are 5,016 Singapore; fair to good, first heavy, average 23½lb., 5⅝d.; ordinary to fair, first heavy, average 30 to 34⅜ lb., 4¾d. to 5½d.; seconds, average 25⅜ to 34⅜ lb., 4¾d.; light, average 9⅜ to 14⅞ lb., 5d. to 5¾d.; thirds, 4d. per lb. 360 China: heavy, average 39⅜ lb. 4⅝d.; light, average 12⅜ lb., 4½d.; thirds, average 33⅝ lb., 4½d. per lb. Java Hides: A few (147) extra heavy Batavia Ox and Cow Hides, average 14⅜ lb., have been sold at 9d. per lb. The sales of Batavia Buffalo consist of only 369 Hides; Unshaved, ordinary heavy, average 34⅜ lb. 5½d. per lb. At the periodical public sales last sales' values were fully maintained on the average. The few Penang Ox and Cow afforded no criterion of value. China were in large supply, owners were firm holders for ¼d. per lb. advance on the last sales' rates, which has been obtained privately in the interval, but at this advance the trade operated sparingly, and the article was bought in freely. The extreme weights were most saleable. Singapore Buffalo brought full prices. Of 42,405 China Ox and Cow offered 18,070 sold. Light, average 10⅜ to 11½ lb. 6¼d. to 7d.; heavy, average 15⅜ to 20 lb. 6¼d. to 7d.; extra heavy, average 22⅛ to 30⅛ lb. 6¼d. to 7¼d.; kips and skins, average 4½ to 9½ lb. 7d. to 8d.; thirds, 5¼d. to 5¾d. per lb. Buffalo.—123 Batavia withdrawn. Of 1,517 Singapore offered 1,128 sold; fair, 1st heavy average 32¼ lb. 5⅜d.; 2nd heavy, average 28¾ lb. 4¾d.; light, average 11⅜ to 18⅞ lb. 5½d. to 5⅞d. per lb.

HEMP.—The market for Manila continues strong, and prices have further advanced, more especially for arrival, in which position 1,000 bales Cebu, distant shipment, have been sold at £32, and 500 bales at £32 10s. At the fortnightly public sales there was a steady demand at a recent improvement, and £31 was obtained for fair current, but owing to the firmness of holders only a small part sold. Of 1,660 bales offered 500 bales sold, a few bales common to fair brown at £28 to £30, fine brown Cebu £30 10s., fair to fully fair £31 to £31 10s., one lot ordinary Quilot £31 15s., the remainder being bought in at £31 to £32 10s., Quilot at £35 to £37; 96 bales very low towzelled Manila sold without reserve at £22 10s. to £22 15s.

JAPAN WAX.—About 100 cases have been sold at 44s. per cwt. 200 boxes fair squares have been sold at 44s., and subsequently business has been done in squares at 45s. per cwt.

MUSK.—Of 10 tins Tonquin 7 tins sold, pile 1 fair to good fair shaped with a few bally at 46s., damp with a few skinny at 40s.; pile 3 hard rough, &c., 14s. to 15s. 6d. 25 packages Yunan bought in at 34s. to 36s. per oz.

PLUMBAGO.—At auction 260 barrels Ceylon have been sold, lump at barely previous rates, chips and dust steadier, fine bright lump at 14s. to 15s. 6d., chips 9s. 6d. to 10s. 6d., fine bold ditto 11s. to 12s., dust 7s. 9d. to 8s. 6d. per cwt.

PEPPER.—Black: A very dull tone continues to prevail, and with little disposition to buy sales can only be effected at easier rates. Although only 717 bags were offered by auction the bulk was bought in; 472 bags Singapore bought in at 3⅞d., 57 bags Penang sold at 3½d.; of 120 bags Tellicherry 50 bags sold at 4d. White: A small supply at auction met a rather better demand at firmer rates, and of 153 bags Singapore 123 bags sold, chiefly good at 6⅜d., one lot brown at 6¼d., 116 bags Penang sold at 6d.

RICE.—Early in last week seven cargoes were sold, viz.:—One of 2,000 tons Bassein, March sailing, at 10s.; one of 800 tons Bassein, now loading, at 10s. 1½d.; the India, 1,186 tons Rangoon, January sailing, at 10s. 3d.; the Polynesian, 1,226 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 10s. 4½d. One of 800 tons Rangoon, March, at 10s. 4½d.; the Aberfoyle, 1,162 tons Moulmein, at about 10s. 6d.; and the Secundo Z., 1,091 tons Necransie, March sailing, at 10s. 1½d. During the past few days the speculative demand has ceased, but a decline of about 1½d. per cwt. having been accepted, some business has been done. On the spot 7,000 bags Rangoon have been sold at 11s. 10½d., and 3,000 bags Moulmein at 10s. 3d. Afloat 280 tons old Necransie, transhipped at the Cape per Laura, off coast, have been sold at 9s. 3d. ex ship London; also six cargoes, viz.:—The Ernesto Padre, 858 tons Rangoon, Feb-

MANCHESTER GOODS.

On the 27th ult. buyers evinced little inclination to extend operations, and there was consequently but a small business done in either Yarns or Goods. Notwithstanding this slackness of demand, however, manufacturers adhered to their quotations with some show of steadiness, declining the bulk of the offers which continued to be put forward at considerable concessions on current prices. Spinners were easier to deal with, especially those holding stocks, and a small business was done in Yarns at declining rates. There has been no material change this week in the position of the Market, and a quieter feeling has ruled, without, however, affecting the steadiness of prices. The transactions in both Yarns and Goods have been on a moderate scale, and mostly at producers' quotations. On the part of buyers the disposition is to act with caution. The aspect of affairs in many important foreign markets is felt to be very uncertain in face of a war of which the issues and complications are so difficult to foresee. But whilst this is the general feeling, it is not forgotten how often war has been the means of reviving trade, and the lowness of current prices tend in a large measure to counteract the more cautious tendency. Hence there is a stronger disposition to buy than might be supposed from the generally quiet aspect of the market, but for the most part at prices which are impracticable. In export yarns the sales have been on the whole of little importance. For the Continent there has been rather more doing, and for China also; but Calcutta merchants have bought little, and for the Levant scarcely anything is reported. India and China Shirtings of 39-inch widths meet with only a moderate demand, except at 1½d. to 3d. below the lowest rates which manufacturers will accept; 45-inch are exceedingly dull. T-Cloths and Mexicans continue quiet, with little change in prices.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

A STEAMER of about 3,000 tons has been launched by Messrs. Napier and Sons, Glasgow, for Messrs. Donald Currie and Co.'s London and Cape mail packet service. The vessel was named the Dublin Castle, in honour of the Duke of Manchester, the last elected Knight of St. Patrick, and President of the Royal Colonial Institute. The Dublin Castle is one of six vessels in course of construction on the Clyde for the same line.

AN ADMIRALTY APPEAL.—The appeal "Hart v. Avigno," from the Vice-Admiralty Court, Bengal, respecting a collision between the Dacca and Michelino in the Rangoon River, has been decided by the Judicial Committee. The appellants had been ordered to pay 44,000 rupees as damages, and hence the appeal. Their lordships dismissed the appeal with costs, affirming the decision of the Admiralty Court.

MR. C. MAGNIAC has written a letter to The Times, urging the necessity for action being taken with reference to the neutrality of the Suez Canal. He states that there are no regulations respecting the transit of war vessels, and consequently Turkey might impede those of Russia. On the other hand, Russia might establish a blockade of Suez or Alexandria, to be raised only if her ships were allowed to pass.

THE P. and O. steamship Poonah, while in the Suez Canal, experienced a severe sand storm, which commenced at sunrise and continued, more or less furiously, until five in the afternoon. During the storm she lay right across the Canal powerless. Tons of sand were thrown on the deck, and the masts and gear were covered with a thick coating.

The Nederland Company's steamship Prins van Orange, Captain J. F. Aukes, sailed from Southampton on the 1st inst. for Padang, Batavia, Sourabaya, &c., with the Dutch mails, troops, passengers, and cargo.

THE new iron paddle tug Bangkok, built in Newcastle for Messrs. Pickenpack, Thies, and Co., of Bangkok, Siam, left Falmouth on the 24th ult. for her destination, vid Singapore.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,

In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

THE FOLLOWING

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER

dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Horningsham, near Warminster, Wilts:—

"I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am 78 years old.

PURVEYORS TO THE QUEEN,
SOHO SQUARE, LONDON.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen o the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that th missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home an School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present He Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly nascecian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

Two reports, coming from different quarters, are brought from China by the present mail, which seem to indicate that there is some prospect of a commencement being made in the direction of the introduction of foreign improvements. It is stated that a telegraph is to be erected between the Arsenal and the Viceroy's Yamen at Tientsin, and that a railway is to be made from Anping to Kelung in Formosa. Coupled with what has taken place in other directions, there certainly seems at last to be some signs of movement. It is said that Li-Hung-Chang is to stay in Formosa, a statement which would seem to coincide with the news by last mail, to the effect that a memorial had appeared in the Peking Gazette with reference to the improved government of that island. There are no further particulars concerning the famine, except that the deaths were much more numerous in Shangtung, in consequence of the comparatively small efforts made in that province. A memorial from Li Hung-Chang, asking for some reward to be conferred upon those who have aided in repairing the embankment of the Yellow River has appeared in the Peking Gazette. An extraordinary circular has been published by Mr. Hart, Inspector-General of Customs, in which he states that the rumours recently current with respect to China intending to contract various loans are without foundation. This denial, however, appears to be accepted with some reservation. Mr. Davenport has again taken charge of the Consulate at Shanghai. At the meeting of the S.S.N. Company, which took place there, it was announced that the Chinese have paid Tls. 1,245,000 on account of the rece t purchase of the steamers and plant. A somewhat serious disturbance has taken place at Ningpo, at the Bridge of Boats. In Hong Kong subscriptions have been liberally forthcoming for the relief of the famine. The combination among the yarn dealers has assumed greater importance than was at first supposed to be likely, and has had the effect of paralysing business in Cotton for the time being. The finding of the Naval Court of Inquiry with reference to the John o'Gaunt has been given. By the last accounts, Sir Brooke Robertson, Her Majesty's Consul at Canton, was progressing favourably.

From Japan the most important item of news is the report that the alleged confessions with reference to an attempt on the part of the Government to compass the assassination of General Saigo are now acknowledged to be false. One of the papers characterises them as "an impudent fabrication, and regrets that its contemporaries should still uphold it." The volunteer question has, according to the advices received via America, been referred to the Ministers, who have pronounced in favour of the view of the Governor of Kanagawa. The present mail papers state that the members of the Consular body who were on the committee had retired. Steps were being taken in Yokohama to afford relief to the Chinese sufferers from the famine.

From the Straits Settlements the principal, and, in fact, almost the only item of news is that five ports on the West Coast of Sumatra have been opened to trade. Everything continued quiet in the Native Malay States. Mr. W. E. Maxwell will take the place of Captain Walshe as police magistrate during the absence of the latter upon other duties. Advices received in Singapore from Manila reported that the establishment of the Spanish Settlement at Sulu was progressing satisfactorily.

YOKOHAMA.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 27th March, and we have advices via San Francisco, two days later, viz., to the 29th March. The French mail from London, Jan. 26, arrived out on the 16th March, and the following P. and O. mail of Feb. 2 was received on the 21st March.

The war news was still very indefinite at the date of the mail's departure, and the papers express but very guarded opinions with regard to it. The Herald says it is true that the later despatches speak of advantages gained by the Imperialists, but the skirmishes which preceded the abandonment of the positions taken possession of by the troops were not of any great importance, and it would rather seem that the Satsuma men, finding their lines too extended, and some of their advanced posts too exposed, had simply withdrawn to stronger positions. These daily victories are looked upon with great suspicion, as under the present press regime nothing is published except from Government information. The Rising Sun states that although fighting with a bravery and heroism worthy of a better cause the Satsuma insurrectionists have suffered severely. At noon on Thursday, 15th March, a heavy struggle for victory took place at Tawarasaka, and when darkness ended the fray neither combatants had been triumphant. Early on Friday the contest was renewed, the rebels occupying a strong position, from which they were dislodged after three hours' struggle. Saturday was a blank, both parties preparing to resume on Sunday, which they did at daylight, and which resulted in a total discomfiture of the Satsuma forces, their second chief leader, General Kirino, being killed, and General Shinowara wounded. Closely followed by the Imperial forces they fled to Uyeki, where fighting was resumed on Tuesday and continued throughout the day, neither party gaining any advantage; both encamped on the same ground occupied in the morning. At dawn on Wednesday the Imperialists, having been reinforced, commenced the attack, and although twice beaten back, their intrepidity ultimately compelled the rebels to retreat to within three miles from Kumamoto, where they concentrated. On the same evening the Government troops again attacked them, but were repulsed, and retired to Uyeki, in the vicinity of which place fighting continues. At Yamaga, on Wednesday, the 21st, it was expected the rebels would make a very stubborn and obstinate resistance; however, on being attacked they were dislodged after two hours' combat, and the Government troops occupied the place, the rebels having retreated to Wifu. Saigo's hope appears to have no base, but a concentration of power between Uyeki and Kumamoto, and although his forces have been worsted, none doubt his ability to conduct a campaign.

According to the Akebono Shimbun, one at least of the conspirators, alleged to have been suborned by the Government to assassinate Saigo, has publicly recanted his "confession," which he says was wrung from him by torture in Kagoshima. It will be remembered that in his "confession" itself be stated that he had not been tortured—so that it would appear that torture was applied to him not only to make him confess, but to confess that his confession was spontaneous. The Akebono Shimbun says:—"The following account of Mr. Nomura's imprisonment by the insurgents in Kagoshima has been related by himself:—'I arrived at Kagoshima in the steamer Koyo-Maru three days after the insurgents had forced their way into the arsenals. On landing I was arrested by a policeman and taken to the Kencho, where I was examined by the chief of the police, Nirei. He first inquired what business I had returned to the ken to transact. I replied that I had been engaged in educational affairs in the late Miyagi-ken; but, on that ken being abolished, I regretted very much that a number of enterprising students should be left without the opportunity of completing their education, so I took them to Tokio and placed them in a good school. Having no business in Tokio, I returned to my birthplace, Kagoshima. But the Chief of Police refused to believe me, and pronounced that I was sent by the Government to execute some secret order; and then, under severe torture, compelled me to confess and seal my confession. At that time the rebels were ready for marching towards Kumamoto. Before departing they became very excited and wanted to kill me and some others who had been imprisoned by them, but Saigo would not permit them. When the Mikado's envoy arrived in Kagoshima the Kencho despatched an express messenger to Saigo at Kawajiri asking for instructions as to what was to be done with the prisoners. An order came back that they were all to be killed. In the meantime the envoy hastened to effect our liberation, which was fortunate for us all, as otherwise we should all have been killed."

The Tokio Times, referring to this subject, says:—

The most extraordinary instance on record of simultaneous change of heart is that revealed in the choice "confessions" of the conscience-stricken police agents who, it is claimed, were ordered in a body to Kagoshima to assassinate Saigo, who accepted the mission with alacrity, and who, on arriving there, were one and all penetrated with remorse and lifted up their repentant voices in joint "confession." According to the publications in the Japan Mail, which is so well pleased with the documents in question that it is not satisfied with printing them once, but reproduces the most defamatory of them with notes of confidence, there were upwards of twenty of these murderous deputies who ardently co-operated in the plot, and who travelled southward with death in their hearts, but reached their destination only to be unanimously overcome and to pour out their purified souls in "confession." There is no story more touching than this in the annals of crime. The Newgate Calendar has nothing to compare with it.

The Consuls who had been nominated on the volunteer corps committee have retired rather than cause offence to the Governor of Kanagawa, who objected to the movement.

Elizabeth Searfield, who was charged with concealment of the birth of a child on board the ship Annie W. Weston, has been sentenced to a month's imprisonment. A question of jurisdiction was raised in the prisoner's favour, but was decided against her.

The Japan Gazette gives the following:—

Baron Alexander von Siebold, attached to the Finance Department, leaves shortly for Europe on a special mission in connection with his department. He expects to be absent from Japan about six months.

A new Japanese trade dollar has issued recently, a handsome coin, and of the full value which it represents—a coin admirably adapted to take the place here usurped by the Mexican as a medium of exchange, or at least to circulate side by side with it.

Steps have been taken to form a Committee of all nationalities to collect subscriptions in aid of a fund for the relief of the famine-stricken population of the Chinese provinces of Shuntung and Chihli, and the members will probably be ready to commence work immediately.

A telegram from Colonel Hayashi at Kobe says that a Chinese man-of-war, the Kai an, arrived there on the 20th March. He boarded the vessel and asked the captain his business in Kobe. The reply was that the crew were being trained in seamanship. She will stop there for about one week, after which it is not yet decided whether she will go on to Yokohama or return to Shanghai.

About thirty of the most prominent of the German residents and their friends met on the evening of the 22nd March to celebrate the Emperor's birthday by a dinner, given in the banquet hall of the Club Germania, which was most tastefully decorated for the occasion. Mr. A. Evers occupied the chair. The toast of the evening was the health of the illustrious monarch whom the guests had assembled to honour.

Toda, ex-daimio of Ogaki, Mino, who lately visited Kioto to pay his respects to the Mikado, had been, previous to that, doing good work in his old dominions. He assembled the most prominent men of his former retainers in a monastery, and exhorted them to do their utmost to preserve peace and order in the province. He distributed among them yen 10,000; and gave yen 5,000 to the agriculturists, and yen 3,000 for division among the inhabitants of the town of Ogaki.

Captain J. Carst has returned from Cape Idzu, accompanied by the diver, Mr. Sutherland, appointed by the British Consul and the United States Consul-General at the request of the French and Netherlands Consuls to survey the wreck of the French steamer Nil and report upon its condition. From what we can gather it appears that the diver found the ship in the condition in which she was reported to be by Mr. Jan de Boer some time ago, namely, with the port side and decks blown to pieces, and no cargo visible.

YOKOHAMA, MARCH 29.

The most astonishing event in the modern history of this country is the defection of Saigo, who, both here and in Europe, has, since the partial opening of Japan to foreign relations, been held to be the model of honesty and loyalty; and I cannot but think that his reputation is not belied, and that the grievances which have driven such a man to revolt must have been no slight ones. Of course we foreigners can hardly see beneath the surface, and, as information is so sedulously kept back from us, only divine the secret motives for actions which are evident. Certain it is, however, that reform is needed in the machinery of Government, and that the need is felt by those Japanese who wish well to their country. The latter assert that Japan has arrived at that stage where a representative Government alone can supply her needs; that those who now hold the power have become careless of the desires, the requirements, of those they rule; that they think only of the profits and privileges of office which they have determined at all hazards to reserve to themselves; that the Imperial authority is as much a fable as it was in the most despotic days of the Siogunate; that the Imperial name is used as a cloak for oppression and extortion; and that in fact the present system is leading to, if it has not already arrived at, the worst form of an irresponsible personality, an oligarchy vested in a few selfish, oppressive, and incapable officials. A great part of this is no doubt true, and if Saigo can bring about the establishment of a representative legislature, he will deserve more than he has yet done, more than any of Japan's heroes and patriots have done, the gratitude of his country. He is said to have formulated his demands for a change, and that on the persistent refusal of the Government to grant them he took to arms, intending to march to Tokio. He was obstructed by the garrison of Kumamoto to which place (in Hiogo) accordingly he laid siege, and the Central Government sent troops to put him down. The task they have undertaken is one of no ordinary difficulty. He is in a rich and fertile country, well able to support his frugal troops, for an indefinite period; he is at the head of ten or fifteen thousand men, at least, drawn from the most chivalrous population of the empire, trained to arms, and inspired by the renown and patriotism of their chief and their own traditions; and he commands the most important strategic position of a district which is, apparently, admirably calculated to afford facilities for a warfare such as he is waging. True he is now surrounded, at a distance, by the Imperial troops; but not one important advantage has yet been gained by the latter. Kumamoto, in the centre of the province, garrisoned by Imperialists, is besieged by some of his adherents; and at this moment it is again rumoured to have fallen. It is impossible to foretell the issue of such a struggle. In the army and the fleet Saigo has many devoted followers; and in spite of the large array—all the available troops and police of the Empire have been sent against him—his success is thought at least possible. He would be satisfied with a compromise, probably with the resignation now of Okubo, Terashima, and other of the Ministers, and a guarantee of more thorough reforms in the future. For many reasons a prompt arrangement is desirable, and not the least is that Saigo is invaluable to his country. Such are some of the causes of the sympathy which is felt by foreigners for him; and the belief that his success would be to the advantage of many interests.

Another test case is being heard, this time in the British Vice-Consular Court in Yedo, on the subject of the ground rents due to the Japanese Government, by foreigners holding land in the Ts'kidji concession. A British subject refuses to pay arrears on the same ground as that assumed by Captain J. W. Batchelder when he was attacked in the U. S. Consular Court. The Tokio authorities in this case, however, are represented by counsel, Mr. J. F. Lowder; and it is highly improbable that the ruling will be the same in the British as it was in the American Court. We shall then have the anomaly of British subjects paying their rents, as they should, their location having been mere speculation on their part, and if they have lost it is absurd to expect the Japanese Government to bear their losses, and American citizens living rent free.

Mr. John Robertson, agent since 1866 of the Oriental Banking Corporation, goes home by the Alaska. He is not expected to return. The bank loses a shrewd and careful representative; society in Yokohama a prominent member; the business community a faithful and far seeing adviser, and the Turf a staunch and loyal supporter.

The tea season is closed. The new crop is expected to commence arriving about the end of April. Better business has been done in silk of late, owing to advices of improvement at home.

TOKIO.

The Tokio Times says:—

A neat and commodious structure in the Kai Sei Gakko grounds, to be devoted to lectures and other general exercises in connection with the institution, was opened on the evening of the 10th ult. with appropriate formalities. Mr. Hamao, Vice-Director of the University, introduced the proceedings by a statement of the character, object, cost, &c., of the finding. Mr. Nishimura, of the Mom Bu Sho, followed with a paper on the history of the introduction of the study of foreign languages in Japan, noticing the early use of the Dutch, and how, after the Perry Expedition, English became the more sought after, and this not merely as a literature but as a spoken tongue.

The merchants in Tokio are, says the Herald, complaining bitterly about the depressed state of trade, which they attribute to the war in the south, therefore they are anxious to see it terminated. The present struggle is considered to be a far more serious matter than the abolition of the Bakufu ten years ago, and there is no knowing how long it will last. In the former civil war the country was ripe for a change of Government, and only its own officials were earnest in the defence of the Bakufu, and both sides thought more of making money than of fighting, in which they had simply no experience, on account of the long peace which reigned throughout the land. Now, however, the combatants are comparatively well-drilled on both sides, and the people of the country are not by any means unanimous in their desire for a change of Government, therefore it is feared the present contest will be stubbornly contested for a considerable time, and much blood must necessarily be shed whichever side is victorious. Already it is said that the killed on both sides number over 1,000 men, without any decided advantage having been gained, either by the Government troops or the rebels. The expenditure already incurred by the Finance Department for the suppression of the rebellion exceeds 5,000,000 yen, and this is but a small portion of what, in all probability, will yet be required. The recent reduction in the land-tax will also cripple the power of the Government at this important crisis. Since both the Government and people in Tokio are suffering much loss, and deriving no benefit from the insurrection, it is becoming very unpopular, and viewed in a light totally different from that with which the people regarded the fall of the Sogoonate.

CHINA.

PEKING.

In the Peking Gazette of March 3rd Li Hung-chang, Governor General of Chihli, memorialises recommending for honours and rewards the officers engaged under his direction last year, in superintending the construction of new embankment works on a portion of the course of the Yellow River. The portion in question is on the south bank of the river, in the Tung-ning district, where the work previously accomplished by means of the labour of the country people was a mere outline of what was necessary, and requiring reconstruction on a larger and more substantial scale, the earth needing to be rammed down into a solid condition, before it could assume a proper and durable form. The undertaking being one of such magnitude, whilst the people could not be required a second time to devote themselves to the work, and no funds being available for the purpose in the public treasury, the only alternative was to make use of the services of the soldiery. The Governor-General, accordingly, in February, 1876, appointed General Liu Shen-hiu, at the head of fourteen ying (of about 500 men each) of Southern troops, and three Brigadiers of the provincial forces, with six ying under their command, to proceed to the spot where the works were required, and to set about the construction of the embankment. The site of the works is a river-flat, formerly overflowed, the soil of which is loose sand, and in certain parts of which water was still lying. The energy displayed by the troops overcame, however, all obstacles, the men working with the utmost zeal under the indefatigable superintendence of their officers, so that by the middle of May the undertaking was complete.

TIENTSIN.

The Courier's correspondent writes:—

The weatherwise of the Chinese in Tientsin say that if no floods come the year's crops must be good, as the earth always produces well when, as has been the case this winter, much snow falls. A good year is necessary for the northern provinces, as the strain of another season of floods or drought would be intolerable. The refugees are dispersing for their homes, most of them, says a correspondent, in a pitiful state of foulness. The actual deaths by starvation in Tientsin have not been many, as every man, woman, and child had a daily ration; not nutritious, but sufficient for bare sustenance. But the crowded and dirty matsheds, the horrible atmosphere, the cold and misery, make the poor wretches fall very easy victims to disease. The difference between the provinces of Chihli and Shantung is that in Chihli all possible means are said to have been taken to give support to the people, while in Shantung absolutely nothing has been done, and the deaths have in consequence been very numerous.

The North China Herald has the following:—

We are informed that Mr. Betts has commenced setting the poles for the line of telegraph which is to connect the Arsenal with the Viceroy's yamen. The question of a submarine or an aerial passage of the river is not decided. "Fung-shui" may come in to decide the question.

The indications are that something will be done this year towards opening the mines. Those nearest and most easily worked are situated about eighty miles (240 li) N.E. of this. We wish all success to all efforts for the development of the resources of the country.

A great change is manifest in the Chinese portion of the French Concession, in the way of cleanliness and decency, within the last few months. We rejoice at this, and accord all honour to the Consul, whose efforts, we believe, have at last brought about this needed reform.

Last Friday the temperance men of H.M.S. Curlew gave their friends a tea, followed by an entertainment, consisting of songs and theatricals. The opening address, by one of their number, stated that it was done in honour of the missionaries, and to show that their efforts had not been in vain. Coming here with five teetotallers, he said, they had now thirty-three. The general good conduct of the ship's company is noticeable to all.

We still see a good deal of poverty in the streets, but the mass of the refugees have returned to their homes.

NINGPO.

A correspondent of the North China Daily News gives an account of a somewhat serious disturbance which took place on the 28th March on the Bridge of Boats, and which threatened at one time to spread to the foreign Settlement. It was a festival of some sort, and the place was crowded with people who thronged the bridge. About six o'clock a row arose about the payment of the bridge toll, and the bridge-keeper seems to have seized and struck a soldier. A general melée ensued, in the course of which one of the Chinese employed on the bridge struck a soldier such a severe blow that it is uncertain even yet whether he will recover. Colonel Cooke and Mr. Golding, the superintendent of police, were soon on the spot, and tried to take the wounded man to Dr. Mackenzie, but the braves came with a rush and prevented them; and both had to retreat. Apprehension began now to be felt for the safety of the Settlement; and Mr. Warren, who is in charge of H.B.M.'s Consulate, wrote to Colonel Cooke and to the Teetai and Taoutai for assistance; and at the same time, at the request of a military mandarin, asked Dr. Mackenzie to go down and see to the wounded man. By this time there was an immense crowd on the spot. Colonel Cooke had only ten men with him, but the Taoutai had sent some, and the Teetai had come himself; still it was doubtful for a time whether the mob could be kept out of the Settlement, and they shouted their intention to "beat" and "kill" with startling frankness. The wounded man was at length got away; and the people were told, through the mandarins, that the bridge-keeper and his assistants should be arrested, and the case thoroughly investigated. Matters have quieted down for a time, but it depends, probably, on the fate of the soldier whether they will remain so. If he dies I should not be surprised if the people smashed up the bridge, and there is no saying how far the row may spread. At present he is still unconscious. For the moment the bridge is practically free, as most of the employés are arrested, and none of the remainder dare show.

HANKOW.

The Celestial Empire gives the following particulars of the preparations for the new tea season:—

The number of hongs at Hankow and the amount of sycee sent up for the new tea-season are both very much the same as they were last year. It is expected that musters of new teas will be placed on the market by the 6th or 7th of May, as the spring is very early; there is a probability that steamers will be despatched sooner than usual, and everybody, we hear, is preparing to operate very largely. The Shanse bankers are holding their forty and forty-five days' drafts on Hankow, and demanding higher rates than last season, owing to their short funds in the province of Hupeh. If the foreign banks do not come to terms with the Shanse bankers the former will have to ship sycee instead of buying bills, in which case more sycee—about two million of taels—will be required to send to Hankow. This time last year about a million taels of Shanse bank bills had been bought; this year, up to date, next to nothing has been settled.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 30th March; the French mail from London Feb. 9, was received on the 27th March.

A very unexpected and curious circular which has been issued by the Inspector-General of Customs has been the subject of some comment. It specifically denies the truth of the statements which had been lately current regarding the negotiation of Chinese loans. Loans of Tls. 2,500,000 and of Tls. 4,000,000 had been talked of from Japan; and various other loans for Fuhkien, Yunnan and Hupeh, but it is denied that any such were contemplated, and it is affirmed that there is no Imperial authority in any one's hands to take any steps towards raising any loan whatever.

Mr. Davenport, who proceeded recently to Wuhu, has returned and resumed charge of the British Consulate.

The annual meeting of the shareholders in the S.S.N. Company has been held. The report and accounts show a profit on the year's working of Tls. 178,925, besides Tls. 20,194 which the agents had repaid for defalcations perpetrated by T. W. Eckfeldt. Tls. 157,500 had been distributed as a dividend to shareholders, and Tls. 29,891 carried to reserve. Messrs. F. B. Forbes, Bell, Wood, H. de C. Forbes, and P. Maclean, were elected directors (and to act as a committee of liquidation) for the ensuing year. It was announced that the Chinese have already paid Tls. 1,245,000, on account of their purchase of the Company's plant; and that a return of Tls. 70 a share would be made to shareholders on the 26th instant. It was agreed that Messrs. Russell and Co. should receive 3½ per cent. on all payments as a remuneration for winding-up the Company; that sum to include commission on the sale, and the cost of office work. There remain legal expenses, and two doubtful claims, viz., certain fees claimed on behalf of the U.S. Government for transfer of the ships, and a claim on behalf of the Harbour authorities of Ardrossan for the cost of removing the wreck of the Chusan, both of which are disputed. The Chusan, it is explained, was built at Glasgow for the S.S.N. Company's river trade, but was driven on the rocks at Ardrossan during a gale, and wrecked on her way out. The present suit is instituted by the Earl of Eglinton as trustee of the Ardrossan Harbour Works for the cost of removing the wreck. The case was tried in the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice, and the jury, by the judge's direction, gave a verdict for the plaintiff with £11,531 damages. This decision has been appealed from, and is thought likely to be reversed.

The case against W. H. Shaw, who is charged with unlawfully obtaining Tls. 5,800 from Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, has been in part heard before the Police Magistrate, Mr. Mowatt. The accused has been admitted to bail.

The repairs to H.B.M. ship Lapwing have been completed, and she has proceeded to Nagasaki, where a court-martial will be held. H.M.S. corvette Charybdis left Shanghai on the 28th March, her crew having completed a period of as nearly as possible three years and six months' service on this station. The vessel is in such good order that she will be kept on the China station for at least another commission, which will be the third she has had, with but very little interval between the first and second. She was commissioned on each occasion at Sheerness, the second time being on the 26th September, 1873. Her new crew were to join at Hong Kong, the relieved crew going home in the Tamar.

The North China Branch of the Asiatic Society have held their monthly meeting, Mr. J. W. Kingsmill in the chair. Specimens of Chinese Caligraphy were exhibited by Dr. Macgowan; Mr. G. C. Stent read a paper on "Chinese Eunuchs;" and the President read a paper by the Rev. John Ross, "Notes on the Liaou River."

At the last ordinary meeting and entertainment at the Temperance Hall; there was a crowded audience, the opportunity being taken to present a farewell address to the Rev. J. Thomas, Vice-President of the Temperance Society, who was leaving Shanghai. The presentation was made by Mr. C. P. Blethen, the President, on behalf of the members and friends, and Mr. Thomas suitably replied.

Haydn's oratorio, the Creation, has been given by the Shanghai Musical Amateurs at the Masonic Hall.

We take the following items of news from the North China Herald:—

The Hankow Municipal Council are going to open a Post-office at that port, and have agreed with the Shanghai Council for the mutual distribution of correspondence.

The French Municipal Council have received intimation from the Gas Company that the capital of the company has been raised to Tls. 50,000, and that a reduction of 2 cents per cubic metre will be made, after the 1st March, on the price of gas consumed by the Municipality. The Council approve the suggestion that a document shall be drawn up, defining the powers of the General Hospitals Trustees.

A brutal attempt to murder has been made in a house at the rear of the French Police-station. A Chinese soldier went to the house, and a quarrel arose between him and a native woman living there. The soldier became very violent, and a man in the neighbourhood interfered to protect the woman, and nearly at the same time a native municipal constable also arrived. The soldier suddenly drew a sword he was carrying, and began cutting and slashing at the three people, inflicting serious injuries on all of them. Not content with this he stabbed the neighbour in the breast, inflicting, it is feared, a fatal wound, and afterwards made his escape into the city.

The annual meeting of No. 1 company of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps has been held. From the report of the committee it appeared that during the year eleven members had joined and seven resigned. The total strength of the company was now thirty-three. The committee recommended that, in accordance with Rule 21, Mr. Peter Maclean, the former captain of the company, be elected an honorary member. This suggestion was unanimously adopted.

A seaman named Henry Jones died suddenly in the Sailors' Home, of which he was an inmate. It appears he left the Home some time during the day, and returned shortly before four o'clock much intoxicated. He had been seen to drink six or seven large glasses of raw spirits rapidly one after the other, in company with some seamen on liberty from ships in harbour. On entering the Home, he lay down, and almost immediately became unconscious. Mr. Bowen, the Superintendent, was at once called, and sent for Dr. Johnston, who attended in a few minutes, and applied the usual remedies in such circumstances, but to no purpose, for deceased never recovered consciousness, and died about nine o'clock the same night. Next morning a post mortem examination was made by Drs. Johnston and Henderson, the result leaving no doubt that death was caused by excessive drinking, though it is said that deceased was not an habitual drunkard. Deceased was about fifty years of age, and was to have been shipped or board the Inverness. He formerly belonged to the Leander, but being injured by falling from aloft, was left behind.

The four pawnbrokers who were convicted at the Mixed Court, on the 14th March, of gambling in a house in the Woohoo-road, in company with a large number of others, and fined $100 each, were released from the Central Police Station on Sunday, on payment of $300 between them, by desire of the Assessor who heard the case, probably because it was found impossible to obtain the $400 from them. The Pekingese student, or teacher, was taken on Monday before the Mixed Court, and liberated after receiving a few pats on the hand. The lodging-house-keeper, who was fined $100 for allowing ingress to the gambling premises through his house, is still in custody; it is believed to be unlikely that he can pay the fine.

FORMOSA.

A correspondent of the North China Daily News writes as follows from Amping, under date 28th Feb.:—

Things are very dull here, nothing doing in the way of foreign shipping, and sugar going up. We have plenty of Chinese gunboats running here from Foochow, Swatow, and Amoy; they all bring ammunition and all kinds of military stores, which are being landed at this port. These include Spencer, Remington, and other rifles, small field-guns, tents, and everything pertaining to a Chinese army. Earthworks and small forts are being pushed forward with vigour. His Excellency the Futai is staying here, and has received orders to put the coast of Formosa in a proper state of defence, as the Spanish affair is not settled yet.

The Futai visited the forts early the other morning, in coolie dress, at the time the soldiers ought to have been drilling, but he found them all asleep. He caused all the officers to be put in cages, and took their mandarin buttons from them.

The commander of the fort was in the habit of keeping three months' pay of the soldiers in arrear, and if any became sick, he put them in a miserable hut outside the walls, and did not care whether they lived or died. The Futai heard of this treatment, and summoned the commander before him. The commander had only one ear—the Taipings had cut off the other. The Futai ordered the remaining one to be amputated, and it was immediately done.

Three or four native Christians have been decapitated here. There had been some fighting between the Christians and other people; two or three Spanish Roman Catholic priests are resident here, but it is not known if they had anything to do with the quarrel; it is certain, however, that the three or four Christians were put in prison, and that others tried to rescue them, whereupon those in prison were decapitated.

The Futai is kind as well as strict. He was out walking the other night in the city of Tai-wan-foo, wearing common clothes, when he heard a row between a coolie and a tea-shop keeper. The coolie had not enough money to pay for what he had had, but after a good deal of talking on both sides he got off. The Futai commenced a conversation with him, and the coolie said he had come in from the country trying to get work, as he had a mother and father to keep, and also wanted to get married; and when he had earned $100 he meant to go back. The Futai said he was very sorry and also very poor, and had nothing to eat himself. The coolie replied that he had a little chow, and would give him half. So they went and supped together. Next morning the coolie was surprised to receive $100 addressed to him.

There is great talking of putting up a telegraph and making railways here, but I cannot say if anything will come of it. The Futai goes in for foreign things, and the telegraph, if made, will be laid to Amoy and Foochow.

The district magistrate has been suspended by the Futai for some dereliction of duty.

P.S.—I have since heard there is to be a railway made from Anping to Kelung.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 5th April; the French mail from London Feb. 23 arrived out on the 4th April.

The collections in aid of the famine-stricken population in the North of China have been most satisfactory. No less than $13,000 have been obtained by the leading members of the Tung-wha Hospital, and it is estimated that at Hong Kong and Macao a total sum of about $18,000 will be got together.

The Daily Press gives some further particulars concerning the combination among the Cotton and Yarn Guilds, to which we recently alluded. It appears that on the 31st March the Min Un Tong, or Cotton and Yarn Guild of Canton, issued a circular to that trade containing nine rules for the observance of all the dealers in cotton and cotton yarn in Hong Kong and Canton. In the introduction is set forth the loss resulting from the discount on broken silver, and from the premium on bank-notes. It then enjoins the members of the guild to adhere to the rules, which may briefly be stated as follows:—In dealing with foreign hongs, Chinese dealers in cotton and yarn must first obtain a promise from the foreign merchant that he will accept broken silver on the same terms as bank-notes. Any infringement of this rule will be punished by the imposition of a fine of ten dollars on every bale of cotton purchased. A similar fine will be inflicted on any dealer in cotton in Hong Kong who dares to trade with the foreign hongs after ceasing commercial transactions with them. A fine will be imposed on any travelling merchant taking cotton or cotton yarn to Canton for sale. If, after business has been discontinued, the foreign hongs still refuse to accept broken silver equally with bank-notes, and any travelling trader should buy cotton or yarn from them, the members of the guild must cease dealing with him, or he must pay a fine of fifty dollars. The object of enforcing the circulation of broken silver is stated to be for the benefit of all concerned, but this can only be secured by the co-operation of all the other merchants in Hong Kong and Canton. Should any o them, therefore, have transactions in the future with foreign hongs the members of the guild must cease dealing with him. If any of the foreign hongs point out any Chinese merchants as being leaders of this movement, the members of the guild must cease to deal with him after settlement of the issue. Should any of the foreign brokers oppose or annoy the guild in this matter none of its members will be allowed to deal with him under pain of a heavy fine. The result of the issue of this document has been that business in the Cotton market has for the time been brought practically to a standstill, and foreign merchants have been thereby exposed to much inconvenience. The action of the Cotton Guilds is considered the more unreasonable as it is well known that, while they are only willing to pay for cotton with broken silver, they systematically refuse to accept it in payment for their produce.

Land, both in Hong Kong and at Kowloong, continues to rise in value. In the former place a large offer has recently been refused for some lots which would have been sold for a mere song a few years ago.

A rather unusual article has been advertised for sale, namely, a tame panther. He was brought up from Saigon, and was offered both to the Museum and Gardens, but declined in both cases from lack of accommodation, though the curator of the former expressed a strong desire for the skin and bones. The owner, however, did not wish the animal to be killed, and was offering it for what it would fetch. It is considered a pity that no place can be found in the Public Gardens for the many interesting specimens so constantly procurable in Hong Kong. A fine bear from Newchwang was similarly offered and declined, while a sixteen-foot boa constrictor would also have been contributed had there been any accommodation.

An inquest has been held upon a China woman, Chow Alan, who died under somewhat sad circumstances. It appears she had been suffering for the last two years from eruptions in the face, and her neighbours constantly teased her, alleging she was leprous. This at length so preyed on her mind that eventually it threw her into a state of temporary insanity, and during the absence of her husband she took a dose of opium. Her husband was sent for, and he administered an antidote, which partially revived her, but she subsequently got worse and died.

Progress is being made with the building for the new Lock Hospital. It is to be at the south-west corner of the site which has been prepared for the Civil Hospital.

U-Anam, who is charged with being one of the gang of robbers who recently made a raid upon Captain Sand's ship, has been committed for trial at the Supreme Court.

The Government Gazette publishes the finding of the Court of Inquiry into the loss of the British ship John O'Gaunt. It sets forth that the ship left Birkenhead on the 22nd August, with a cargo of coals, bound to Manila, and, that while making for the San Bernardino Strait in the Philippine Islands, the vessel struck on a reef on the morning of the 8th January last, near Bacan Island; and, after passing over this reef, that the vessel floated, but, having received serious damage and making water rapidly, the master and crew left the vessel in a boat, and that about ten or fifteen minutes after doing so the John O'Gaunt struck on another reef on the east side of the Island of Batag, and shortly afterwards sunk, and goes on to state that the Court find that the master, John Please, the number of whose certificate of competency is 11,429, was wanting in proper precaution in that he did not, directly he made out that laud was unexpectedly in sight, at once try for soundings and haul the ship to the wind and off shore; that the cables were not bent, nor the anchors unstowed, although the ship was running for the land, and by the reckoning was only twenty-six miles from it. The Court adjudge that the master's certificate be suspended for a period of six months.

From the China Mail we take the following:—

The Admiralty suit of Messrs. Adamson, Bell, and Co., against the owners of the Rosina was again heard on 21st March before the Chief Justice in Chambers. The Hon. G. Phillippo, instrueted by Messrs. Sharp, Toller, and Johnson, appeared for the promovents, the bondholders. Mr. Kingsmill, instructed by Mr. Dennys, appeared for the respondents, the owners of the ship, and for the master, an intervening party, in a claim for wages. His Lordship was of opinion that Mr. Kingsmill had no sufficient authority from the owners to appear for them, the master, who instructed the solicitor, being no longer their agent. He would, therefore, treat the case as an undefended one, unless some communication could be had with the owners to obtain their authority to appear. Mr. Bailey, the U.S. Consul, was in

Digitized by Google

Court, and his Lordship suggested that he might send a telegram to the owners on the subject, but Mr. Bailey replied that he could only do so through the Secretary of State; he would, however, see what could be done. His Lordship finally adjourned the case sine die, with leave to either party to bring it on at any time.

We hear that a large meeting of Chinese merchants was held on the 22nd March to consider the bank-note question. The premium on these notes has again assumed such formidable dimensions that our "Celestial" friends state they find it seriously affects their business transactions. A resolution was, we understand, passed at the meeting to memorialise the Government on the subject, with the view of some means being established whereby the native traders may not have to bear these heavy losses. The evil lies, as the Chinese Mail stated a few days ago, in the difficulty of adjusting the scales at the various banks with those used by the Chinese merchants. The Chinese allege that the manipulation of the former by the native employés invariably tells against the person who pays silver in, but we suspect there is a difference in what the Chinese call "Yeung Ping," or foreign scale, and what is known as the "Sz-ma Ping," or standard scale used by the native merchants.

The property of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company on Praya West has been sold to Chinese for the sum of $206,000.

By the last accounts from Canton Sir Brooke Robertson, H.B.M. Consul, was progressing favourably, and it was hoped that, with the return of more genial weather, he would speedily recover from the effects of his late illness.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 12th April; the P. and O. mail from London March 9th was received on the 9th April. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

A sitting of the Vice-Admiralty Court has been held before Mr. Justice Ford, when two cases connected with the Martaban and Kromatah, were heard. Against the first, a claim was preferred for $3,020 on behalf of the Borneo Company, Mr. Bond appearing as Proctor for the promoters and Mr. Burkinshaw for respondents. The further hearing of the case was adjourned. Against the Kromatah a final decree was passed for about $2,000 in favour of the master, Captain Craig, and a judgment on first default for the sum of $2,481 in favour of J. McAlpine and five others, and of $966 in favour of W. Partridge and five others, all mariners, but such is the antiquated absurdity of the regulations of our Vice-Admiralty Court, that, notwithstanding the absence of opposition, these men will have to wait for two months longer before a final decree on a second default can be passed in their favour and they get their money. The vessel was sold for $35,000, and the sum of $34,370 is in the hands of the Sheriff, and cannot be touched till eight weeks more have elapsed to pay the just dues from the ships.

Mr. W. E. Maxwell, on his return from Perak, will take Captain Walshe's place as Magistrate at the Police Court during the time the latter performs Major Dunlop's duties as Inspector-General of Police. Mr. Gottlieb will, therefore, retain his position in Province Wellesley.

Letters from a Sulu correspondent set forth that the Settlement was then progressing favourably in every respect. The town and block-houses are being improved, and streets and roads are being laid out and cleared. The Moros in the interior appear to confine their active hostility to attempts to steal cattle, in which they are invariably foiled and beaten off. Some of the minor chiefs and their followers, who are willing to submit, are deterred by fear of others who appear determined to retain their savage petty despotism a'outrance. Any attempts on the part of their slaves or dependents to go over or emigrate to the Spanish Settlements incur death, or worse, without appeal. The chief is but too often judge, jury, and magistrate, and frequently executioner rolled into one. However, the Spaniards are making every effort to counteract such diabolism, by granting refuge, dwelling-places, and land to all such well-disposed individuals as can manage to escape the savage toils. The various movements of the vessels employed in exploring and surveying of the Straits Archipelago are described at length in the correspondences, and when completed will doubtless be a boon to navigators long required in that quarter.

A telegram to the Hon. W. H. Read, Consul-General for the Netherlands, states that the following ports on the West Coast of Sumatra have been opened to trade:—"Telok Kroet, Rigas, Kitapan, Passir, and Tenom."

The Diario announces that owing to the arrival at Manila of several thousands of cases of petroleum from China, the price of the oil at that city had fallen to seven dollars a case, which amount, though one-third less than the exorbitant rate hitherto ruling, is yet double of what the article had cost before. There was then a prospect of a further fall, several large consignments of petroleum being announced as on the way to Manila. The great drought which has brought about the failure of the greater portion of the paddy crops in the Philippines has caused mangoes to be remarkably abundant there this year, which, says the Diario, confirms the native proverb—"Year of many mangoes, year of little rice."

The Penang Gazette publishes a statement of the Penang municipal revenue and expenditure for 1876 as compared with those of the previous year, together with estimate for 1877. Province Wellesley is included, and the following table gives the totals:—

Revenue	...$115,424 98	...$123,809 34	...$129,578 00
Balance from previous year	18,023 82	9,114 72	2,080 56
Total ...	...$133,448 80	$132,924 06	$131,658 56
Expenditure ...	...$124,334 08	...$130,843 50	...$121,289 00
Balance to next year ...	9,114 72	2,080 56	10,369 56
Total ...	...$133,448 80	$132,924 06	$131,658 56

The up-keep of roads and bridges is the principal item of expenditure and cost in 1875, $52,160.64, in 1876 $38,344.42, while the estimate for 1877 is $40,000. The police contribution comes next in cost, and averages about $20,000 annually.

In commenting on our article on the "Treaty with the Nine States" the Straits Times says:—

"The mistake made in accepting or agreeing to the treaty or engagement may be summed up briefly as follows:—It condoned the insolent and ignorant defiance of British authority, without exacting due penalty in the shape of a contribution for the expense of the war, and a great opportunity was missed of formulating clearly and distinctly the relative position of these petty States towards the paramount power. And lastly, while for any power of good it is not worth the paper it is written on, it has put the Maharajah of Johore in a false position, and it tends to future complications, which may necessitate further interference by, and expense to, the paramount power."

Market Reports.

(For dates see first page.)

YOKOHAMA.—A better feeling had been apparent in most goods, Cotton Yarn 16/24 having especially attracted much attention, which had resulted in a large business; for 28/32 the inquiry had been comparatively trifling. As regards Shirtings, the lower qualities of 8¼ lbs. and higher makes of 9 lbs. showed an improvement. T. Cloths, 7 lbs. and Drills had been wanted for Army purposes. Indigo Shirtings and Prints were fairly saleable, and Turkey Reds and Black Velvets were in better demand at higher rates. A good inquiry has existed for Lawns. In Woollens, a considerable improvement in Mousselines, and a good business in Army Cloth and blankets for Government requirements, were the only matters worth recording. In Metals, the only noticeable feature had been sales at public auction of assorted Round and Square Bar Iron and damaged Nail rods, the former realising fair prices considering the dull state of the market.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says:—There has been a somewhat better demand for goods during the past month, and, although prices generally show no improvement, the tone of the market must be considered healthier. Grey Shirting, have been neglected, in consequence of heavy arrivals from Yokohama on native account. Turkey Red Cambrics are slightly firmer. Black Orleans were inquired for a few days since, but at closing the demand is inactive. A decided improvement has taken place in plain Mousselines, both as regards value and deliveries. Some sales of Blankets to the Government are reported, and the market has been cleared of good qualties. Iron: ½ inch Nailrods are saleable, other descriptions being very dull.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—During the interval business had been almost nil. The settlements had only amounted to 600 piculs, and arrivals had been almost nil; in fact the season was considered as virtually closed. Quotations were entirely nominal. The undernoted had been the shipments since the 9th March:—Per O. and O. steamer oceanic, 282,878 lbs. viz:—184,705 lbs. for New York, 80,630 lbs. for San Francisco, 13,721 lbs. for Chicago, 3,300 lbs. for Salt Lake City, 522 lbs. for Boston. For transhipment at Hiogo to Coulnakyle, 184,888 lbs. for New York; for transhipment at Shanghai, 47,512 lbs. for New York; for England, 390 lbs. Export from 1st May to date:—

	Current Season.	1875-6.
To New York	10,555,086	13,052,233
„ San Francisco... ...	2,966,939	2,975,258
„ Boston, Chicago, &c.,...	2,226,714	2,559,322
„ England	200,195	37,537
Total	15,948,934	18,624,350

HIOGO-OSAKA.—A rather larger business had been transacted during the month, confined chiefly to common descriptions, and purchases of 2,600 piculs are reported. Settlements for the season to date had reached 58,500 piculs, against 56,125 for the same time last year. Stocks were estimated at 1,200 piculs, and were held for such irregular prices that reliable quotations could not be given. The Coulnakyle arrived from Yokohama on the 5th March, but had not completed her cargo for New York, although fully engaged.

Digitized by Google

SHANGHAI.—Black: A fair business had been done during the week, the settlements being 7,000 chests. The stock was rapidly being cleared off. The prospect for the new season was that there would be less tea than last season; but the opening rates for leaf in the country, on which much depends, were not yet known. In Green Teas there had been again a good business done. Teas had been readily taken at rates last quoted, and had there been more to buy the settlements would have been larger. Although the stock had shrunk to a small figure, there had been no rise in prices, and it was evidently the very low cost that was tempting buyers, as there seemed no other inducement to ship medium and common teas by sailing vessels that can hardly arrive in New York before August, at which season the market is always most slack; and new Japans and Pingsueys were freely on offer. Arrivals were already in excess of the total of last season.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—In the early part of the period under review a rather active demand was experienced for Hanks, and prices advanced $30 to $40 per picul. Subsequently the inquiry subsided, and the advance had been lost. At the close there was nothing doing, and quotations were to a great extent nominal. In Oshius a fair business had been done at lower prices. The stock at the close was 1,500 bales, against 300 bales at the same date last season. Settlements, from 1st July, 1876, to date, 20,175 bales, against corresponding period—Season 1875-76, 12,100, 1874-75, 9,350, 1873-74, 12,800.

SHANGHAI.—There had been no market, home telegrams continuing to report the article unsaleable at prices almost approaching the rates current a year since. The only business doing had been consignments on Chinese account, and a little speculation amongst natives in coarse Silks. A report had been circulated that Blue Elephant had been contracted for by the silkmen at the opening of the market up-country; the quantity was, however, only 80 bales, and the price settled, viz., the equivalent of Tls. 440 per picul, can be no guide as to the dealers' ideas generally of what the foreigner will be ready to pay. With exchange on a level almost with current quotations, the reported price paid for this chop last season was Tls. 100 per picul lower. The unsold stock amounted to about 12,000 bales.

THE VOLUNTEER QUESTION IN JAPAN.

ACCORDING to the latest accounts, the Foreign Ministers have not given their support to the residents in Yokohama with respect to the establishment there of a Volunteer Corps, to which the Governor of the place had taken exception. The motives which influenced the representatives in coming to this decision have yet to be explained before it will be possible to say whether they can be considered to have acted correctly in the matter, in face of the obvious considerations in a contrary direction which must at once suggest themselves. It is, however, no doubt possible that on the matter coming before the Ministers some points may have been pressed upon them of such a nature that they could hardly feel justified in actively supporting the Volunteer movement, if the Japanese Government really objected to it. But, however this may be, there can scarcely be two opinions as to the Japanese authorities having acted very unwisely in raising any objection to a movement the only possible effect of which could be to throw some additional weight on the side of law and order. There is something supremely ludicrous in the idea of the national dignity of Japan being slighted because a small Volunteer corps is established in Yokohama. No doubt the Japanese Government feel perfectly secure even while open rebellion is raging in the country; but this is, perhaps, because they are used to it, and they ought not to be very hard upon foreigners who, being accustomed to live in more peaceful countries, are inclined to guard themselves against danger, even though they have all the prowess of Japanese arms, Imperial or rebel, to protect them. But, seriously speaking, a Volunteer force such as that which it was proposed to get up in Yokohama would be really almost entirely in the nature of an armed police, and would, in the case of any danger threatening the foreign settlements, be of undoubted service, both in its direct influence and by its moral effects. No valid objection could therefore be reasonably raised against it; and we cannot but regret that the Japanese authorities have thought it necessary to interfere in the matter. If danger threatened the foreign settlements, the Volunteer force might be of some use. If no danger threatened it would be merely a means of taking good healthy exercise and recreation with the exhilarating feeling that doing so may possibly turn out of some use some day. What there should be in this insulting to the dignity of the Japanese Government it is certainly somewhat difficult to conceive, and we cannot think they were right in concluding that because the young gentlemen in Yokohama intended to go through their goose-steps, the authorities were necessarily called upon to commence taking steps themselves. It is no more an insult to the Japanese Government that a Volunteer corps should be formed there than it is insulting to our Government that Volunteers should exist in this country; and the extremely techy tone which has been assumed in this matter is certainly to be much deprecated. With every wish to respect to the full the rights of Japan, it is impossible to believe that the existence of a small Volunteer force in Yokohama could in any way detract from the Government's dignity; and its having raised an objection to so obvious a measure of precaution can hardly fail to be looked upon by its best wishers as an evidence rather of weakness than of strength.

A WARNING TO THE CHINA TEAMEN.

IN the course of his report on the trade of Shanghai for the year 1875, of which we have given a résumé in recent issues, Sir WALTER MEDHURST calls attention to a very important bearing of the want of care which has of late been displayed by the Chinese in the finishing and packing of teas. This evil has long been the subject of complaint among foreign merchants, but has hitherto attracted little or no attention among those who are most concerned with regard to it, namely, the Chinese merchants, tea dealers and growers. For years past the teas have been found to be more and more defective in firing and packing, so much so that they are now recognised as in a sense a perishable article, and the utmost anxiety is always felt to clear them off before they have lost their flavour and so deteriorated as to become unsaleable except at a heavy reduction upon their original value. Of course so long as this risk falls entirely upon the foreign merchant, it is of little interest to the China dealer and of less to the producers up country. These classes can hardly have been unaware that some such risk was being run; but the hastiness which has ordinarily characterised purchases has given them every encouragement to become more and more careless in preparing the teas for the foreign market, and more and more eager to hurry them forward. For this they could scarcely be considered much open to blame. Teas of questionable powers of duration might perhaps be considered an equitable return for heavy-sized shirtings; and so long as the China dealers found that the foreign buyers were contented to take the teas, they had no very great reasons to urge the producers to adopt more suitable means of preparation. Even from their own point of view exclusively, there was no very urgent need for them to take action. China, until late years, had the practical monopoly of the tea-trade, and might almost do as she liked, both as to the quality of the tea supplied and the prices which could be demanded for it. But a very important change has now taken place, and it is time that the Chinese teamen took warning that they will be jeopardising their trade unless they take some steps to improve the firing and preparation. Sir WALTER MEDHURST points out that unless some change takes place China must look for increasing competition in black teas from India and in green teas from Japan; and there can be no doubt that the warning thus given is by no means premature. Indian teas are steadily gaining popularity and the Japan greens are also competing with those from China. The firing and preparation of both these classes of tea are far superior to that of the teas from China; and Sir WALTER is of opinion that unless some means can be found to alter the present system, which leaves the production of the teas so much in the hands of small proprietors, China will be destined to find her produce supplanted by that from India and Japan. In the former country great advantage is obtained by the planting, picking and firing being all in one hand; and this advantage could be equally gained in China were an opportunity afforded for the introduction of European capital and enterprise in the tea-producing districts. This consideration, it may be hoped, will press itself upon the consideration of the Chinese Government. Hitherto the grounds for opening up the country, urged upon them, have been so plainly to the advantage of foreign traders that the Chinese, imbued strongly with the old erroneous ideas of political economy, to the effect that what is one man's gain must of necessity be another's loss, have been disposed to overlook the great benefits which foreign trade offered to their country. The tea-trade has, however, now become so fully established, and has attained such magnitude, that it is impossible for them to be unaware of the great stake they have in maintaining it. Even if looked upon only from the amount of duty which the Government receives—the point of view, by the way, from which it is most likely to impress the native official—the trade with foreigners in tea cannot but be considered as by far too important to lose; and if the time come, as seems by no means improbable, when it can only be retained by granting some facilities for establishing factories in the tea districts, the Chinese Government may be disposed to relax the restrictions which at present stand in the way of this and all other foreign enterprise in the interior of the country.

SUBSCRIPTIONS have been invited by the Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society in aid of the sufferers by the famine in North China, to which we have called attention during the last month. They have authorised the Rev. Mr. RICHARD at Chefoo to advance £500 for the relief of the most urgent cases. Contributions may be paid into Messrs. BARCLAY'S, bankers for the Society. Messrs. BOURNE and Co., Mark-lane, have also been successful in obtaining contributions. We can assure all those who have the means that the best guarantee of the bona fides of the case is that the foreign residents in the various ports in China have heartily responded to the cry of the starving populations.

WE understand that up to the present no appointment of Consul at Shanghai has been made in succession to Sir WALTER MEDHURST. It is believed that some re-arrangement of the Consulate staff and its duties, is under consideration at the Foreign-office, in connection with the proposed new rules of the Supreme Court, and with a view to effecting a further economy in the working of the two establishments.

WE understand that the judgment of the arbitrator in the case of the Agra Bank versus MCCALL—their late manager at Shanghai—has been given in favour of the Bank.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

On Wednesday last, the 9th inst., the Chinese Envoys paid a visit to the South Kensington Museum, and took special note of a portion of the building which is proposed as a model for the Exhibition building which it is hoped may be hereafter opened in Shanghai in connection with the Polytechnic. Sir Walter Medhurst and Mr. Bourne were present with the Envoys and party. They also visited the same day Sir Joseph Whitworth's collection of models and firearms at Thomas's Hotel, Berkeley-square. In the evening they were present at the anniversary dinner of the Royal Literary Fund, when Kwo Fah-Jen responded to the toast of "The literature of other countries." The translation of his speech, as given by Dr. Macartney, is as follows :—

The Minister is more grateful than he can express for the kindness with which, as the newly-arrived Minister of China, he has been received. China has a literature some three thousand years old, a literature for which it would be impossible for the Chinese not to entertain great respect for the matter of it, as it supplies rules by which the individual is moralised and the people of the empire are governed—respect for the form of it, as the beauties of its style are great. Being here to-day, however, as a guest, in his capacity of Chinese Minister, he will not say more with reference to the literature of his own country. The Chinese people very generally appreciate the ability which has distinguished Europe above any other quarter of the globe. In particular they respect the names of Matteo Ricci, Vestiest, and Schall, to whom they were indebted for instruction in mathematics ; instruction by which the Astronomical Board at Peking is still guided in its calculations. From Europe China also received her knowledge of the mechanical contrivances by which time is marked, and of the appliances of war, both artillery and small arms. The superiority of Western nations in construction of all kinds has been for hundreds of years admitted in China. The secret of it, and of the advance in other branches of knowledge, is that their scholars are indefatigable in their endeavours to arrive by experiments at perfection. It is the usage of all Governments to exalt men of learning, but the Governments of Western nations go further in the honour they do them, and by the honour they do them they stimulate their people to follow. In the three months the Minister has been in London, he has met Professor Tyndal, Mr. Warren de la Rue, Professor Owen, Dr. Hooker, and Mr. Spottiswoode, and having been present at the lectures delivered on electricity, colour, light, and heat, he has been greatly impressed by the learning displayed in them, and the pains taken to be accurate. Thus is science in England made the property of all, and even a casual listener has his ideas expanded and his knowledge increased. Since his arrival the Minister has had an opportunity of observing the excellence of the Government of England in the highest places, aided as it is by the Council, the Houses of Parliament. When a Government is so remarkable for the spirit which animates it, its men of learning will attain the distinction they do attain. The Minister would address himself specially to Lord Derby, as President of this society. He would express the gratification which it affords him to notice its success. He begs at the same time to thank Lord Derby and the committee for their invitation to this dinner. He trusts that the prosperity of England may daily increase, and that with its increase the talent of their men of letters may be daily developed ; and that while those beholden for aid to the society's fund may pass their old age in comfort, the beauty of their works may endure for generations. (Cheers.)

THE ICHANG DISTURBANCE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Contrary to what is usual, I notice that the China papers deal very gently with the outrage which has been recently committed at Ichang, in consequence, at least, as is alleged, of the misunderstanding with regard to the laying out of the foreign concession there. Probably this is a natural reaction from the too sensational tone at one time prevalent in the China press ; but I think the affair is one which undoubtedly calls for strong notice, especially at the present time, when we are having dinned into our ears, usque ad nauseam, the progress which the Chinese are making and the increasing friendliness of their disposition towards foreigners. The Missionaries were hounded out of Ichang by the mob instigated by the literati, and Her Majesty's Consul has had to return from the place without laying out the ground. A little oil is thrown into the salad in the fact that the mob has pelted the mandarins as well as Mr. King ; but, after all, this is a poor consolation, and makes it only the more glaringly apparent how little we can rely upon the Chinese Government to carry out even the simplest agreements. But the question is, "What is going to be done in the matter ?" Are we to wait for the opening of Ichang till, on the one hand, the mob have done pelting the mandarins and exercising Missionaries, and, on the other, Sir Thos. Wade has finished his memorandum, and the Chefoo Convention (under which this pelting took place) has been ratified by our Government, or will the treaty have a supplementary clause providing for satisfaction for this little affair, as well as for the Yunnan murder ? The only difficulty is that this would necessitate another memorandum, and before it was finished there would probably be another outrage, and this would delay matters still further.—Yours faithfully,

London, May 9, 1877. OBSERVER.

THE PROPOSED COINAGE FOR HONG KONG.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I notice with pleasure that you state in your article upon the proposed minting of a coin here for Hong Kong and the Straits, that the subject is at present under the consideration of the Government. It may be of service to suggest a plan, which I believe has not yet been mooted, but which would probably solve the difficulty in a very simple way. Could not our Indian Mints coin a double rupee, which would approximate to the Mexican dollar in value, and which could be declared the current coin in Hong Kong and the Straits. It would of course be of less value than the Mexican dollar, but it would, I doubt not, circulate at its equivalent value, and would, being guaranteed by the British name, soon command the confidence of the Chinese and other natives ; while it would have the additional advantage of being current in India, and be thus the less subject to rapid fluctuations from purely local causes.

Trusting you will find room for these few lines,—I am Sir, yours faithfully, Manchester, May 8, 1877. W.

THE CEYLON ENDOWMENTS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Although the vote in the House of Commons with reference to the question of Ecclesiastical Endowments in Ceylon was, as you point out, somewhat large, I can scarcely think that the Government will act wisely in taking steps in the matter if there is any idea entertained of so doing. I may perhaps be permitted to point out that there is really no just cause for complaint whatever, and that people generally in Ceylon are well contented with matters as they are at the present time. The sum of £14,000 annually is not large for such a Colony ; and the Government there have always acted with scrupulous fairness in making grants irrespective of religious denomination, while the natives own temple lands, and are thus also taken into consideration as far as it is reasonable to do so. The question which has been brought before the House of Commons, has really been raised almost exclusively by one well-known Nonconformist in Ceylon, who happens to be in a position to make his views heard somewhat further than those of other people. I am pretty certain that if the real opinion of residents in that colony were taken it would be found that they are not desirous of any change ; and I trust the Government here will not allow itself to be misled by what is, in reality, only an agitation on the part of a very limited number of ill-advised enthusiasts.—Yours faithfully,

MODERATION.

London, May 10, 1877.

Literature, Science, &c.

During the current week a matter of some importance has attracted no little attention in literary and scientific circles. It seems that since the Senate of the University of London passed a resolution to admit women to its medical degrees, under Mr. Cowper Temple's Act, which enables them to do so without a new charter, the doctors have been troubled in their minds about the probable result of the measure, and have been desirous of opening the other professions also, so as not to encourage undue competition for medical honours. Others, however, are still hoping to turn the tide, and 250 medical graduates of the University have signed a memorial to the Senate praying them to rescind their resolution. This retrograde movement was proposed in Convocation on the 15th inst., when a resolution that it was undesirable for this University to admit women to degrees in medicine before it should have considered the general question of their admission to degrees in all faculties, was carried by 142 votes to 129, the result being hailed with much cheering by the medical gentlemen present. The "Extraits des Histoires du Japon," which have been in course of preparation by the Society for the Study of Japanese, under the presidency of Count Chas. de Montblane, are completed. The work is contained in three fasciculi, and is preceded by an analytical introduction, drawn up by M. Imawura Warau. The preface to Mr. Joyner's monthly sheets contains the description of his station at Tokei, and of the instruments with which that is provided. The most important difference between his outüt and that of most European stations is the presence of a King's barograph and of Palmieri's electrometer and seismometer, for the last-named of which instruments there will probably be abundant use. Messrs. Harper Bros., of New York (London, Trübner and Co.), have published a new work on Japan, entitled the "Mikado's Empire," by Mr. W. E. Griffis, who has collected a mass of materials respecting the Japanese—the result of eight years' acquaintance with them in the United States and their own country. The volume is nearly equally divided between a History of Japan from B.C. 660 to A.D. 1872, and the author's own personal observations, experiences, and studies in the country. A notable feature in the former division is the conclusion arrived at with regard to the Ainōs, Mr. Griffis stating that he is "inclined to believe that India is their original home; that the basic stock of the Japanese people is Ainō; and that in this fact lies the root of marvellous difference in the psychology of the Japanese and their neighbours, the Chinese." The second section of the work deals with much that is of interest in connection with social topics.

The Committee of the Athenæum Club have exercised the power vested in them for this purpose by the election, without ballot, of the following gentlemen distinguished in literature and art, viz., Professor Baynes, LL.D., editor of the new edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica; Mr. Martin Duncan, F.R.S., President of the Geographical Society; Sir John Gilbert, R.A.; Dr. Oldham, F.R.S., late Director of the Geographical Survey of India; and Mr. Leslie Stephen, author of "English Thought in the Eighteenth Century," and other works.

The eighty-eighth anniversary festival of the Royal Literary Fund took place on the 9th inst., at Willis's Rooms, under the chairmanship of the Earl of Derby, who, in proposing prosperity to the institution, referred to the benefits which it had been the means of conferring, and strongly urged its claims for liberal support. The Chinese Ambassador, who (as noticed elsewhere, was present, spoke to the toast of "The Literature of all Countries."

The Geographical Magazine for the present month contains a map of the famine districts of Bombay and Madras. It has also an interesting article on the Himalayan System, in reply to one which recently appeared in the Calcutta Review. It is noticed that Dr. Thomson, was the first traveller, after the Chinese pilgriam Fa-Hian, who reached the summit of the Karakorum Pass.

Monetary and Commercial.

The Tea Market remains much as was reported last week, and, although prices have been a shade steadier consequent upon a less quantity having been offered at the public sales, there is but little prospect of renewed animation. The low prices so long ruling here, and the losses reported to have been made by teamen in China, would seem undoubtedly calculated to lead to a late opening of the market, and to a low range of prices for the coming season. But private advices from China point to a repetition of the old, old story. The fleet of fast steamers there already waiting for cargo, and the idea generally prevalent that an opportunity of recouping past losses will occur this year, seem only too likely to force on business in the old style. Indeed, some buyers in China are contemplating with the greatest complacency purchasing the new teas at 20 per cent. above their London value. Such being the case, people who have had so much bitter experience of the trade would probably forecast the result of the account sales which will be made up in London between July and September; but, unfortunately, some too eager buyers seem to be impervious to the teachings of experience.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London during the week which ended on the 5th inst. amounted to 3,568,049 lbs., which was 351,226 lbs. more than was cleared during the corresponding week of 1876. Of this quantity 2,337,289 lbs. went for home consumption, 294,222 lbs. for exportation, 2,933 lbs. for ships' stores, 933,605 lbs. went coastwise to various outports, 241,386 lbs. having been for immediate exportation. The tea duty paid in London last week was £58,432 4s. 6d., which was £2,074 17s. in excess of the sum received from the same source of revenue during the corresponding week of last year.

In the Silk Market the dulness reported for some time past continues, and attention is mainly directed to the prospects of the European crop. The losses on shipments from Japan are spoken of, but as far as we have been able to ascertain, the credits under which the banks bought drafts have all been honoured, though in one or two cases some pressure had to be used to induce acceptance.

According to the Salut Public, the returns of the Condition House for the past week were 941 bales, weighing 54,601 kilos., against 1,262 and 84,114, the figures for the corresponding period of 1876. Towards the end of the week some fair sales were made for England, both in black and coloured tissues. The prices obtained were disastrous, not only considering the cost of the raw material with which the goods were manufactured, but even at the present price of silk. It would be advantageous if all holders would sell frankly at present prices; but a large number, before accepting those rates, seem to be unwilling to lighten their stocks without having tolerably certain information as to the coming yield. Upon this point the paper above named says:—"The news relative to that supply, without being decisive, may, so far, be considered as good. Complaints as to the hatching are rare. The mortality and the irregularity reported, either at the birth of the worm or at its first change, are not serious. The fall in the temperature which we have experienced for some days past delays vegetation and the incubation of the seed in France and the northern parts of Italy. The result is a backwardness in the operations, which always constitutes a condition rather unfavourable to the ulterior changes of the silkworm. But at present no grounds for forming any prognostication exist. The statistics of the Condition-house for the month of April show the following results:—2,753 bales, representing a weight of 164,197 kilos., against 5,448 and 371,089, the figures for the same month last year, or a diminution of nearly 56 per cent. Since the beginning of the year the figures show 15,237 bales, weighing 923,520 kilos., against 23,981 and 1,613,082 in the corresponding period of 1876, or a decrease of 43 per cent."

In the Produce Markets there has been but little alteration during the week. The advance in several articles arising out of speculative demand is in some instances barely maintained, but the general consumptive inquiry has increased. Tea and Silk are quiet, but steady. The demand for Coffee continues active, and a further advance has been established. The improvement in Sugar has also been maintained, and there has been an extensive business in China at rising values. Cotton is extremely depressed. Camphor, Hemp, Isinglass, Japan Wax, Rattans, Sago Flour, Tapioca and Tin have improved. Pepper and Rice are quiet, with a declining tendency.

The Gazette notifies that the Japan Paper-Making Company is in course of liquidation, and that all communications having reference thereto are to be addressed to the liquidators at 1, Jeffrey's-square, St. Mary Axe, London.

We have to note the failure of Mr. Edward Holdsworth, of Shanghai, but at present in London. The meeting of creditors is convened for the 16th inst.

Messrs. J. Henry Schroder and Co. announce the numbers of 660 bonds, amounting to £100,000 of the Imperial Government of Japan Customs Loan for £1,000,000 sterling, 1870, which have been drawn for payment on and after August, next.

The annual meeting of Reuter's Telegram Company (Limited) will be held at the offices on the 31st inst., for the reception of the report and the declaration of a dividend.

Tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 9th inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £243,200, and Bombay, £21,800. Tenders on all presidencies for telegrams at 1s. 9⅛d. will receive about 21 per cent.; above in full (no bills). These figures show a rise of ¼d. to ⅜d. compared with those of last week; but it was expected that the price would have been higher.

Quotations for Bar Silver have improved, and a considerable business has been done at prices ranging from 54d. to 54⅝d. per oz., this last price having been reached on the announcement that the Bank of Bengal had raised their rate to 12 per cent. Mexican Dollars have also improved in value, and some parcels received from New York and the West Indies have been sold at 54¼d. The price is now better, 55d. per oz. the nearest quotation.

The directors of the Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland have declared a dividend of 5 per cent. per annum for the year 1876. The English shareholders can receive their dividend in London, at the exchange 12.1 florins per pound sterling on presentation of the coupons at the offices of Messrs. Samuel, Montagu, and Co., Old Broad-street.

With reference to the remarks made by our Hamburg correspondent in the last issue of this paper, with regard to the meeting of the Great Northern Telegraph Company, we are requested to state that the final dividend for 1876 was not 5 crowns (6s.), but 2½ crowns, say 2s. 9d. per share; and that the Russian Government has not, as stated, sequestered one of the Company's Asiatic cables, and, indeed, that nothing has occurred to lead to any apprehension of such a measure.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's cable between Shanghai and Amoy is still interrupted, but communication by the Company's lines with Shanghai and the Japanese stations continues perfect. The Eastern Extension Company's lines are working well.

COURT OF APPEAL.

PROVOND V. LANGTON.

This was an action of a remarkable character—an action against a Manchester firm for selling cotton stuffs largely adulterated with mineral matters—and it was also an appeal on the part of the defendants with a view to have the trial at Manchester. The plaintiff, a merchant in London, trading to Shanghai, ordered of the defendants, a Manchester firm, a quantity of "grey shirtings," and they were sold, packed in Manchester, and delivered there to carriers for the plaintiff, the purchaser, by whom they were sent to Shanghai. On their arrival there it was said they were found to be largely adulterated with mineral matters mixed in the size with which the cloths were dressed, so as to increase the weight. The goods were sent back from Shanghai, and thus thrown upon the plaintiff's hands, and he sued the defendants, the Manchester firm, for damages, laying his venue in London. The defendants obtained an order from the Judge at Chambers, Baron Cleasby, to change the venue to Manchester; and the plaintiff, on an affidavit by himself and his attorney, the effect of which was that he could not have a fair trial at Manchester, applied to set aside the order and restore the venue to London. The affidavit of the plaintiff stated "I verily believe that the sole and main reason of the defendants for desiring to change the venue is that from my knowledge of Manchester I believe it to be the fact that as the majority of the special jurors in Manchester are manufacturers, or persons having identical interests with manufacturers, there will be a strong prejudice against a person setting up such claims as in this action; and I verily believe that for this reason I should not obtain in Manchester such a fair and impartial trial and consideration of the case as in London or Middlesex." The attorney of the plaintiff made a similar affidavit, adding that he believed that consideration of expense and practical convenience with reference to witnesses also were in favour of a trial in London; but upon this point the affidavits were very contradictory, and there were affidavits on the part of the defendants to show that the convenience was the other way. On the other hand it was stated that the defendants set up that the goods had been injured in their transit, the witnesses as to which would be in London. The Judges of the Queen's Bench Division, the Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Mellor, set aside the order of Baron Cleasby, and directed the trial to be heard in London, on condition of the plaintiff paying any extra expense thereby occasioned to the defendants. From that decision the defendants appealed.

After some discussion, it being pressed upon the Court that the defence itself turned on evidence necessarily in London, as to the alleged injury to the goods in course of transit, they arrived at the conclusion that it would be best to confirm the decision of the Queen's Bench Division, and restore the venue to London.

PARLIAMENT.—HOUSE OF COMMONS.

SIR JAMES BROOKE.

Mr. BAILLIE-COCHRANE said he wished to ask the right hon. gentleman the member for Greenwich a question of which he had given him private notice. In the speech which the right hon. gentleman delivered on the 7th inst., a passage occurred which did not attract his notice at the time it was delivered, but to which his attention had since been directed by the friends of the late Sir James Brooke. The passage was to the effect that the right hon. gentleman "did not recollect a more painful scene than the slaughter of the Dyaks by the soldiers of Her Majesty under Sir James Brooke." The fact was that the Admiral in command of the station—Sir Thomas Cochrane—gave the order for the attack on the forts, and that the conduct of Sir James Brooke was justified after full inquiry by the House of Commons. He wished to ask the right hon. gentleman whether he intended to convey any censure upon the officers of Her Majesty's troops who only obeyed the instructions they received from the Admiral, or upon that distinguished man the late Sir James Brooke.

Mr. GLADSTONE said that the words quoted by his hon. friend were, he believed, not precisely correct, but they did not essentially vary the effect of the impression he wished to convey. He was made to state that it was the soldiers whose conduct he blamed, but his recollection was that he referred, as he certainly had intended to do, to the naval operations; that they were performed by the guns of the ships, not in the minor warfare in detail. Undoubtedly his opinion was that the act was one of great and gross cruelty, but the responsibility had been entirely removed from the shoulders of Her Majesty's troops. He had forgotten when he spoke to mention that a commission of inquiry had been appointed; but he did state in the most explicit manner, and he was glad to have the opportunity of saying again, that neither the Commander-in-Chief, the Admiral of the station, who was not cognisant of the facts, nor Sir James Brooke, a man of great energy, ability, and high character, and who was very much esteemed by men who were most worthy of esteem, and still less the officers and sailors of Her Majesty's fleet, could be in any degree held responsible for having acted strictly under the orders they received. He believed he had stated that the whole matter was brought under the cognisance of the Government at home, and also under the notice of the House of Commons. There was an animated debate in reference to it, and on a division a large majority sustained the conduct of Sir James Brooke and those who were concerned with him in the operations referred to, and his opinion as one of the minority was that no blame could possibly attach to Sir James Brooke personally. The responsibility had been taken by the authorities at home and by a majority of the House of Commons.

THE Prince of Wales, Princess Louise, the Marquis of Lorne, and suite honoured the old galleries of Messrs. Agnew, Waterloo-place, with a visit on the 11th inst., to inspect the collection of water-colour drawings made in Japan by Mr. Frank Dillon during the years 1875-76.

THE Eastern and Australian Mail Steam Company's steamer Brisbane arrived at Singapore May 10 (one day early), with the Queensland mails of April 22, which are due in London on June 18.

IT is stated that a Japanese Prince, a nephew of the Mikado, who is staying at Berlin, has announced his betrothal with Madame von Tettau, the widow of a Prussian officer.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—There is no change to notice in our market this week, the public sales continue on the reduced scale, and thus the steadier tone in prices for common Teas has been maintained. The better grades sell slowly at previous prices. Scented Teas and Green Teas show no material alteration. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings continue firm; common to good kinds have sold at previous rates; fair to medium kinds show no change. Good to fine Kaisow kinds are well supported, being comparatively scarce. In Pak Lin kinds the few sales have been at about previous prices. Black-leaf kinds: Common to fair common show no change; good common kinds have sold rather dearer; fair to medium kinds are still relatively cheap; good to fine kinds are firm, but business is limited in amount. New-make kinds: Common to fair remain firm; further arrivals of new season's have come to hand, and have sold from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 7d. per lb., being about former rates. Oolongs and Souchongs show no material change. Scented Teas: Canton Capers sell slowly at rather easier rates for common to good kinds. Orange Pekoes remain much as last week. Foochow kinds, both of Caper and Orange Pekoe, remain in fair request at full prices. Green Teas: The demand is still sluggish, and prices realised at public sale have been somewhat irregular, especially for common to medium kinds.

Messrs. Lloyd and Cheshire's Circular says:—We are unable to quote any improvement in our market, although the low prices ruling for common Black and Red leaf Congou has given buyers more confidence. New-make Congous: A small consignment of season 1877-78 has arrived, and sold at from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d. per lb.; in old seasons a few sales have been made at rather easier values. Souchongs are offering at lower rates, but even at the reduction buyers are not eager. Oolongs have not been pressed for sale quite so much lately, but prices show no alteration. Scented Teas: Canton Capers sell slowly at rather easier rates, and Orange Pekoes are dull of sale. Foochow Orange Pekoe is rather scarce, and previous rates are maintained. Green Teas: The amount offered privately, and by auction has been more than the trade require, and some very low prices have been made, especially for the inferior grades of Young Hyson and Imperial. Ping Suey still meet with competition at a slightly lower range of price. Japan Greens sell very irregularly.

The public sales have comprised 11,749 packages, nearly the whole of which were sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

SILK.

Messrs. Hogg, Walker, and Co.'s Circular says:—The market continues very quiet, and prices, though irregular, remain unaltered. The news of the prospects of the European crop are far from favourable. Telegrams just arrived report the weather in the Silk-growing districts as cold and rainy. The deliveries are 556 bales, against 612 bales at the same time last month, being from 1st to 9th inst. inclusive—China, 358 bales; Canton, 133; Japan, 36; Bengal, 29.

Messrs. Arles, Dufour, and Co.'s Lyons Circular of May 5 contains the subjoined report:—Repeated advices of large auctions of Silk goods in New York at ruinous prices, the approach of the new crop, and the war in the East have contributed to bring the position of our market from bad to worse and, during a fortnight the few sales effected have only proved the anarchy of prices. In the last week of the month, Paris and English buyers began to operate; some important purchases in black Silks were effected, and a few orders in coloured goods placed at about the same prices as in April last. These transactions, coupled with a change in the weather causing frosts to be apprehended, have led since a few days to some revival in Silk business. Throwsters of China Silk, unwilling to stop work altogether, have been able to part with some fairly large lots of Throwns, and, although prices obtained show a loss on relative values of Raws, they effected some purchases. In European Silks very few sales are reported, and only at prices establishing for new Silk a parity under f.4 for cocoons. Under such circumstances, most holders prefer awaiting the result of the European crop. Everywhere it has been delayed. In France and in Northern Italy the hatchings are very nearly completed under rather better conditions than expected, but trees are in arrear of worms, and the weather remains, it appears, unfavourable to the growth of leaves. In Spain, the worms progress satisfactorily between the 3rd and 4th stage, but the small supply of seeds hardly admits of a larger crop than that of 1st year.

Messrs. B. Richardson and Son's New York Circular of the 21st ult. says:—In raw silk business has dragged heavily for the past month. For the last few days there has been a rather better feeling, and some little trade has been done. Manufacturers act very cautiously to avoid shrinkage, and are working very close. Stocks—of Chinas (1,050 bales), have increased slightly; of Cantons (600 bales), are somewhat reduced, yet they are only moderate on the whole. Prices are, to some extent, nominal.

COFFEE.—The market has gained further strength, notwithstanding the continued heavy supplies of Plantation Ceylon, both actual and prospective. This is chiefly attributable to an extensive export demand, and with increasing activity the upward movement has received a constant impetus, resulting in a further general advance, making the total rise from the late lowest point 7s. for Plantation. The quantities at auction this week, although less extensive, have been liberal, but as the magnitude of recent deliveries has stimulated the demand, strong competition and advancing prices have been recorded daily, closing about 5s. higher for the fortnight. Native and pale kinds, not having suffered to the same extent, have advanced only 2s. to 3s. Foreign descriptions have participated in the improvement. Plantation Ceylon, middling closes at 102s. 6d. to 104s. Native, good ordinary at 83s., quotations being as follows:—Plantation, triage, 78s. to 91s. 6d.; gray to fine coloury small, 94s. to 98s. 6d.; low middling, 100s. to 101s.; middling, 102s. to 104s. 6d.; good middling to fine middling bright, 105s. to 108s.; dull to fine bold, 109s. to 115s.; extra bold, 117s. 6d. to 120s. 6d.; pea-berry, 105s. 6d. to 110s. 6d.; Native, small and broken, 72s.; good ordinary, 81s.; bold, 84s. 6d. The only sale of other East India has been 141 bags Manila, fine ordinary greenish at 85s. 6d.; good pale at 89s. per cwt.

SUGAR.—A continued strong demand for common kinds has led to large sales at 3d. advance; whilst good refining kinds continue in good request, both on the spot and afloat, also at firmer rates. Several floating cargoes have been sold, particulars are not divulged. The following is a detailed account of the business in East India descriptions. On the 4th inst. in auction of 2,908 bags Native Penang 260 bags yellow sold at 22s., the remainder good brown being bought in at 21s. For arrival 300 tons unclayed Manila sold at 21s. 6d., and a cargo of superior clayed at about 26s. 6d., also a cargo of about 6,000 bags good yellow China at 25s. On the 5th on the spot, 50 tons fine clayed Manila sold at 27s. 6d., 200 tons Hainan China at 21s. 3d., and 150 tons brown

China price not reported; for arrival 120 tons Native Penang sold at 20s., and the floating cargo per Armida, 400 tons superior clayed Manila, January sailing, at 26s. 6d. CASUALTIES.

AMSTERDAM.—May 7, the Conrad (str.), arrived at Nieuwe Diep from Batavia, has on board the crew of the Presenske (German barq.), lost at sea; she saw, when near the Channel, the Moise (French str.) showing signals of distress, but could render no assistance on account of bad weather.

LISBON.—May 9, the Anna (Dutch ship), from Cowes to Java, put in here yesterday; the crew refuse to proceed, alleging that the vessel is unseaworthy.

CAPE TOWN.—April 10, the R. P. Buck (Amer. barque), from Probolingo to Falmouth, with sugar, has been totally wrecked off Aasfontien, eastward of Cape Agulhas. She came against nearly perpendicular rocks, and is completely smashed up, and it is a wonder a single man was saved. Beside the smashed debris of the wreck, some thousand of empty sugar pockets, and three boats, there will be nothing for sale.

NEW YORK.—April 24, the Castine, from Java to Falmouth, with sugar, put into St. Thomas, 15th April, leaking. She was surveyed, and part of her cargo transhipped. She proceeded with the balance with the aid of steam pumps. April 28, the Bethany, previously reported ashore, was sold by auction, April 26, for $25.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

THE Rev. T. RICHARD, of Chefoo, whose communications have been recently referred to in the columns of The Times, writes as follows: "People of all ages die of actual starvation by thousands. This is no exaggeration. The famine extends over a district which includes at least 5,000 villages, and in these, taken together, I am certainly within the mark in saying that 500 die daily. Perhaps 1,000 may be within it. A few days ago I traversed the worst part. It is most heartrending. Can anything be done immediately at home? Friends in Chefoo have sent me $500. Shanghai and other places I have not heard from yet. The first steamer of the Spring is expected north to-day. Perhaps $1,000 more will be made up. Funds will save lives on to the end of May. It will bt only charity after that. If you can do anything telegraph." Under date March 5 Mr. Richard says:—"I draw another £50 to-day, making in all £250. If I die before the year is out let my property here make up the deficiency, so long as I have anything to mortgage. I cannot abide the sight of people dying about me without giving them relief. Thousands upon thousands have perished already, Houses are pulled down in every village to sell the timber and thatch in order to get food. Those who can get husks and dry leaves ordinarily used for fuel are considered well off. Most of the poor young girls have been sold. Old men, middle aged, young men, and children die daily of sheer starvation, and others freeze. The dead cannot get a burial; they are too many, and none can afford the expense, so they are cast daily into large pits. Terrible."

The Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society have, by telegraph, advised Mr. Richard to draw £250 at once, and authorised the payment of a further sum of £250 if urgently needed.

CONTRIBUTIONS in aid of the Famine Relief Fund will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, Joseph Tritton, Esq., 19, Castle-street, Holborn, London, E.C., or by the bankers of the Society, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Twells, and Co., 54, Lombard-street.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen o the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that th missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessar repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home an School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present He Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The circular which was recently issued by Mr. Hart, the Inspector-General of Chinese Customs, with reference to loans to the Chinese Government, has been the subject of further notice, and the more it is considered the more extraordinary does it appear. It is stated that Hsu Taoutai received orders from General Kin-Shun, the second in command to Tso Tsung-t'ang, to settle a loan; but that, the negotiations not resulting satisfactorily according to the views of the Tsung-li Yamen, which does not recognise the authority of Kin-Shun, he is now ordered to appear in Peking. Mr. Hart's letter also can have nothing to do with Wu Taoutai, who always acts under orders from the Viceroy, after the latter has received authorisation from Prince Kung and the Empresses-Regent. To make the matter more mysterious, it is now stated in the Japan papers that the so-called loan to China from Japan was in reality only a speculation on the part of a Japanese banker and a Chinese official. It is added that this official entered into an arrangement without the authority of the Central Government, and that he has thereby incurred its displeasure. The complication is certainly to be regretted for the credit of the Chinese Government. It was expected that the position of the new foreign settlement at Wuhu would shortly be decided upon, but the matter was not concluded at the date of the latest advices, namely, the 19th March. The inhabitants generally showed themselves friendly to foreigners. It is reported that the Chinese authorities beheaded a native Christian in connection with the riots at Ning-kuo-foo last year. Curiously in contrast with the "progress" of which much has been said of late, the Chinese Government have issued a decree reprimanding certain literary examiners for recently returning from Canton by sea, and ordering them to do so in future by the old tedious land route. Details are given of the fires which have occurred at Foochow, and which it appears have been of a somewhat serious character.

From Japan the news concerning the war still continues of a most conflicting character; but opinion, both in that country and China (where events are watched with almost as much interest as by residents in Japan), is unanimous in considering the struggle as much more severe than has been admitted by the Government; and this opinion is confirmed by the increasing efforts of the authorities to stifle news in all directions. Upon this point complaints are both loud and general. The most active efforts were also being made by the Government to levy troops — a circumstance which was justly regarded as indicating their recognition of the seriousness of the struggle. So far as can be gathered from the reports allowed to leak out, it would seem that up to the dates of the present mail the Imperialists had been slowly gaining ground, but at considerable loss to themselves. An attempt was made in Yokohama to get up a discussion of the currency question—one no doubt of great importance—but it was impossible to elicit sufficient interest in the subject. It is reported that the foreign Ministers in the capital are cordially in sympathy with the Japanese Government.

From the Straits Settlements the most important item of news is the account of the fire on the premises of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Co., of which reports have previously reached us by telegram. The total loss incurred by this disaster is put down by the Straits Times at $450,000. There has been an outbreak of cholera at Singapore, which was causing as many as twenty deaths daily. Captain Shaw has left Malacca to assume the duties of his post as Acting Lieutenant-Governor of Penang. A sum of over $1,700 has been raised in Singapore for the relief of the sufferers by the famine in Northern China.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 3rd April, and we have advices via San Francisco, nine days later, viz., to the 12th April. The French mail from London, Feb. 9, arrived out on the 31st March, and the following P. and O. mail of Feb. 16 was received on the 4th April.

The public and the newspapers in Yokohama have been alike endeavouring to unravel the tangle of conflicting news which has been received respecting the civil war, and the stringency of the Government in withholding intelligence made it almost an impossibility to arrive at any definite idea as to what was going on. According to last advices the castle of Fukuoka was taken by some insurgents, but had since been recaptured, and risings in other places are also noted. The rumours of the fall of the besieged castle of Kumamoto still continued, and at the beginning of the month the capture was stated as an assured fact. This has been denied, and the Government very opportunely produced a letter from the commander, General Tani. The most peculiar fact, however, remains that although the Imperialists are, according to their own accounts, within a mile or two of the castle, and although the rebels in front of the castle only number 800, yet the besieged troops, variously estimated at from three to seven thousand men, give no signs of their existence, which makes one suspect that all is not as favourable there as represented. It was, however, despite all their attempts at concealment, quite evident that the Government did not think the war nearly concluded. This was proved by the number of troops that were continually being raised and forwarded to the scene of action. Not only had the active army, the three classes of the reserve, and the police of the empire been called to arms, but the Government had been obliged to turn to the so lately despised samurai class, and was attempting to raise a body of these men. The rebels were also receiving reinforcements. At Kagoshima 1,500 men were recruited for them in two days, and, despite of the supposed garrison of Imperial troops, marched out without molestation to join their friends.

Alluding to the pressure brought by the Government to bear upon the Press, the Japan Herald says that nothing has given more offence to the editors of Japanese newspapers, during the tyranny which the Government has exercised over them, than the prohibition of the publication of a telegram received from Fukuoka on 28th March by the Government, stating that over 1,000 of the troops from the Kumamoto garrison had arrived, almost famished, amongst the Imperialists; but these refugees were unable to give any account of their officers, including General Tani, who was in command of the garrison, Colonel Kodama, and Shinagawa of the Naimusho. However, it was certain that these officers, together with the balance of the troops, were either dead, prisoners, or had voluntarily joined the rebels.

Several serious fires have occurred, both in Yokohama and Tokio. The Japan Mail gives the following particulars of one which broke out shortly after one o'clock on the morning of the 28th March, at Otamachi, Ichome, a few doors from Usui's photographic gallery. The direction of the wind was towards the sea, which caused the fire to spread to Benten-dori and thence to Minami-naka-dori, where a great effort was made to stay its progress by pulling down the houses which were in danger, but without success, as the fire shortly afterwards extended to Honcho-dori, and at one time the Machigaisho was in danger. All the men-of-war in port sent detachments of their men on shore, and they, together with the fire brigades, who mustered in great force, worked hard to prevent the flames spreading, but were unfortunately not successful until a large number of houses in all the four streets named were destroyed.

The above paper states that to meet the demand for reinforcements that are so urgently called for fresh levies of troops are everywhere being raised, and as fast as the men can be got together they are shipped off to the seat of war. We say men, but we should say boys; boys of seventeen scarcely able to carry the weight of a rifle and accoutrements. No one who saw the fourteen or fifteen hundred troops who were shipped off by the Nagoya Maru on the 26th ult. but must have been painfully struck by the youthfulness of the greater portion of them. What in the name of common humanity is to be gained by sending such corps into the field? The only result can be to afford more victims to the fearful prowess of the sword-wielding samurai of Satsuma. The Government may prevent any particulars of losses in the field from being published, but certain facts will leak out, and it is well known that of the two thousand troops which the Nagoya Maru took down to the South, shortly after the breaking out of the revolt, five hundred have been sent back to Kobe disabled from sword cuts either in the shoulder or thigh. With such a proportion of wounded it is only natural to suppose that the number of those killed outright cannot be small. Of course, to support such losses as these, the Government cannot afford to be particular about age when it looks to sustain its position by numbers alone.

It is reported that Oyama, the ex-governor of Kagoshima, has been under examination in Tokio, and is subjected to the indignity of being brought before his judges in bonds.

The funeral of Commander J. D. Marvin, of the U.S.S Alert, whose death is noticed below, took place from the U.S. Naval Hospital. The coffin, on which were the deceased's cocked hat and sword, and which was covered by flowers placed there by some of the American ladies, was carried by the gig's crew, the pall-bearers being the principal U.S. naval officers, and was followed by the Alert's officers and crew, the U.S. Minister, the Secretary of Legation, U.S. Consul-General and Vice Consul-General, the German Minister, the Italian Consul, the captains and officers of the French, English, and Japanese men-of-war in harbour, and many friends of the deceased. After the funeral services had been performed by the Rev. J. L. Amerman, the customary three volleys were dischaged over the coffin by the firing party of marines, and it was then deposited in the vault of the hospital, there to await instructions from the relatives of the deceased.

A sad accident has taken place on board the above-named vessel. On the evening of the 5th April, while the crew were engaged in sending down top-gallant yards, a landsman, by name George Harvey, aged twenty, fell from the main-yard, and striking the deck was killed instantly. The funeral party left the ship at eleven A.M. on Good Friday; the usual three volleys were fired, and the ensign lowered while the body was being conveyed to the cemetery. Through the kindness of the Rev. Abbé F. Midon, who had taken great interest in the deceased, a priest was in waiting, and performed the service. The unfortunate young man was esteemed by both his officers and comrades as one of the best men in the vessel.

According to the Japan Herald silk-weaving would appear to have recently received a great impetus from some quarter, for within the latter part of the month of March numerous establishments for this industry have sprung up in various parts of the capital. No innovation, however, in the machinery hitherto employed is noticeable, but the women engaged are more expert in the business than the majority of those who follow this occupation, nearly all of them having been trained in large establishments conducted by Europeans. The production is principally confined to obi, remarkable for the superiority of their material and workmanship. It will be remembered that they were special objects of admiration at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and in consequence a demand for them suddenly sprung up in the United States, in the endeavour to supply which the present impulse may have arisen. It is a pity that the Japanese cannot more generally rise above the peddling way they set about such industrial pursuits. What an advantage it would be to all concerned if they would form themselves into companies, and with their united capital start an establishment where proper machinery could be employed, and by which production could be so materially increased. But it appears there are too many separate interests in Japan, which are not easily reconcilable to any system of co-operation which would merge their individuality.

The U.S. man-of-war Tennessee arrived on the 12th April from Hong Kong.

The Japan Mail has the following:—

We have received from a well-informed source news of the death of General Nodzu. If this prove true the Government has met with a most serious loss. General Nodzu was one of the few men who possessed the necessary qualifications for the important position of leader in such a war as the present. The Government placed the greatest reliance on his fidelity and ability, and it was to him that the suppression of the revolt raised by Mayebara was entrusted. While the report of the deaths of Shinowara and Kirino altogether want confirmation, it is true that the younger brother of Saigo, Saigo Koyemon, has been killed. The unfortunate officer was aged thirty. A son of the Commander-in-Chief has also been wounded, having been shot through the chest. His hurt is serious, but not necessarily fatal.

We are glad to see that the appeal from the appointed committee for the Shantung Famine Relief Fund has been well responded to by this community, as the Honorary Treasurer announces the receipt up to date of $2,962.50, and will doubtless receive yet further donations. Foreign residents in China are doing their utmost to afford the relief which is so urgently needed, and it is comforting to know that the contributions from this port will not be frittered away in the same absurd manner as was the fund subscribed for the sufferers by the last great fire in Tokio, but that care and discrimination will be used in disposing of the charity, so as to afford the maximum of relief to the poor starving creatures who so sadly need it.

YOKOHAMA, APRIL 12.

The insurrection in Higo, as you will see by the Yokohama papers, is still far from being suppressed. All the available steamers of the Mitsu Bishi Company have been and are still employed as troop-ships. In spite of this, however, the Government find that they require more means of transport, and the Mitsu Bishi Company have chartered from the P. and O. Company the old Massilia, which has been so long laid up here awaiting a purchaser to convey troops to the south.

The late agent of the China and Japan Trading Company has had to give up his agency and has deemed it advisable to leave the country. The company is an American concern; but Mr. John Bruinier, the late agent, is a Dutchman. There were some deficiencies in his accounts, and at one time affairs wore so serious an aspect that he was arrested by his Consul, Mr. Van Oordt. Some arrangement was however come to, and he was set at liberty.

Captain J. D. Marvin, of the U.S. Navy, commander of the Alert, and a very able officer, has committed suicide by shooting himself through the head in his cabin. I see that one at least of the local papers speaks of the affair as "a sudden death," and so it was, but not a natural one.

TOKIO.

Some excitement has been created in Tokio by the rumour that three men were discovered within the enclosure of the Kaigunsho (Naval Department) on the 25th ult., their object being to blow up the powder magazine there, which contains upwards of 90 tons of powder. It is further stated that the three men thus caught were decapitated the following morning.

It is reported, upon apparently trustworthy authority, that Saigo's youngest brother has died of wounds received while fighting against his country.

The Tokio Times says that his Excellency Count Fe d'Ostiani, Italian Minister, who is shortly to leave Japan, via Europe, for the scene of his new mission, Rio de Janeiro, has made the probably unparalleled collection of one thousand vases, all of different shape and pattern, Chinese, Japanese, and Korean. Not a single European vase is admitted into this collection, which is intended as a farewell present from the Minister to a countrywoman.

A fire broke out on the morning of the 6th April at Kanda, at two o'clock, and destroyed over one thousand houses. No loss of life is reported to have occurred, though it is known that many serious accidents happened.

CHINA.

WUHU.

The correspondents of the Shanghai papers give some interesting particulars concerning the new port of Wuhu :—

The North China Daily News correspondent says :—A few notes from this place may be of some interest just now, even to those who do not contemplate locating at this new port for western commerce. The first foreigner to come and take up his permanent residence here was Mr. Woodruff, Commissioner of Customs, who arrived on the 8th February in a snow-storm, from which it is said that the Chinese infer much prosperity will come to the place from their intercourse with foreigners. Whether that has had any influence on their conduct I cannot say, but this I can say, that I find that the people are civil in the extreme, and very friendly towards the few foreigners who are here. Still the question of the foreign settlement has to be settled yet, and may cause a change in their feelings, although it is not very likely. The reach of the river in which Wuhu is situated runs north and south, contrary to the general course of the stream ; the city is situated on the east, or right bank of the river, and distant about a mile and a half. The Wuhu Pagoda marks the mouth of the river Seaou, which flows past the south gate of the city, a deep, narrow, but rapid stream, navigable for large junks to Ning-kuoh Fu, a distance of about fifty miles, and for smaller boats some ten miles further. Between the Wuhu Pagoda and the west gate of the city is the main street, about, as I have already said, a mile and a half in length, and much wider than is usual in China. The street is well paved nearly its whole length, and on each side are a great number of fine native hongs, most of them two storied, with handsome fronts of carved woodwork. This street runs nearly parallel with the river Seaou until near the city, where the river leads round by the south gate, and the main street leads you into the city by the west gate, through which the principal street continues to the east gate, hardly half a mile apart. The yamens are all inside the east gate, and mostly dilapidated—so much so that the officials are residing in Hwei Kuans and native hongs. The City of Wuhu is a hsien city, possessing, besides the magistrate, two assistants, "Urh-Fu's" I think they are called. A Taoutai resides here, who has charge of the three Fu's of southern Ngan-hwuy, a Colonel commanding two camps, and two naval officers, one commanding a squadron on the Yang-tsze, and the other commanding the gunboats that are stationed on the inland waters. The city runs parallel with the river at the distance I have named, rectangular in shape, but very irregular, the wall following the ridge of a few low mounds,—one can hardly call them hills. It has the usual four gates, and is about a mile in length by half a one in breadth, and is pretty well filled with good substantial houses, very many of them private residences of apparently well-to-do people. The population has been estimated by an experienced man at about sixty thousand, which includes city and suburbs. I should be inclined to add another ten or fifteen thousand, but it is always difficult to estimate the population of an eastern city.

From many inquiries I have made, there seems to be only one export, and that is rice. The country for miles round Wuhu is devoted to the cultivation of rice in summer, and wheat in winter, while turnips are in the ground. It is expected, however, a good deal of tea will come here for exportation. There is likely to be a good market for imports, especially in cotton and woollen goods, also sugar and seaweed. It is too soon to speak with certainty of the trade here ; in some future letter I will try and give you any information I may obtain. The Taoutai left here last month on a visit to Nanking, but is expected back in a few days to meet H.M. Consul.

The same correspondent writes under date 19th March :—

We are glad to learn that Mr. Davenport found the people at Tatung, Nganking, and Wuhu very friendly, and anticipating all sorts of prosperity from the coming foreign trade. At Wuhu Mr. Davenport secured the reservation for an English Settlement, of about a mile and a quarter of river frontage, and any required depth, immediately beyond the Yi Ki-shan hill, where the Frolic took soundings from four to seven fathoms and a-half close in shore. The matter was not closed finally, in order that the river may be carefully watched during the summer, and another place selected if the current runs too strongly at the point chosen. The land here is higher than that nearer the city, and if it be found during the summer too low for building purposes, the only remedy will be to resort to the adjacent hills.

The Courier's Correspondent, under same date, says :—

I waited a few days after writing the above, that I might be able to send you something about the foreign settlement, but nothing has been decided upon, I believe. The Frolic, with Mr. Davenport, arrived here on the 13th, and left for Tatung and Nanking on the 16th. The Taoutai returned on the evening of the 15th, and no doubt the position for a settlement will be decided upon when H.M. Consul returns. Is it not strange that none of the Shanghai houses have sent anyone to consult with the Consul about the most suitable place for business purposes. The Commissioner of Customs with two members of his staff are living in the "Chiu Sheng Chu" (Saving Life Association House).

I met the Rev. Père Seckinger, S.J., the other day, and mentioned to him the news contained in your Nanking correspondent's letter, about the beheading of two of the ringleaders in the riots at Ning-kuoh Fu last year. Père Seckinger added that the authorities also beheaded a Christian, and were keeping in confinement two other of the chief rioters and another Christian, so that if the authorities are pressed to punish the two remaining they will also punish the Christian. That is another way they have adopted to stop the complaints of the missionaries. The good father further states that things are very unsettled at Ning-kuoh Fu and adjoining cities, the missionaries there being constantly threatened by some retired officials and the literati.

WENCHOW.

A correspondent of the North China Herald states that the revenue cruiser Ling Feng, with Mr. Commissioner Holton on board, arrived in the river on the 2nd March and remained surveying until the 19th, on which date she started back to Foochow to bring up the rest of the Customs staff. Plenty of water was found on the bar, and all ordinary draught steamers will be able to proceed up river and anchor off the city. Premises for a Custom-house have been selected outside the North Gate, which faces the river and is opposite the best anchorage. The city is very clean and well paved, but fails to strike as an emporium of trade. The principal hongs are outside the South Gate, and those engaged in the timber and charcoal trade seem to be doing all the "biz" at this present. Tea will be obtainable by-and-by. Silk goods are manufactured to a slight extent, but manufacturers of household furniture, umbrellas, bamboo baskets, matting, and coffins employ most hands by far. Surely there never was such a city for joss houses, and but few are in decent repair. The U.S.S. Palos, with Mr. Consul Lord on board, arrived from Ningpo on the 21st. Mr. Lord is reported to have selected a concession lot adjoining that measured over by Mr. Davenport. Junks are high and dry off this position at low water, but whether intending settlers will take any note of the fact remains to be told.

CHINKIANG.

The North China Daily News Correspondent writes :—

The adjourned meeting of Landrenters was held on the 23rd March. The estimates were presented for the ensuing year, showing an income of Tls. 2,248, against a probable outlay of Tls. 911, leaving a balance of Tls. 1,337. Tenders were produced for repairing the Bund front ; and Mr. Kingsmill was empowered to close with the contractor, but work cannot be begun till the autumn. The surplus for the current year would suffice for an instalment of the cost, the remainder falling upon 1878. A tax of 5 per cent. on rentals was agreed to. Owners of vacant lots are to be requested to fence them in. Application is to be made to H.B.M.'s Minister, that Chinese be allowed to own land in the Concession, subject to the usual conditions. The Wharfage Dues scheme put forward at the last meeting is to be pushed. A new road is to be made, connecting the South limit of the British Concession with the Nanking-road.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 6th April ; the French mail from London Feb. 16 was received on the 1st April.

The fourth ordinary meeting of the shareholders in the North China Insurance Company was convened for the 9th April. The report (published in advance) showed that the amount standing at the credit of the Company, on 30th June last, was Tls. 708,473.75, to which is added the surplus carried forward from the present working account, viz., Tls. 347,965.42, making a total of Tls. 1,056,439.17 ; dividends for the year 1875 having been paid amounting to Tls. 197,618.20, and Tls. 102,459.66 placed to reserve, there remains in hand Tls. 756,361.31, besides the paid-up capital Tls. 600,000.

The directors proposed the payment of dividends for the past year, and recommended that of the above balance of Tls. 756,361.31, Tls. 456,361.31 be held to meet outstanding liabilities on unexpired risks and claims pending adjustment, and Tls. 300,000.00 be apportioned in the following manner, viz. :—

One-third to shareholders generally.
One-third to contributing shareholders.
One-third placed to reserve for final division.

The local papers acknowledge receipt of Tls. 1,000 by telegraphic transfer, through Mr. Arthur Davenport, H.M. Acting Consul, from the Hong Kong Government for the Famine Relief Fund. An order has also been received for $1,049 from Bishop Russell in Ningpo for the same purpose, the amount having been raised among the Chinese and foreigners in that place.

The Rev. J. Thomas took his departure by the Peiho on the 30th March. His congregation have presented him with an address, and a cheque for Tls. 1,000 ; and he was also the recipient of an address from the Temperance Society.

Considerable excitement of a kind has been caused by a strike of the wheel-barrow coolies in the settlement in consequence of their being called upon to pay 400 instead of 200 cash to the Municipal Council for their licences. On the 1st April, when called upon for the additional import, they nearly all struck, and early in the day, some hundreds, without their barrows, assembled in the precincts of the Mixed Court, and sought the advice and protection of the Magistrate. Chen at once hastened to the Central Police Station and reported the matter, but was of course told that the Police had no power to interfere ; it was a Municipal order, and must be carried out. It also appeared that nearly all the coolies were prepared with their ordinary tax of 200 cash each, which was all they had in their possession, and that although some of them were willing to pay the double tax, they were unable to do so for want of means. The matter has caused some trouble, but it is expected that any difficulty connected with it can be got over by issuing an unlimited number of licences, instead of a limited number as hitherto.

The usual services were observed in the Cathedral and other places of worship in the Settlement on Good Friday and Easter Day. On the latter occasion, however, there was very little decoration in the Cathedral. A cross of evergreens and camellias was raised on the super-altar, with the inscription, "Alleluia" ; and the entrance to the chancel was adorned with camellias and geraniums, the font also being similarly ornamented, and bearing the inscription, "One Lord ; one Faith ; one Baptism." The services were full choral, the anthem in the morning being Dr. Elvey's "Christ is risen," and in the evening, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," with quartetts and choruses from the Messiah, the soprano solo being beautifully rendered.

A collision occurred on the 25th March between the steamers Macgregor and Loudoun Castle, as they were crossing the Woosung Bar, the latter inward, the former outward bound. The Loudoun Castle sustained damage to her rail, davits, steering gear, and covering board, and unfortunately ran ashore after the collision. Almost all her cargo had to be discharged.

A whale was washed on shore on the North bank, nearly opposite the Beacon, some three weeks ago. The fishermen at Woosung have since reaped a rich harvest from its blubber. The animal is stated to have been fifty-five feet in length, and to have weighed about two hundred and forty piculs. The lower jaw has been secured for the Asiatic Society's Museum.

Mr. Robert Hart, the Inspector-General of Customs, has arriver from the North.

The following gentlemen have been appointed Commissioners of Customs for the new ports of Ichang, Wuhu, Wenchow and Pakhoi, respectively : Messrs. T. Dick, F. E. Woodruff, H. E Hobson, and E. McKean.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald gives the following news :—

Two large fires have to be chronicled, one in the south suburb and the other in the foreign settlement. The first-named broke out on the 18th March, at about 10 P.M., in an opium shop near the long bridge. The fire raged till 2 A.M. on the 19th ult., ending in the destruction of about 400 Chinese houses, and the loss of three lives. The second fire occurred on the 19th ult., shortly after 2 P.M., originating in a Ningpo merchant's house, close to the creek forming the eastern boundary of Messrs. John Forster and Co.'s hong. The native version of the affair is to the effect that a man was upstairs enjoying his afternoon pipe, when some sparks fell on a bundle of nankeens, which quickly ignited and set fire to a quantity of hemp, rope mats, and other stuff about the place before the flames could be extinguished. There being so much combustible matter at hand the fire spread with great rapidity, and might have led to the destruction of a vast amount of foreign property had not circumstances been favourable for stopping its progress. As it occurred during the daytime there was, of course, less difficulty in dealing with it, and there was fortunately but little wind and a high tide. The heat was so intense that the corner of Messrs. John Forster and Co.'s Godown at one time was on fire, although there were two hoses playing on it. Their tea-room windows and the upper venetians were also smoking,—though later on they were removed— and the spars of the small bridge over the creek and about Messrs. Forster and Co.'s waterside shed were with difficulty prevented from bursting into flames. Had they become ignited, the miserable shanties in front of Messrs. John Forster and Co.'s offices must have been burnt, in which case we do not see that any efforts could have saved the Teen Eu hong and the vast amount of adjacent foreign and native property. The fire was not long in running up the street by the side of Messrs. Turner and Co.'s godown, but was checked in a most masterly manner by some foreigners—who evidently knew how to pull a house down, thus preventing an alarming extension of fire in that direction. Luckily, only about thirty Chinese houses, in all, were burnt, the fire having been got well under before 4 P.M.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 12th April ; the P. and O. mail from London March 2 arrived out on the 9th April.

The broken silver question, which was at the bottom of the strike among the cotton yarn dealers, still continues to cause some difficulty, and a deputation from the Chinese merchants has waited on the Registrar-General on the question, and expressed their desire to induce the Government to make broken silver a legal currency. The matter was, of course, promised the consideration of the Government, and the deputation doubtless think they have gained something by the step. But it is not likely that the Government will do anything so foolish as to accede to the request of the deputation. The evil arising from the chopping of dollars certainly does not need extension, and it is most unreasonable to suppose that the Government of this colony would pledge itself to such a measure.

Dr. Dennys, who, as recently noted, has received an important appointment under the Singapore Government, was expected to leave in a few weeks. He was formerly editor of the China Mail, and subsequently secretary to the Chamber of Commerce and curator of the City Hall Museum. The Daily Press in noticing his departure says that his long residence in Hong Kong and his intimate acquaintance with the affairs of the Colony have rendered him an authority on all local matters, and he will be greatly missed not only by his own large circle of friends but by the community in general.

The Harbour-master publishes the following in the Gazette :— "The captain of the Spanish steamer Zamboanga reports the discovery of a shoal on his voyage from Saigon to this port. On the 26th March at 7.30 P.M. Cape Varely bore West distant eight miles, from which position he took his departure steering N. 15 deg. E. At 9.30 A.M. the following morning, in latitude 15 deg. 02 min. 05 sec. N., and longitude by chronometer 110 deg. 08 min. 18 sec. E., saw a shoal which was passed at about one cable's length, and the captain states that, judging from the discolouration of the water, there could not be more than from one to two fathoms on it. The shoal lies S.E. and N.W., and is about one cable in length. This shoal is not marked on any chart, and lies immediately in the track of vessels going up or down the China Sea."

The new port of Pakhoi was opened with due formalities on the 2nd April. No British gunboat was present at the time. The town is described as being well built, and the inhabitants as fairly well-to-do. There are complaints, however, of a falling-off in the trade of the place, which commenced when the native custom-house was opened there. Until recently property could have been bought at a reasonable rate, but the anticipations of owners as to the improvement to be expected from the opening of the port to foreigners are so great that now all offers for purchase are refused. Ground-nut oil and cake, indigo, and sugar form the principal article of export, while cotton is the chief article of import. The town derives nearly the whole of its supplies of European goods from Hong Kong. There is a good harbour.

The China Mail gives the following particulars concerning the relief afforded by the colony to the sufferers from the famine :—

We are glad to learn that the Chinese appeal in aid of the Shantung Famine Relief Fund has met with a most liberal response from the Chinese community of Hong Kong, the subscriptions having nearly amounted to $20,000. Considering the shortness of the time—the first meeting of the leading Chinese for the formation of the Relief Society having been held only ten days ago—the result must be looked upon as highly satisfactory ; and we must again say that great credit is due to his Excellency the Administrator, the Hon. J. G. Austin, C.M.G., for having stirred up the Chinese residents, who had hitherto been somewhat apathetic in the matter of the distress of their countrymen in the north. His Excellency addressed a few leading Chinese on the subject ; and Mr. Lee Tuk Cheong, with his usual energy, began to work in a business-like manner. A meeting was held under the presidency of Mr. Leong On (Messrs. Gibb, Livingston and Co.'s compradore), and the subscription raised then and there amounted to over $4,000. Through the instrumentality of the Tung Wah Hospital Committees, (those at present in office as well as those out of office) an earnest appeal was next made to all the Chinese in Hong Kong. Mr. Lo Yam Kai, the proprietor of the Tung Hing Theatre, headed the list with $1,000, while two anonymous contributors subscribed each $1,000, one of the latter being a resident in Macao. The amount of subscriptions at present known is something like $15,000, besides 3,000 taels from the Chinchew Chinese ; but more is expected,—so that the sum total from Chinese alone will be a few thousand dollars over $20,000. A goodly portion of the donations has been collected, and $10,000 was sent through the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank last Friday, to the order of the China Merchants S.S. Company, for distribution amongst the poor sufferers, either in money or in rice, as the Company's directors think best ; and to save time, the advice of remittance was made through the telegraph. The foreign community, as already noted, have responded with equal liberality, over $4,000 having been raised.

Some discussion of church matters has taken place in the local papers. A correspondent complains of some changes in the service at the Cathedral, and states that a severe frown at anything suggestive of "high" notions has become the order of the day. It is sensibly suggested that a medium position as to minor matters is that most desirable in so mixed a community.

In the Bankruptcy Court on the 3rd May Mr. Thos. T. Anthony was adjudged a bankrupt by the Court on his own petition.

CANTON.

The China Mail states that the Viceroy of Canton when he was appealed to by the Foreign Committee of the Famine Relief Fund at Canton is said to have replied that he had always been a pure official, and that in consequence he was too poor to contribute anything, but that he would see by-and-by what could be done in the matter. Of course, the other officials followed in his wake, and the result is that very little support has been obtained from the Chinese in that city. But there is no doubt that many would be only too glad to contribute something if the opportunity were given them ; and it is stated that a few of the wealthy Chinese there have sent down subscriptions to the Chinese Relief Fund Society in Hong Kong.

By latest accounts the Chinese at Canton had set on foot several movements for the collection of subscriptions. The promoters of one scheme proposed the getting up of a subscription of $100,000, to be invested in the purchase of rice, which was to be conveyed to the districts in close proximity to the sufferers, and there sold at a profit of five mace per chek, the profit thus obtained being devoted to the purchase of rice for the sufferers.

Sir Brooke Robertson, though getting better from his recent illness, is progressing only slowly.

COCHIN CHINA.

SAIGON.

On the 28th March the residents of Saigon followed to their last resting-place the remains of the much-loved Curè of the Cathedral, who, attacked by a contagious disease, contracted in the exercise of his ministry, died after three days' illness. Born at Angers the 13th January, 1844, Mons. Henri-Thérèse Alexandre Juhel, of the Kerlan Isles, consecrated himself to the good work of foreign missions, and was sent to Cochin-China in 1867. He was first Curé of Baria, and was transferred in 1871 to the Saigon Cathedral, and in both posts won the esteem and affection both of his fellow countrymen and of the natives. He was only thirty-three years of age at the day of his death, and at his funeral the authorities of the Colonies and all the inhabitants of Saigon gave a worthy testimony of their sympathy and regret.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Siam Advertiser has the following :—

We are happy to announce that Mr. Alabaster and Mr. Loftus have returned from their tours in the interests of commerce with the best reports. We hope to be able to present articles from the gentlemen themselves on this subject. Mr. Loftus went, at the King's command, to Korat, to decide on the feasibility of a tramway to bring production from Korat and vicinity to some place on the Chow Phya river, for transport to Bangkok. Mr. Loftus reports most favourably. The tramway would end at Ta-rua, and goods be brought from thence directly to Bangkok by boating. Korat is a plateau. On passing from the valley of Siam to this plateau, a single elevation will need to be surmounted by the tramway. The ground in certain parts of the route is firm, and will admit of an iron track. In the low lands timber will be needed to raise the track. Mr. Alabaster was sent down the gulf to identify and designate certain dangerous rocks in the Gulf in the track of cargo boats coming from Chantabun. The work has been successfully accomplished. Mr. Alabaster has also been able to make many valuable additions to the Royal Museum. Chantabun and Korat are most important sections of the Siamese kingdom, and improvements to bring their produce easily to market would be great acquisitons. Both Mrs. Alabaster and Mrs. Loftus accompanied and were delighted with their tours. Mrs. Alabaster secured several valuable sketches of the scenery.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

MALACCA.

The Hon. Captain Shaw, R.N., left this Settlement for Penang to act as Lieutenant Governor there, by the B.I.S.N. Company's steamer Himalaya, and his acting successor, the Hon. C. J. Irving, arrived, together with his Excellency the Administrator (the Hon. Colonel Anson, R.A.), in the Colonial steamer Pluto, from Singapore. Both Government officials landed under a guard of honour, consisting of one captain, one lieutenant, three sergeants, two drummers, one piper, and fifty rank and file of Her Majesty's 74th Regiment. His Excellency the Administrator re-embarked, and shortly afterwards the Pluto started for Perak and Penang.

The British steamer Pyah Pekket, Captain Joyce, from Penang (via the Native States,) arrived here, and left for Singapore the following afternoon. She took down from this seventeen long sentenced prisoners, in charge of Inspector Warne, and a small guard of police.

The Lord Bishop of Labuan and the Straits Settlements, who came as passenger, per steamer Japan, proceeds to Klang. His lordship preached at Christchurch, and held a confirmation.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 19th April ; the P. and O. mail from London March 16 was received on the 16th April. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times :—

The chief event has been a great fire, which broke out on the premises of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company about half-past four on the afternoon of Friday, the 13th, and which has proved the greatest disaster in the history of the settlement. The fire began, how is unknown, in the workmen's quarters, outside and to the east of the main entrance gate to the dock. It was low water at the time, and a strong breeze was blowing from the north-east, as is usual at this time of the year ; for the last two months the drought and heat have been excessive, and the wooden attap-covered buildings occupied by the workmen of the company were as inflammable as tinder ; all these elements were in favour of the fire, once it was kindled, and the result was, that, in spite of every effort, the whole of the workmen's quarters were consumed in about a quarter of an hour ; the fire extended to other attap buildings across a road in the direction of the wind ; and from thence to the adjacent coal-sheds, where there were stored under attap roofs about 50,000 tons of coal ; in the course of an hour or so nearly the whole was one mass of flame and black smoke ; the shipping in the dock and at the wharves moved out to a safe distance ; and the question was whether the wharves and godowns could be saved, the coal-sheds being in close proximity behind them, and the breeze driving the smoke and flames right over them. Fire-engines, soldiers, sailors, police, directors, shareholders, manager, and employés of the Company, the civil and military authorities, and residents worked their hardest, and after about two hours' unremitting exertions the fire was headed near the west end of the wharves, and about 5,000 tons of coal saved intact, while the wharves and godowns, in too many places at red hot heat, were prevented from kindling to any appreciable extent. By nine o'clock all imminent danger to the wharves, godowns, and the rest of the coal was over, provided the wind did not rise, which it did not, fortunately for the Company. There was no loss of life. The coals on fire do not fall much short of 45,000 tons, and the destruction of the Company's property has been estimated at $30,000. The total loss caused by the fire may be put at $450,000. The coals have been burning ever since, and it will take two or three days more before the fire is finally extinguished, and not much of the coals will be saved. Two centrifugal pumps and three of the Company's have been and still are hard at work, with gangs of coolies, throwing water on the burning coal. There was no interruption in the regular business of the Company, two steamers being docked on Saturday morning and several discharging and receiving cargo. The value of the Company's shares has not been materially affected here, there being buyers at $115, but no sellers. A large portion of the coal, one-half it is said, was not covered with insurance, but on this point no certain information has been obtainable.

The famine in the North of China has attracted the attention and concern of the Chinese community here, and, through the exertions of the Hon. J. Douglas, C. M. G., the Colonial Secretary, and three of the leading Chinese residents, the Hon. H. A. K. Whampoa, Mr. Tan Seng Poh, and Mr. Tan Beng Swee, the handsome sum of $17,178 has been subscribed among the Chinese community and remitted for the relief of the sufferers in the Shantung province.

Cholera is in our midst and decimating the Natives and the Eurasian community. The cause, there is no doubt, is the scarcity and bad quality of the water supplied to the town. So many as twenty deaths a day are reported, and a sort of semi-panic exists among the natives, which greatly conduces to the progress and fatality of the epidemic. The authorities have done their best to meet the emergency by the distribution of medicines and disinfectants, and by taking other sanitary precautions, but a change in the weather and a downpour of rain would be most successful in staying the disease. There is great and well-grounded dissatisfaction felt and expressed with regard to our water-works and the absence of the two Chief Engineers of the Colony.

The second Criminal Assizes of the year was opened by the Acting Chief Justice, the Hon. T. T. Ford, on the 13th April. The calendar was not a heavy one, and calls for no remarks.

The Inspector General of Police, Major Dunlop, R.A., having gone home on leave, Captain Walshe, Police Magistrate, has been appointed to act in his place, and Mr. W. E. Maxwell, Acting British Resident in Perak, becomes Police Magistrate here.

It has been long a moot point here whether any tigers were now to be found on the island, and the question was set at rest by a cub being caught in a pit near the sixth milestone on the Sirangoon-road, the tigress being seen and heard in the neighbourhood.

The Tudor Ice Company is reported to have resolved upon re-establishing a permanent ice depot here, after an interregnum of fifteen years or so, in which case the price of ice will be reduced from 4 cents to 2 cents per lb.

The Queenslanders have given but a sorry reception to their new Governor, Sir Arthur Kennedy, from their dread of small-pox. His Excellency arrived off Cooktown in the E. and A. Co.'s steamer Brisbane on the 20th March, but was not allowed to land, owing to there being a trivial case of small-pox on board. The steamer proceeded south, but met with the same reception everywhere, and was quarantined with about 600 of crew and passengers on board for sixteen days in Moreton Bay at the mouth of Brisbane river. So little interest is felt here as to whether H.E. Sir William Jervois will be received in the same inhospitable manner.

Mr. Pope Hennessy, Governor-designate of Hong Kong, passed through here by the P. and O. steamer Zambesi, on the 16th April, and during the steamer's short stay was the guest of the Hon. Mr. Whampoa, C.M.G.

Captain Kellock, the P. and O. Agent here, leaves shortly for Bombay, to succeed the late Captain Henry as Superintendent of the Company in that port, Mr. H. W. Uloth becoming Acting Agent here.

His Excellency the Administrator returned in the Pluto from his visit to the Native States and Penang, and was accompanied from Penang by Mrs. and Miss Anson.

The Italian man-of-war Christoforo Colombo, Captain N. Canevaro, arrived here from the westward, on a cruise through the Eastern seas, and her officers and crew did good service at the Tai jong Pagar Fire.

The weather continues unusually dry and hot, and there are no signs yet of a change, which is greatly needed.

The following is a translation of the speech delivered at Atchin by his Excellency the Governor-General of Netherlands India at the grand reception given to Atchinese rajahs, headmen, and notables :—

"Princes and headmen of Atchin,

"It is very pleasing to me to see you assembled here.

"I have come to Atchin to give you a proof of interest and confidence, and in order that from my own mouth you may learn the good intentions which the Netherlands Government entertain towards Atchin. Those among you who have had an opportunity of visiting any of the numerous provinces which are now under the supremacy of the Netherlands have been enabled to convince themselves that it is always the endeavour of that Government to respect the institutions of the country and religious belief, and to maintain the authority of princes and headmen.

"They will also have seen what a measure of rest and welfare those provinces enjoy under Netherlands supremacy, within the broad shelter, as it were, of a wide-spreading tree.

"To call into being a similar state of things for the whole of Atchin also is the object of the Government.

"I appeal to you to co-operate most vigorously for that end, with which your own interests are most closely connected,—each of you in his own country in the first place ; but also, in concert with my representative here, by using your influence to restrain the still hostile portion of the population from further resistance.

"To the headmen still in hostility you may say in my name that should they willingly submit they may not only reckon upon forgiveness and lenity, but also upon my intention to maintain their lawful authority, just as is the case with all the other headmen.

"I personally wish to leave you a memorial of my visit here, but moreover, it is my will, that as an abiding memorial of that visit, effect be given to the promise formerly made to you, to rebuild the great mosque, after the submission of Atchin.

"A consultation will furthermore be held with you as to the manner in which this determination shall be carried out, which will give you a fresh proof of the good wishes of the Government, and which will, I expect, strengthen your confidence in it."

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Business generally during the fortnight had been on a reduced scale, the high rate for native currency, and continuance of the insurrection in the South, tending to restrict operations. In 16/24 Yarn fair transactions are recorded, but the market closed weaker; holders of 28/32 and 38/42 had been enabled to obtain slightly enhanced rates. The demand for Shirtings was still feeble, but rates tended slowly upward. Inquiry for Drills and 7 lbs. T-Cloths seemed to have receded, and Blankets had somewhat improved, a good demand for the latter having existed for army purposes. The arrivals of manufactured Iron had been very large, but a considerable quantity having already been placed, little alteration was shown by the market.

NEWCHWANG.—Some sales of Grey Shirtings 8.7 lbs. at Tls. 1.4 to 1.5, and of English Drills at Tls. 2.2 to 2.2.5, had been made.

CHINKIANG.—Messrs. Spencer and Wolffe write on the 4th April :—We are still unable to report any improvement in the position of our market for Manchester goods ; indeed business during the past week has been almost entirely suspended, and late advices from the country are of such a nature as to give us but little hope of seeing much improvement before the gathering of the Spring crops at the end of next month. Under these circumstances we refrain from any attempt at giving quotations.

SHANGHAI.—There had been only a trifling business during the week. Advices from the interior reported trade dull there, and notwithstanding a willingness on the part of importers in this market to realise at about current prices, at the close it was very difficult to effect sales of cotton fabrics, but in exceptional cases and of special chops. Sales of Grey Shirtings had been under 50,000 pieces, the principal lines being of Dewhurst's qualities. Eagle 8-4 lbs. at Tls. 1.88, and Scarlet Pheasant at Tls. 1.70 per piece ; better cloths selling at Tls. 1.75 to 1.76 per piece. Cloths below these qualities were neglected, and values of such had declined at each successive auction, quotations closing from 3 to 5 candareens below those given by last mail. 6 lbs. and 7 lbs. had not been much asked for, and dealers were trying to get out of their recent purchases of Heavy Shirtings on the slightest pretext which presented itself. Of T-Cloths hardly 10,000 pieces had changed hands. Among sales reported were 6 lbs. at Tls. 0.99, Common 7 lbs. at Tls. 1.09 to 1.02, Mendel's Horse and Jockey 7lbs. at Tls. 1.28 and best Mexican 7 lbs. of favourite chops from Tls. 1.40 to 1.43 per piece ; 8 lbs. 18 × 18 were worth Tls. 1.42 to 1.45 per piece. About 4,000 pieces White Shirtings, 64 reeds, had changed hands at Tls. 1.65 per piece. Drills had been wanted; sales 12,000 pieces, principally of American goods, at Tls. 2.70 to 2.75 per piece. The usual importations of English makes were rather firmer, and saleable from Tls. 1.85 to 1.95 per piece, 14 lbs. to 15 lbs. weights. Jeans, 1,000 pieces quitted at Tls. 1.55 per piece. In Fancy Goods there was very little doing without change in values. Woollens: Sales by public auction continued to monopolise this branch of trade; 1,000 pieces CPH Camlets had found buyers from Tls. 13.25 to 13.30 per piece average; Spanish Stripes, 500 pieces at previous rates. Figured Lustres: Sales of 2,500 pieces well assorted at Tls. 3.30 per piece. The week had produced but little activity in the Metal trade, prices had been maintained pretty firmly. In Lead and Iron there had been little doing.

FOOCHOW.—There had been somewhat more animation in the market. The sales effected had been 500 pieces of Grey Shirtings 8¼ lbs. at $2.62½, 1,000 pieces T-Cloths 7 lbs. at $1.72½, Lead 220 pigs at $8.50 cash, and 4,000 pigs at $9 against Tea.

HONG KONG.—The arrivals during the interval besides the mail steamers had been steamers Glenartney, from London, and Glaucus, from Liverpool. Business had been greatly restricted, excepting in specialties, owing to the currency question, which assumed greater importance every day, the Canton Cotton and Yarn Guilds having notified their intention to impose heavy fines upon any Hong doing business in the Colony upon the usual terms of payment, viz., Bank Notes or Clean Dollars; this, coupled with the absence of many dealers attending the annual Ancestral Worship festival, had made the interval in a business point a very unsatisfactory one. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Yarns: Moderate sales of all counts have been made, and the values of English Yarns are unchanged; Bombay spinning, however, is dearer, and is sought after for shipment. Piece Goods: Grey Shirtings have been very moderately bought, but White Shirtings have continued in good request, and in some cases have commanded higher values, as stocks have been considerably reduced. 6 lb. T-Cloths have been neglected, but 7 lb. Mexicans have found ready buyers. A few bales of American 15 lbs. Sheetings have been sold at $3.50 per piece, but in other American Cottons there is nothing of interest to note, as demand for such goods is light. Woollens: Camlets are scarce, and prices are somewhat higher. Long Ells are also more firmly held, and good Blankets are in small supply and saleable. Lastings and Crapes are dull of sale at lower rates. Metals: Lead is quiet, and dealers are not inclined to operate except at reduced prices. Hard Tin Plates are in limited demand, but soft kinds are not wanted. Sales of Yellow Metal have been made at about former rates. Little or no change has taken place in Quicksilver, but supplies are ample, and the tendency of the market is quoted downward. Coals: The arrivals have been 5,430 tons, comprising 4,167 tons of Australian, 1,013 tons of Cardiff, and 250 tons of Japan. The sales have been 2,942 tons of Australian at $9 to $8.25. 1,300 tons of Cardiff at $10 to $10.25, and 300 tons of Anthracite at $11.50 per ton. The market keeps quiet, though Cardiff is saleable at quotations. Ginseng: Some small sales have been made by Chinese, and the market is steady.

CANTON.—Lead: The market was nominally weaker, but there were no sellers at current quotations, which were for mixed brands, $8.30 to $3.35 per picul, and WB $8.40 to $8.45 per picul. Quicksilver: Quotations unchanged. Ginseng: Clarified, No. 1, $385 to 435. No. 2, $235 to 285. No. 3. $135 to 195 per picul. Crude, No. 1, $380 to 420. No. 2, $230 to 270. No. 3, $130 to 180 per picul.

SINGAPORE.—The market for Manchester Goods had continued dull throughout the fortnight, business had been small, the demand at the close was quiet, and previous rates had been barely maintained, while there were heavy supplies coming forward. Grey Shirtings were unchanged in value, the demand had continued quiet. Grey Supers had been placed at a decline on last rates. T-Cloths were in less active inquiry, 7 lbs. in heavy stock, the bulk of the sales were 6 lbs., some holders taking a decline of 2½c. per piece. Drills remained dull. White Shirtings had continued quiet and difficult to sell at previous rates. Figured Shirtings inactive, stock heavy. More business done in Grey Yarns, No. 40's placed at a slight advance, lower counts unchanged. No alteration in Dyed or Printed Goods. Business in Metals small. The Coal market had been in a state of extreme excitement owing to a serious fire at the Coal sheds close to the Tanjong Pagar wharves; about 46,000 tons were in store, of which about 40,000 were burning, some part of which would be salved; 6,000 tons were unjured, there were considerable stocks at the other wharves, and on the way; rates had risen, $10 had been paid for Cardiff to arrive.

PENANG.—There had been a fair demand for staples, and a moderate business had resulted. Prices were rather easier, consequent upon the advance in exchange. Grey Shirtings: Some inquiry for 8¼s. Other weights in limited request. Sales of the former at $37 to $44, of 7 lbs. $33, and of 6 lbs. at $30. A sale of 45 inch 9 lbs. at $45. Grey Supers: Nothing done. Grey Madapollams: In no demand. Grey T. Cloths: A good demand for 6 lbs.—sales at $25 to $25½, 7 lbs. have been quiet, transactions at $28½ to 29¼. A sale of 7 lbs Mexicans at $32. Grey Yarns: Very dull. Only a sale of No. 40 at $103. White Shirtings: Fair business done. A sale of low quality at $46, and several sales of the finer qualities from $59 to $80. A sale of 45 inch at $68.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had been very limited, settlements having been only 500 piculs, and arrivals barely equalling half that amount. Prices were quite nominal, and stocks almost nil. Samples of new crop Teas were expected to arrive in course of the fortnight following the departure of the present American mail.

SHANGHAI.—Comparatively large settlements of common Black teas had been made, chiefly at prices ranging from Tls. 10 to 13 per picul, which appeared to be more than their current value on the London market. The stock had been reduced to 1,021 chests. Green: A moderate business had been transacted without any noticeable change in rates; buying at the close was almost stopped by the smallness of the stock on offer, and no further supplies were expected this season. It was too early to obtain any reliable information as to the prospects of the coming season, but it was currently reported that there will be fewer tea-hongs both in the Black and Green Tea districts, and consequently less competition to secure the early leaf; teamen had lost heavily on Green Teas during the year, and more than one hong would be compelled to give up business altogether next season.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westad, Galton, and Co.'s Letter, dated 31st March, says:—Since the 10th Feb. there have been no transactions on this market. The departure for London of the Florence Nightingale, on the 21st ultimo, with 636,552lbs., and s.s. Nestor on the 23th inst with 480,000lbs., completes the export for the season, and brings the total to Great Britain and the Continent of Europe to 58,318,277lbs., against 63,094,100lbs. last year. The particulars of the shipments to the colonies show a total of 16,064,987lbs., against 15,090,503 lbs. The export to America is 708,121lbs., against 974,665lbs.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Market Report says:—A few further settlements of New Season's Congou have been made, amounting to about 2,000 boxes; prices have ranged from Tls. 21 to 30, and and are fully as high as at the opening of the market. Shipments from this and Macao now amount to nearly 9,000 boxes. The crop, on further acquaintance, proves to be a very poor one, and but slightly better than that of last season, which, it will be remembered, was exceptionally bad; the teas are for the most part much mixed in leaf and thin in cup, and the proportion of fine tea is very small. The weather in the country during the early part of the past fortnight was very unfavourable, and to this may be attributed, in a great measure, the inferiority of the Teas; latterly the weather has improved, and it is said that supplies, to come to hand shortly, will be of better quality. Arrivals have reached us very sparingly, and it would appear that the first crop is likely to be short. Scented Teas: The only business reported in old season's tea is the settlement of 900 boxes Scented Caper at Tls. 20, and a few boxes of Scented Orange Pekoe. Small quantities of Caper and Pekoe leaf have come to hand from the country, and one teaman has been found sanguine enough to purchase a few bales of old and new Caper leaf mixed at Tls. 15½. The shipments of new season's Congou to date are:—8th March, s.s. Tigre, 6,701 lbs.; 22nd March, s.s. Anadyr, 54,046 lbs.; 30th March, s.s. Nestor, 44,170 lbs.; 5th April, Peiho, 71,702 lbs.; total, 176,619 lbs.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Great dulness had prevailed during the interval, and it had only been when holders had pressed sales that business had resulted. In Hanks, transactions had been almost nil; Oshius, and silks offered as "Filature," had alone attracted the attention of buyers, owing to the low prices at which they were obtainable. The settlements from 1st July to date had amounted to 20,325 bales, against 12,450 bales during the corresponding period of last season.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald report says:—Further depressing advices by wire of the state of the home markets, and the suspension of business here during the Easter holidays, have combined to check any inclination to operate, notwithstanding the silkmen have been willing sellers at a considerable reduction on prices current a fortnight since. In Tsatlees about 300 bales of chop silks have been settled, rates paid being Tls. 500 for Koo-fong-sing's No. 3, and Tls. 485 for Tso-ping's "Chick" chop, which shows a fall of about Tls. 40 to 50 per picul, and there has been a small demand for Woseih Taysaams at Tls. 250 to 275. Counting settlements on native consignment the business for the fortnight is estimated at 1,200 bales, making a total of 70,300 for the season to date, against 67,800 at this time last year. To the majority of the middle men the average outturn of the prices paid here must have proved disastrous; common coarse and yellow silks have met with no inquiry to speak of for a considerable time, and the probability at present seems to be that these classes of silk will be neglected at the opening anyhow of season 1877-78, and that a good deal less than usual will be sent to this port for foreign exportation. The unsold stock is about 11,000 to 11,500 bales.

CANTON.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Settlements during the fortnight are reported at 100 to 150 bales Tsatlee; a few boxes Rereels and one small parcel Kowkongs for Bombay. One purchase of No. 4 Tsatlee is said to have been made at $410 per picul, which shows a decline of $25 on last mail's quotations, but this figure will not be accepted for other lots on offer; we quote this class of Silk down about $20 per pecul. Telegraphic advices from Europe are very unsatisfactory, especially from Lyons, and buyers are not offering for Silk except at reduced figures. The enquiry for Rereels has subsided, and values are somewhat lower but have not kept pace with the reduction noted in other descriptions. About 400 boxes are yet to be delivered under previous contracts; aside from these settlements there is scarcely any desirable silk for rereeling to be had.

MISCELLANEOUS.

YOKOHAMA.—Rice was quoted $2.5 to 2.10 per picul; about 22,772 piculs had been shipped to London per Takasago Maru. Tobacco, common quality, was quoted $6.50 to 9; Wax, $11 to 12; Camphor, $16 to 16.25; and Isinglass, $31.50 to 33.50 per picul.

HONG KONG.—No supplies of Japan Camphor had been received and receipts of the Formosa article had been small; desirable quality of Formosa was scarce, and holders were demanding $17.50 to $17.75 per picul. Vermilion was slightly firmer, and quoted $35 per case. Gamboge was in short supply and firmly held for about last quotations. The drug market at Macao had been quiet and nominal quotations were:—Aniseed Oil $190 to $191; Cassia Oil $100 to $101, and Aniseed Stars $24 per picul.

CANTON.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Cassia: In the absence of any demand prices have given way a little; we quote cases $11.30 to 11.40 and mats $11.00 to 11.10 per picul. Sales 200 piculs. Stock 7,500 piculs. A small lot of 80 piculs new season's Lowting cargo has arrived, and 40 piculs were sold for local export at $11.25 per picul. Cassia Buds: $17.75 to 18.00 per picul; no sales; stock 50 piculs. Cassia Oil: None on offer. Aniseed Star: $26 to 27 per picul; no sales; stock 100 piculs. Galangal Root: $3.00 to 3.50 per picul, nominal; no stock. China Root: $4.00 to 4.50 per picul, nominal; no stock. China Galls: $13 to 13.25 per picul, no sales; stock 100 piculs. Turmeric: $6.00 to 6.20 per picul; no sales; stock 200 piculs. No arrivals of new cargo. Rhubarb: No stock. Cantharides: 2 piculs on offer at $75 per picul. Musk: None on offer.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—Business in produce has been limited during the fortnight owing to the intervention of the Easter holidays, and prices remain much as last quoted. Sugar: Latest Telegrams again appear to be unfavourable for the article, but prices here have been firmly maintained, and there is, as yet, but little indication of a decline. Dealers complain of the scarcity of the raw article and of the high prices they are obliged to pay for it, and there is no doubt that the crops in the neighbourhood of Manila are turning out short. Since our last about 30,000 piculs of Extra have been taken at prices varying from $5.46¾ to $5.50 per picul, and about 16,000 piculs superior at $4.96¾ to $5.06¼. Unclayed: The arrivals from Taal during the fortnight amount to 21,000 piculs, all of which has been delivered under contracts at $3.18¾ per picul. This price is no longer offered, but holders have not as yet given way. In the Ilo Ilo market prices were firmly maintained, and at Cebu they had a tendency to advance. Hemp: Owing to the requirements for vessels in port, there is a good demand for the article, and, as supplies keep light, prices have been firmly maintained. We quote value, ex store, at $5.25 per picul (£21 11s. 11d.) and at that figure but little is obtainable.

SINGAPORE.—The market had continued quiet throughout the fortnight, values of most staples had been steady, and little change had occurred. Gambier had continued in fair demand chiefly for the Continent closing at $4.40 per picul. Tin had declined to $20, the demand for America having been satisfied. Pearl sago and Sago flour were firmer, Tapioca scarce and higher, Buffalo hides in request, Horns advanced, Rice quiet and weaker.

PENANG.—Tin had been in very small demand, but for Pepper and Basket Sugar there had been an improved inquiry. Other articles showed little change of importance; Tin market had been dull, and prices had ranged from $19.90 to 19.40, and closed at 19.60; Black Pepper had been in fair demand for London and India; West Coast at $7.75 to 7.55, and Atchin at $7.45 to 7.55; White Pepper in demand at $14. Sugar—moderate transactions of No. 1 at $3.80; No. 2 in demand; no supplies; fair business done in Basket, from $3.45 to 3.60

PROPOSED VISIT OF DR. MACGILL TO JAPAN, NORTH CHINA, AND INDIA.

At the United Presbyterian Synod held at Glasgow on Monday, the 14th inst., after the general business had been transacted, Dr. Mac Gill said that there was one matter personal to himself to which he wished to refer. He might call it the Eastern Question. A very solemn proposal had been made to him by the unanimous decision of the Foreign Missions Committee. It had given him a very great amount of concern, but he was not there to say much about that. It was whether he would visit the missions of the Church in Japan, North China, and in India, which would involve an expedition of somewhere about eight months. He felt the matter to be deeply solemn; and he felt that he could only consistently do so on the principle of duty. Dr. Frew, of St. Ninians, expressed his opinion that the Synod should be consulted, not only in regard to the means, but as to whether there should be any deputation at all to those distant parts of the world, and whether there was any necessity for it. He therefore moved that the Synod delay the consideration of the proposal of the Foreign Committee, and that it be remitted to the Mission Board to reconsider the whole matter, and to come up and request the consent of the Synod to the arrangements they had made. Mr. Gilmour, Helensburgh (elder), supported the motion of Dr. Frew, remarking that it was the appointment of the committee, and not of the board. Dr. MacGill said it would be a great relief to him if he could get the appointment of the Synod. It had not been customary to bring up matters of that kind before the Synod, as the board had appointed deputations again and again without consulting the Synod.

The discussion, which was one of the unpleasant kind that suggests something under the surface, resulted in three motions being made. Dr. George Jeffrey proposed a motion, in which the visit of Dr. Mac Gill to the East was treated as a settled matter, and Dr. Frew submitted a counter motion, describing it as a mere "proposal," which should be remitted to the Mission Board for careful consideration, with instructions to report to the Synod. Dr. Andrew Thomson assumed the rôle of peace-maker. He seemed to be anxious that the amour propre of the Foreign Committee should not be too deeply wounded, and therefore he submitted a third motion, setting forth that, in terms of the "intimation" of the Foreign Mission Committee, the Synod agree to appoint Dr. MacGill as a special commissioner to the East. Dr. Jeffrey having withdrawn his motion, the vote was taken between the motions of Drs. Frew and Thomson, the former being carried by 253 to 57, a majority of 196.

THE ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE.

This Society held a meeting on the 15th inst., at the Pall-mall Restaurant, the Duke of Manchester in the chair. Captain J. C. R. Colomb, R.M.A., read a paper on "Imperial and Colonial Responsibilities in War." Having given a sketch of our Imperial position and the danger to which it is exposed, he showed how the want of adequate means of defence in one place affected such means in another, and laid great stress upon the necessity of the Empire providing means of defence and garrisons for the strategic points in the sea lines of communication. The expediency of protecting coal depots, and of localising and developing naval resources was also insisted upon. He spoke of the importance of the proposed Canadian Pacific Railway, maintaining that it was necessary for the safety of Australia as well as Canada. He also pointed out the advantage of having a food supply in British territory. He strongly advocated the erection of a dockyard at Sydney for the construction and maintenance of the Pacific fleet, by which that fleet would be independent of home dockyards; and he argued that it might perhaps be advisable to abolish a home dockyard so as to localise the reserve ships and stores. On the 18th the debate was resumed by Mr. Strangways, who, referring to the localisation of troops in the Colonies, remarked that, although the colonists paid £40 per man for the troops, they were told by the Government some time since that they must not rely on their presence in war time. The colonists ought to have a voice in our policy, as united we could defy the world. He, however, doubted the value of King George's Sound as a strategic base. Captain Gilmore, late Colonial Secretary of Tasmania, remarked that the Australian Colonies were in a most defenceless condition. There was no adequate naval force in Australian waters, although the dockyard at Sydney could receive the largest ironclads. Colonel Crossman, R.E., strongly urged the essential maintenance of all our strategic positions, especially King George's Sound, Singapore, and Point de Galle. Our Colonies must be defended regardless of expense. Canada had set a splendid example in raising a really efficient Militia, which all the Colonies should hasten to imitate. Captain Bedford Pim, M.P., stated that Vancouver's Island was utterly defenceless. We had only seven men-of-war there against eleven Russian vessels at San Francisco, all capable of a six months' cruise, and undoubtedly stationed there to cut off our grain supply in the event of war. Mr. Labilliere advocated the creation of colonial fleets and Imperial co-operation with such fleets. Mr. Capel Hanbury, Mr. Trelawney Saunders, Mr. G. Cox, member of the Legislative Council, New South Wales, and Mr. Champion took part in the discussion. Captain Colomb remarked, in conclusion, that the new mobilisation scheme must break down in war time, because it only embraced 1-60th part of the Empire, and ought to give place to a systematic scheme of Imperial defence. Allusion was made to our having no command over the coal in the Straits of Magellan. Imperial and Colonial duties of defence, he argued, were alike, and every portion of the Empire was bound to share the burden. He suggested that a general scheme of defence was indispensable, and that the principle of "local defence" was dangerous to our safety. He thought that an Imperial Commission should look into the matter, as our weakness was due not so much to a want of military force as to inability to apply it readily where required.

Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., complained of the want of system in naval defence; besides building ships that could not leave our shores, we had sent an unarmoured vessel as flagship to the Pacific, when several armoured vessels of foreign countries where already there. He also advised, from motives of economy, the establishment of a dockyard in the South Pacific. Major-General M'Dougall, Sir R. Torrens, General Collinson, and Mr. Donald Currie also spoke, all agreeing as to the importance of the subject at the present crisis.

CENTRAL ASIA.

At the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, on the 14th inst., Sir Rutherford Alcock in the chair, a paper by Captain H. Trotter, R.E., was read by Mr. Markham, describing a journey made through Eastern Turkestan by the Pundit Nain Singh, to whom the Council have awarded one of the medals of the year. Captain Trotter had intended to give the paper a wider scope by adding an account of a journey through Western Turkestan, but he had been called away on duty to the East, and had not been able to finish the paper. The Pundit had in his journey to contend with many difficulties, all his baggage having to be carried on sheep, which, in that pastoral country, made excellent beasts of burden. He started with twenty-six sheep from Lassa, in Thibet, and proceeded through Turkestan to the frontiers of China and Assam, visiting in the course of his journey several important lakes, and returning along the course of the Brahmapootra to Calcutta. He had made useful surveys of the country which he had traversed. The President, after the paper had been read, said there was no doubt that every part of Central Asia was becoming, both politically and commercially, of greater interest, and the steps taken to extend our commerce made these journeys of more moment. Such explorations claimed from us, as a commercial people, a feeling of deep gratitude to those who undertook such work, and he felt that it was difficult to express the gratitude due to the explorers. A vote of thanks was given to Captain Trotter for his paper.

PARLIAMENT.—HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Mr. HOLT (for Mr. M. Stewart) asked the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs when the report of Mr. Grosvenor's mission to Yunnan, with the remainder of the papers connected with the Margary Expedition, and also the papers of the recent convention between Sir Thomas Wade and the Chinese Government, would be laid upon the table.—Mr. BOURKE said, I can assure the hon. member that Her Majesty's Government are as anxious as he is that these papers should be produced as soon as possible, but there are a great number of other papers of a very voluminous character now being printed at the Foreign-office. These papers are now in a very forward state, and they will be presented to the House as soon as possible, taking into consideration the importance and the voluminous character of these and the other papers which are now being printed by the Foreign-office.

Mr. ASHLEY asked the First Lord of the Admiralty whether, in accordance with his promise made in the House on the 9th of February, a Court of Inquiry had been held to investigate the circumstances attending the drowning, on the 13th of December last, in the China Seas, of Mr. Wingfield, a midshipman, and three seamen belonging to Her Majesty's ship Newcastle?—Mr. HUNT said that a Court of Inquiry would sit at Sheerness to inquire into the matter referred to in the question, and the father of the unfortunate young man who was drowned would be able, through the President of the Court, to put questions to the witnesses. It was not possible for him, under the constitution of the Court, to appear as prosecutor or to be represented by counsel.

THE LATE SIR WILLIAM HACKETT, Chief Justice of Ceylon, whose death at Colombo from cholera is announced by telegraph, was son of the late Mr. Bartholomew Hackett, of Cork, and was born in 1824. He was educated at Stonyhurst and at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in 1845, and on becoming a member of the Irish Bar he joined the Munster Circuit. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's-inn in November, 1851, and was a member of the Northern Circuit, but practised principally at the Chancery Bar. In August, 1861, he was appointed Queen's Advocate on the Gold Coast, and was Acting Chief Justice from October, 1861, till confirmed in April, 1863. In the following year he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the Gold Coast. He was appointed in July, 1866, by letters patent, Recorder of Prince of Wales's Island, and after the transfer of the Straits Settlements was styled Judge of Penang. He was knighted on his appointment as Recorder of Prince of Wales's Island, and in 1871 was appointed Acting Chief Justice of the Straits Settlements. In April, 1875, he became Chief Justice of the Colony of Fiji and a member of the Legislative Council. Sir William was appointed last autumn Chief Justice of Ceylon, and succeeded Sir G. C. Anderson, who was for some time Acting Chief Justice, or head of the judicial establishment of that Colony. The late Sir William Hackett married in 1866 Frances Elizabeth Maria, youngest daughter of the late Mr. William Bryant, of the Bengal Civil Service.

AN interesting exhibition of water-colour drawings, illustrating the scenery, architecture, &c., in Japan, is now open at Messrs. Agnew's, 5, Waterloo-place, Pall Mall. The pictures in question were made by Frank Dillon, during a visit in 1875-6. They convey an excellent idea of what is interesting and artistic in the country, and we doubt not will be eagerly sought after by connoisseurs, especially at the present time, when everything Japanese is so much in vogue. As many of our readers are aware, Mr. Dillon, who is a cultivated artist, enjoyed special facilities for obtaining studies, both out-door and in-door, from the fact that his son holds an important position under the Japanese Government; and he has turned them to very excellent account, bringing before us the mountains and lovely scenery of the country, as well as its temples and works of art. The exhibition offers great attractions, not only to intending purchasers, but to all who may desire to form a good idea of Japan in the most easy and pleasing way in which it is possible to do so.

THE Spanish Chamber has concluded the debate on the Address Senor Canovas del Castillo defended the Sulu Islands Convention, declaring that England and Germany had been very conciliatory, and had recognised the rights of sovereignty of Spain over all points of the Archipelago where she had founded settlements. The solution of the financial situation required time and a durable Government, but the Cabinet had already done much to improve it. Senor Canovas concluded by strongly condemning the abstention of minorities. Notwithstanding this rebuke the Opposition, with the sole exception of Senor Castelar, who pronounced against the Address, refrained from voting.

A LETTER upon the subject of the right of control over the Suez Canal, from the pen of Mr. Charles Magniac, appears in The Times. Mr. Magniac recapitulates the correspondence which has passed between the British Government and the Porte on this subject, and deduces therefrom the conclusion that any powers which we may possess are wholly subordinate to the control of the Turkish Government.

THE soiree of the President of the Royal Geographical Society, Sir Rutherford Alcock, was held at Willis's Rooms on the 15th. The company, which numbered over 2,000, included Sir Thomas Wade, Sir Julian Pauncefote, and the Japanese and Chinese Ministers.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, MAY 15.

The Minister of the Colonial Department, Mr. Alting Mees, made a most important statement at the sitting of the Second Chamber which was held last Saturday. It related to the financial condition of our colonies in the East. In plain words, the Minister said that les jours de fête sont passés for the adorers of the golden calf. The balance of the year 1875 leaves a net profit of f.9.180,000, or f.3,180,000 more than the estimate was; of this sum rests at disposal an amount of f.6,400,000, out of which must be covered f.570,000, being the deficit of the book years 1867-75. Regarding the year 1876 the Minister said, that they did not yet possess the necessary statements to make up the balance, but he could say that the result will be a very bad one. The costs of the war with Atchin will undoubtedly be higher than those of 1875. The sales of Government produce have given less profits than in former years, notwithstanding that the coffee crop was so large that the Government had to spend six millions more to pay the wages for planting the quantity. Summa summarum, the Minister estimated the unfavourable balance for 1876 at fourteen to sixteen millions of guilders. Mr. Blussé Van Oud-Alblas stated that all that the Minister had said confirmed the fears which prevailed, that the meagre years were coming. He thanked Mr. Mees for the elucidations given, and he still only wished to know whether the quantity of coffee at disposal was larger than in former years. Upon this demand the Minister said that the sales of coffee would produce a somewhat higher amount than the estimates were. I need scarcely to add that these ciphers made much impression. The Liberal papers show that there is yet no reason for weeping, as the Conservatives do, but that it is the duty of our Government to reorganise our system of taxes, and to introduce one in Java, in order to provide in the monetary wants both for the mother country and the colonies. Messrs. Mackay, Van der Kaay, Van Baar, and Van Harinxma having been appointed judges they have been obliged to take their dismissal as Members of Parliament; they, of course, can be re-elected. In the current of the week the question was brought forward in the debate of the Second Chamber, to which reasons it must be ascribed that the export of Java sugar to Holland decreases. The Minister stated that all that had been exported from Java during the last three or four years has been shipped in foreign vessels, which proves that our vessels cannot compete with those of other countries. Mr. Blussé would not agree with this argument; he was of opinion that the true reason ought to be sought in the abolition of the differential rights. Herewith the matter dropped. Though an enormous opposition prevailed against the Bill to reorganise the Military Academy at Breda, the Minister of the War Department won the battle. It was approved by 53 against 22 votes. The Bill was, however, amended in such a liberal sense that some of the thick and thin supporters of the Ministry voted against it. The members of the Second Chamber will leave the Hague this week, so that the Session must be regarded as closed. The First Chamber is convoked on the 22nd inst.

The Staats Courant states that the Government has forwarded to the Governments of Russia and Turkey a circular, as soon as the war was declared, stating that the Netherlands would remain strictly neutral in this struggle. The Dutch residents in both these countries are cautioned to do nothing which could endanger this neutrality.

A diplomatic correspondence is now going on between the Governments of England, France, and Belgium about the new sugar-convention which was concluded at Paris. The delay is caused by Holland, whose representatives even declined to sign the protocol in which they co-operated. The reasons of this delay are, it is said, a stipulation which was inserted in the said document, by which the contracting Governments are empowered to abolish in their respective countries the sugar-duties, and if this occurred abroad, our Government would be obliged to do the same, which would cause a loss to our Treasury of about five millions a year. It is now a question whether England, France and Belgium are on the eve of concluding a new treaty, excluding Holland.

It is the intention of the Government to establish in our principal towns statistical bureaux. This measure will be introduced on the 1st January, 1878.

Mr. J. J. de Rochemont has in the press a voluminous book about our war with Atchin. In the programme he states that will be treated by him —: Atchin and her population; 2. The reasons of the war. 3. The preparations for the war; 4. The first expedition; 5. The plans for operation; 6. What was done by the first expedition; 7. The return of the expedition without having fulfilled its task. The author, who took a prominent part in the beginning of this war, has, I think, a good deal to say in self-defence.

To-morrow a meeting of shareholders of the Dutch India Railway Company will be held here. Most important questions will be discussed, and a hot debate will take place, as it seems. The papers contain many protests against the plan of the directors to add the five millions for which sum the Company sells the line Batavia-Buitenzorg to the State to the general cash. The authors think that this amount ought to be divided amongst the old shareholders, and that for the new line new capital must be subscribed.

Our fishermen complain severely about the brutalities of the English ones, which they experience in the North Sea, even near our coasts. It occurred that two boats, Aaltje and Drie Gebroeders, were attacked some days ago in the neighbourhood of Kykduin by two Yarmouth boats, Nos. 570 and 608; the English crew took off the fish and lines and sailed away. The owners have forwarded a protest against such a behaviour to the Ministry, and they ask for protection of some gun-boats.

AMSTERDAM, MAY 17.

The Members of the Second Chamber have left the Hague for the summer recess, but before the adjournment the Minister of the Colonial department gave some most important information about the Atjeh War. Mr. Fransen van de Putte asked for some elucidations chiefly with reference to the effect of the visit paid by the Governor-General to Atjeh; and the answer of the Minister may be summarised as follows:—Mr. Mees in the first place referred to the difficulties which attended the campaign against a brave enemy without the least fear of death, and against cholera, morass fevers, want of pure water, want of hospitals, with an army enfeebled by sickness and fatigue. The end of the war cannot yet be foreseen. The national honour and our prestige in the Indian Archipelago are both at stake, and it is necessary to act promptly and decisively if we wish to save our reputation. In the beginning the war cost one million of Guilders a month; this year the cost will be thirteen millions, and next year sixteen millions will be required. Such an expenditure cannot last much longer. This fact had induced the Governor-General to ask permission to visit the northern coast of Sumatra, in order to establish a permanent system of government there. As to the results of the visit the Minister stated that the Governor-General had formed an excellent opinion of our establishment there. The population acknowledge our authority, and are beginning to trust us. They are weary of the war, which is only continued at the instigation of the chiefs. These are the outlines of the speech of Mr. Mees.

During the same sitting a sham-fight took place between Mr. Kappeyne and the Premier about the Lower Class Instruction Bill. The particulars of this debate I will send you in my next letter. I can only say now that it was a most determined attack on the Cabinet, which has already sustained a severe check in the rejection of the Bill of the Minister of War asking a credit to provide our new fortresses with guns.

Yesterday the shareholders of the East India Railway Company met to discuss the proposals of the managers to sell to the State the line Batavia-Buitenzorg for a sum of five millions of guilders. There was only a very trifling opposition. The number of shares represented not being sufficient, the meeting was adjourned for one month.

The dividend of the Netherlands Bank has been fixed at f.164. Mr. Beels has been re-elected manager, and Messrs. G. C. Crommelin, C. Rueb Czn, and Professor Vissering, commissaries.

Mr. C. Th. Baron van Lynden van Sandenburg, Minister of Justice, has left with his family for Marienbad.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The transactions in our markets for Colonial produce has been very regular since my last report. There was, however, no demand for export. The public sales met with a good result.

COFFEE.—The market was very lively; the article enjoys a most healthy condition. Several lots Java and Macassar were sold at 2 to 2½c. higher priees. By want of offers in the second-hand no transactions took place. Holders are disinclined to operate at the actual prices.

TEA dull; the trade is inspecting the lots to be brought under the hammer to-morrow.

RAW SUGAR.—The shippers disincline, as a rule, to sell actually, and this of course checked the trade, so that the transactions remained unimportant. About 5,000 mats changed hands at f.2½ to 3¼ above the April value. Refined met with a good demand, and a considerable lot was sold at f.41, at which price nothing can be bought for the moment. Beetroot is quoted f.35¾ to 36¼.

TOBACCO.—The market was very calm, but at the same time firm. Only the following lots changed hands: 652 bs. Java Djarit, 330 bs. Menang, and 60 bs. Manila. The imports were very numerous, so that the stock increased to 19,368 bs. Java, 5,478 bs. Sumatra, 1,815 bs. Manila and 3,000 bs. E. I.

COTTON looks very dull; no parcels were sold. For good fair Oomra a bidding was obtained of 26½c., but the owner declined to accept it.

THE CIVIL WAR IN JAPAN.

THE latest telegraphic accounts from Japan show that the confident statements in previous official despatches to the effect that the rebellion was so far subdued that an end had been practically put to it, have proved to be premature. The struggle still continues, and, although success is on the side of the Imperial soldiers, it is clear that the victories which the Government announce have been by no means easy of achievement. Several battles it appears have been fought, and another army corps has reached Kagoshima, a large portion of which town has been burnt. The Imperial arms are declared victorious, but how far they have had to struggle for their success is left involved in mystery. It is evident, however, that the outbreak has been of a much more formidable character than the Japanese have been at all disposed to admit, and it is to be regretted that so much pains have been taken in official quarters to hush up the truth, which was bound by degrees to come out, and indeed, could hardly fail to be shrewdly guessed at, by those who could read between the lines, from the glowing reports which were given by themselves. According to the latest advices, the disbursements on the war for the months of March and April amounted to no less than $5,600,000, and it is quite certain that however successful the Government may be in ultimately crushing the rebellion, they will be able to do so only at an expenditure of funds, which will tell seriously upon them.

MISSIONARY LABOURS IN CHINA.

THE Reports which have been received by the leading Societies of the work accomplished by the various Missions in China during the past year are, upon the whole, encouraging. They show that progress is being gradually, but surely, made, and that the number of Chinese converts has been upon the increase in all the more important places. Those who have had experience of the combined subtlety and obstinacy which form so prominent a feature in the Chinese character, have often despaired of any real progress being made by the propagators of Christianity among them; but facts prove that the field is better than, upon merely abstract grounds, could be expected. Although it is impossible to deny that some of the Chinese who flock to the Missions are not very sincere in their professions, or that in some instances Chinese have joined them merely for the sake of material advantage, it is beyond doubt that many true converts have been made, and that the general influence of the Missionaries has been for good, and has tended, if not in all cases directly, at least indirectly, towards the ultimate accomplishment of the great object which they have in view. The conversion of any large number of Chinese to Christianity must of necessity be a work of very slow growth; and it is an error to hope for great results in a direct form. We must be content if the work proceeds gradually, and indeed are justified in regarding anything short of retrogression as being something in the direction of progress. Looked at in this light, the accounts which have been given in the reports and speeches at the meetings just held are eminently satisfactory and encouraging. We regret, however, to notice that one of the speakers indulged in some very strong remarks concerning the moral conduct of the foreign residents in China. We do not deny that there are some grounds for complaint, but we think that Missionaries are too much in the habit of overlooking that there are many circumstances abroad which naturally lead to the state of things they condemn; and that a habit of Sabbath breaking is to be deplored in other places besides China, in fact, even on the banks of the Clyde. Missionaries may do very much themselves to ameliorate matters by endeavouring as much as possible to be at one with the various communities with whom they come into contact, instead of, as is sometimes undoubtedly the case, holding so much aloof that they are unable to put into force the very salutary influence which it would otherwise be in their power to exert. It would be a good thing if missionaries considered that they have some duties towards their own countrymen in China as well as towards the natives; and we are confident that if they were to do so, they would find themselves able to make their fellow-countrymen better in China, which would be more useful than abusing them at home. Such a course can attain no good object, and only has the effect of weakening the mission cause by withdrawing from it many who would otherwise be glad to extend their aid to it, and who have always, when called upon for assistance, been found willing to step forward and give it their hearty and liberal support.

BY the last French mail we note the arrival of Mons. P. GIQUEL, the director of the Arsenal at Foochow, together with a number of Chinese, who have come over for the purpose of obtaining instruction, and whose intended departure from China has been from time to time spoken of in the papers there. M. GIQUEL comes in the capacity of foreign director, LI FUNG-PAO, a Chinese mandarin of the third rank, assisted by three Chinese Secretaries and attaches, being the Chinese director. There are twenty-eight officers just arrived, who, with two already here make thirty in all. Of these, twelve are to come to this country, all of whom are naval officers, and who are to be put in the fleet or in Government establishments. The sixteen for France are to study naval architecture at the Forges et Chantiers de la Mediterranée at La Seyne and Marseilles, and will also receive instruction at the mines at Creuzot. They are to remain in Europe three or four years.

WE are glad to call attention to a very able letter in The Times of the 21st from Earl GREY on the subject of Mr. GLADSTONE'S allegations against the Government and the Admiral commanding the expedition for the extermination of the Dyak pirates in 1849. The letter effectually disposes of the charges, and proves that Mr. GLADSTONE'S statements have no foundation.

WE understand that Mr. LUSHINGTON PHILLIPS, who was for some time Puisne Judge at Natal, and lately engaged on a special Mission to Barbadoes, has been appointed temporarily to the post of Puisne Judge of the Straits Settlements. Mr. PHILLIPS will probably leave by the French mail of the 1st June.

GREAT NORTHERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY OF COPENHAGEN.

Abridged report of the annual general meeting, held at Copenhagen on the 28th April, 1877. F. Zahle, Esq., presided. The Chairman, C. F. Tietgen, Esq., reported upon the Company's business during the past year as follows:—

I.—The Cables in Europe.

THE STATE OF THE CABLES had generally been satisfactory during the year 1876. The cable between England and Sweden had been interrupted in the month of September, in consequence of chafing on rocky bottom near the English coast; the repairs had however been completed on the 5th October, and the company had not suffered any loss by this interruption, as the traffic meanwhile had been directed over the company's other two North Sea cables. The interruption of the company's cable between Denmark and France had unfortunately been of a more serious nature. One interruption occurred early in the year, and another towards the end of the month of November. The directors had not thought it advisable to attempt the repair of the latter during the winter, and the restoration of the cable was therefore not completed until the month of April this year. The cause of these interruptions had, as on former occasions, been the rupture of the cable by anchors of fishing boats; every attention had been given to the matter, and it was hoped that by the insertion of heavier cable in the more exposed places such accidents would in future be prevented.

NEW LINES.—A cable had been laid from Nystad in Finland to one of the Aland Isles, and would be continued by another cable from that Island to Grisslehamn in Sweden. The expense of this duplication had been very small, as the company had used some of its spare cable for the purpose. The advantage of this increase of the company's lines would be, that the new lines would be used for the local traffic, and the older line could therefore be reserved for the transit traffic, and the greater speed thus obtained in the transmission of both classes of messages would, no doubt, cause a sensible increase in the number of the same.

THE WORKING OF THE LINES had been considerably facilitated and improved by the employment of a new instrument invented by Mr.

Digitized by Google

Lauritzen, one of the company's own officers, and as there were also good prospects of being able to apply the beautiful invention of the Phonotelegraphic system on the company's lines, there was no doubt that greater speed and more direct transmission would be gained. In London the company's station had been put into communication with the principal post-office stations by means of the Pneumatic Tube System, and very little time was now lost between the handing in of a message by the sender and its transmission from the company's station.

THE TRAFFIC.—684,985 messages had been transmitted, for which the gross receipts had been f.2,296,646; this showed a falling off in the number of messages of 6,805 as compared with the previous year, but at the same time an increase of f.39,970 in the receipts. This increase had exclusively been due to the Chinese and Japanese traffic, which transits the Company's European Lines, and for which traffic the European proportion of tariff was higher than for the Inter-European.

II.—Cables in China and Japan.

STATE OF THE CABLES.—The interruptions of the Cables which in 1875 amounted together to 89 days had in 1876 amounted to 50 days, divided over the different sections of the cables as follows: Hong Kong—Shanghai, 28; Shanghai--Nagasaki, 17; and Nagasaki—Wladiwostock, 5 days. The interruptions had, as usual, been caused by anchors, with the exception of one interruption between Nagasaki and Wladiwostock, which had been caused by chafing of the cable on the rocky ground off the coast of Korea, and it had therefore been decided to alter the position of the cable on that spot, and to replace it with a heavier type. All the repairs had been effected by means of the company's repairing steamer, the H. C. Orsted. Great praise was due to the captain of that steamer and the company's engineer for the prompt and successful manner in which the work had been done.

TRAFFIC RECEIPTS.—Including an extraordinary contribution of f.170,187 from the Eastern Extension Company, paid in consequence of the lengthened interruptien of the cables of that company, and in accordance with the Joint Purse Agreement existing between the two companies, the total receipts had been f.3,059,887. Comparing this result with 1875 an increase of about f.1,160,000 was shown, attributable partly to the above-named amount from the Eastern Extension Company, but mainly to the introduction of the word tariff; which, whilst having proved beneficial to the company had been no less advantageous to the public. From the 1st June the word-rate system will likewise be adopted for the local traffic between the different stations in China and Japan.

THE LAND LINES IN THE EASTERN PART OF RUSSIA.—The frequent interruptions of these lines during the Summer of 1876 had caused the directors to make representations to the Russian Government, which resulted in the appointment of a mixed Commission, consisting of delegates of the Russian department and of officers of this company, who are now on an expedition in that part of Russia through which the lines connecting Europe with the company's cables to Japan and China pass. The object of the commission is to inspect and re-organise these lines as far as the extra European traffic on the same is concerned.

RELATIONS TO THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT.—The appointment of the Commission referred to proves the great interest which the Russian Government takes in the undertakings of the company, and the Government has still the intention as soon as circumstances permit to lend that material aid to the duplication of the company's cables in the Chinese and Japanese seas, the conditions of which were submitted to and approved of by the extraordinary general meeting held on the 25th August, 1876.

The Russian Telegraph Administration have moreover engaged a number of the company's officers for their stations in the eastern part of Russia, and no doubt the infusion of this fresh blood would tend to a further improvement in the service.

RELATIONS TO THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.—The cancelling of the agreement with the Chinese authorities with reference to the Amoy Foochow Land Line has been completed by the payment of the indemnity agreed upon, as referred to at a previous meeting.

The Telegraph School at Foochow, established by the company at the request of the Chinese authorities, had now been fully at work for about a year, and had given perfect satisfaction to the Government, who are now in treaty with the Company for a renewal of the contract relating to that school. The Foochow Government authorities had expressed a wish to establish land lines in the Island of Formosa, and to employ the pupils of the school for the erection of the same; as yet, however, nothing definite had been arranged with the company.

BALANCE SHEET.—The Chairman referred to the different items in the balance sheet, and the final dividend for 1876 was fixed at 2½ kroner (2s. 9d.) per share, after the reserve fund (now amounting to £55,003 15s. 2d.) had been provided for, and £19,409 3s. 11d had been carried forward to the next year's account. The accounts were then passed and discharge given to the directors. The retiring director, C. A. Broberg, Esq., was unanimously re-elected. Admiral Bille and Mr. Berner were re-elected as the shareholders' auditors.

MISSIONS IN CHINA.

On the 18th inst. the eighty-third annual meeting of the London Missionary Society was held at Exeter-hall, all the portions of which available for seeing and hearing were closely packed with an audience, composed, for by far the most part, of Congregationalists, who have virtually made this Evangelising agency their own, although it is a cardinal principle of the Society that it should seek to spread the Gospel independently of any particular form of Church Government. There were, however, present many Christians of other denominations, the Chairman himself, the Earl of Northbrook, late Viceroy and Governor-General of India, being among the number, who was surrounded on the platform not only by a host of Congregational ministers, but by a fair sprinkling also of clergymen belonging to every Evangelical body. Of influential laymen present may be named Sir Charles Reed, Mr. Henry Richard, M.P., Sir W. Muir, Alderman Barran, M.P. (Leeds), Mr. W. H. Wills (Bristol), and Alderman Manton (Birmingham). Lord Northbrook attributed his having been asked to take the chair on that occasion to his known sympathy with missionary enterprise, as shown by the warm support he had always given to the Church Missionary Society and other kindred organisations, including that whose claims he was there to advocate that day. In justification of his acceptance of the invitation he appealed to the catholic basis of the London Missionary Society, as secured by the cardinal article of its constitution referred to above. He was glad of the opportunity of avowing his agreement with that broad principle, because in certain quarters there seemed to be a disposition to tie down all evangelising effort to a given ecclesiastical routine. He had been indulged with the perusal of the society's report beforehand, and had read it with the deepest interest. He referred to the work its missionaries were doing in the West Indies, the South Seas, Madagascar, and South Africa, and also gave some valuable information as to what has been done in China during the past year. The last-named country, the report stated, had formed one of the most promising fields of Mission labour, the eight principal stations there having been well supplied with both English and native Missionaries. From Peking Dr. Edkins stated that on his return to the city last April he found the work growing strongly on every side. His visits to the country stations were repeated, and within eight months no less than fifty-three persons were baptised. At Tientsin the Rev. J. Lees states that endeavours are made to leave the charge of the Mission entirely in the hands of the native pastors. Of course it is known that the foreign element is in the background, but it is hoped the time will come when the foreign Missionaries can withdraw. The report from the Rev. Griffith John at Hankow has been received with the greatest satisfaction. The Gospel has been preached there to thousands who never heard it before, and the number of admissions has been very large as compared with any previous year, many converts being brought in by the native members themselves. From Hong Kong equally cheering accounts have been received. The Rev. Dr. Eitel says that the past year was marked with a greater degree of success than any previous year both as regards the Hong Kong and the Poklo Churches. There has been a large addition in numbers and also a marked increase in earnestness. Among other matters Dr. Eitel gives a full account of the numerous church meetings and the discussions involved in the effort of the church to arrange for its definite organisation, both because it is the rule of the Society, and because it is right in itself. Dr. Eitel left the members to arrange these details in the manner which they should deem most convenient and edifying to themselves. He was only anxious that as far as possible the system adopted should fall in with the ordinary line of the usages of native life, and so prove natural and easy to work. He remarks that the native members took the liveliest interest in the matter and exhibited remarkable intelligence in their legislation.

At the recent meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Society (of which a summary report has already been given), the Rev. W. Scarborough and the Rev. F. W. Briggs, M.A., spoke with reference to missionary work in China. The former gentleman said that when we think of the intercourse of China with our own country during the last one or two hundred years no more interesting chapter of modern history can be found than that an Ambassador from the Emperor of China is now settled in our own metropolis. It was possible this might have an influence on China, and men were beginning anxiously to inquire about the future of China. It seemed to him, in fact, that China is passing through the throes of a mighty development. China is struggling into something higher, and better, and mightier than she has been in the past. There is a struggle into sympathy with the spirit of the nineteenth century. She has discovered the importance of steam, and of digging up her treasures of coal and iron. She has got trade in her own hands, and it was said that China even intends to set up business firms in London, and in the great centres of England, the Continent, and the United States. Now men generally are wondering what will be the future of this great country. What will be the result of this wonderful development? He thought, as Christian men and women, one thing we have to look after is the welfare of our own holy religion in that great Empire. The undertaking to convert China to the faith of Jesus Christ was a stupendous undertaking, yet the Church of the present day is committed to this undertaking. It was a mission rather to a continent than a country, for China is a continent with a population of 300 millions of people. China is one-tenth of the whole habitable globe, and one-third of Asia. There are 17,660 square miles to each parish, which is as large as Lincolnshire, Lancashire, Yorkshire, and the principality of Wales all put together; and if Great Britain and Ireland were supplied in the same geographical ratio, they would have but six or seven ministers between them. Here was enough population to people another world as big as this. He spoke in severe terms of the immoral life led by some of the residents in China, and went on to say that he thought a Christian nation had something else to look at except dollars and pounds, shillings and pence; but however that might be, those who know anything of the dealings of the English Government, and all Christian men will agree that its policy has been all through one of repression and of discouragement, and so long as the British Government uphold the opium traffic, missionaries will persist in looking upon the Government as adverse to their schemes and plans. The Chinese people really will never come to any other conclusion than this, that the highest motive of our Government is greed and gain; and there was great scorn and irony in the observation of Prince Kung, in taking leave of our ambassador, when he said, "Farewell; if you would only take away your missionaries and opium we could get on very well." It was rather too hard to find Missionaries bracketed together with one of the most diabolical and injurious things Let us send them torpedoes, and let them be exploded in the midst of their thickly-populated cities, rather than send them cargoes of opium any longer. The Rev. F. W. Briggs, M.A., said there were three things which should always be considered in connection with the state of our work in China; the first was that since it is not God's order to carry on the work of the world's evangelisation by force or coercion, but by moral suasion, it is necessary in all our calculations of success to take time into account. A second was that more time must be allowed where a people are in a state of settled civilisation of their own because of the greater number and complexity of hindrances which heathen civilisation presents to it; and the third was that no large amount of success in the form of actual conversion to God ought to be expected anywhere except as the result of a previous patient, painstaking work of preparation.

RAJAH BROOKE.

The Rev. F. T. M'Dougall, late Bishop of Labuan, writes to The Times, as follows:—

My attention has been directed to a sentence in Mr. Gladstone's speech on May 7 relating to Sir James Brooke, the late Rajah of Sarawak. It runs thus:—"I cannot recollect a more shameful proceeding on the part of any country than the slaughter of the Dyaks by Her Majesty's forces and Sir James Brooke." I was in Sarawak at the time, and I am sure from my own knowledge of what really occurred, that what Mr. Gladstone denounces as a shameful proceeding was, on the contrary, a truly merciful and righteous one, on the part of Rajah Brooke, the devoted friend and protector of the Dyak race. It was a merciful act, in that by the just and timely punishment of a comparatively few lawless and ferocious pirates, caught redhanded with the blood of his own people, whose heads they had taken and whose goods they had plundered, Sir J. Brooke at once saved the lives of many and insured the future safety of thousands under his care, who could not protect themselves from the constant and yearly recurring raids of these piratical tribes, who in the fine Monsoon paralysed all trade and made life and property insecure along the whole coast and up the rivers from Pontianak to Brunei. On the occasion alluded to, a fleet of at least 120 war prahus or bongkongs of piratical Dyaks, chiefly from Sorchas, averaging some forty men in each, had been out for some time ravaging the coasts of Sarawak and the Buni; neighbouring territories belonging to the Dutch and the Sultan of they had in a very short period taken at least 300 heads of our own people and friends, and were returning with these ghastly trophies and their plunder home to the Sarebas river on the night of the 31st of July, 1849. Sir J. Brooke, having previously collected his own native forces of Malays and Dyaks, had proceeded with them and the British force, under Captain Farquhar, to blockade the entrances of that river, and encountered them at the mouth of the Surebas by moonlight. Some forced their way up the river, some were wrecked and capsized in the struggle; but the greater part of the pirates, some 3,000 in number, panic-stricken, ran their boats on shore and collected on a spit of land, where, as his native followers showed him, they might all have been easily cut off by the English and Native force, or surrounded and starved to death. He, however, firmly restrained those who were thus eager to avenge the blood of their relatives and friends, shed year after year by these ruthless murderers; and, much to the discontent of his own people, called them off and allowed these pirates to escape to their homes. It was, moreover, not only a righteous act in those who were acquainted with the circumstances at the time, but was afterwards regarded as such by the pirates themselves; for, on going among them subsequently, I once and again heard from the lips of some who had escaped that they thought the Rajah had acted justly towards them and kept his word like a true man. He had beaten them fairly and had forced them to give up their old custom of going to sea for heads and plunder every year, and they had in consequence been obliged to give up building war bongkongs and to build trading boats instead, to collect produce to trade with and to mind their farms themselves, which, after all, they confessed was better for them. And so, indeed, it has been; for ever since they have given up their predatory life they have proved themselves the most enterprising, capable, and industrious of the sea Dyak tribes, among whom I am happy to say our Church missions are now making good progress.

If to deliver the people along some hundred miles of coast from murder and rapine, to make what was a most perilous sea route safe for unarmed vessels, large and small, to go up and down in perfect security; to turn merciless pirates and head takers into good subjects, harmless traders, and peaceful cultivators; to open the way for Christian missionaries to settle among them be, as I know it is, the consequence of a proceeding which Mr. Gladstone denounces as shameful, I can only suppose that he has been grossly misinformed respecting it, otherwise he surely would not have referred to it all, nor would he have calumniated the memory of a great man who has passed away and can no longer speak for himself. As to Admiral Farquhar, who commanded the British Naval Force on the occasion, I know him to be one whose upright, honourable character, and whose brave and tender heart would never condescend to a shameful or cruel act at the bidding of anyone. He can well defend himself from such imputations, and so can the surviving members of the House of Commons who vindicated and approved Rajah Brooke's conduct, when he was basely and falsely accused of cruelty and wrong-doing towards the people to whose welfare he devoted his life, and whom he always regarded and loved as his adopted children.

THE TRADING CAPABILITIES OF THE COUNTRY TRAVERSED BY THE YUNNAN MISSION.

TA-LI FU.

On the surrender of the city the peasant Chief, called by foreigners the Sultan, after swallowing poison, visited the Chinese General, Yang Yu-k'oo, requesting him to show mercy to the people. The Sultan did not himself take Ta-li fu, but, being very popular, the people rose, exterminated the authorities, and handed the city over to him. The same officer informed me that there were formerly 40,000 Mahommedan families in Tali fu and the neighbourhood; while at the present time there were not two or three souls yet alive. This drowning statement was confirmed by the chief civil official; but he, on the other hand, so far from exulting, seemed somewhat ashamed of the occurrence and complained of the paucity of the inhabitants.

The valley of Ta-li fu is bounded on the west by a high range of hills having snow on the summits for, on an average, eight months out of twelve; and on the east by the Erh hai, which is about thirty miles in length and irregular in breadth, averaging probably from four to eight miles. The lake is bounded on its eastern side by a range of steep mountains. At the base of the mountains on the western side of the valley, at an average distance of from three to five miles from the lake, the land slopes with a gentle declivity down to the water's edge, while the high mountains above afford a perennial supply of running water, thus converting an extensive district into a Chinaman's paradise, viz., self-irrigating paddy fields. It has one disadvantage, as it renders the country liable to disastrous mountain floods, which, according to Chinese records, have occasionally done great damage to the walls and houses of the city. Eight miles from the lower pass, and about twice that distance from the upper (according to Chinese authorities), Shang Kwan is twenty miles to the north of the city, and has itself walls one mile and a quarter in circumference), which we did not visit, at an almost equal distance between the foot of the mountains and the lake, stand the remains of Ta-li fu, a city which, from its superb position, has been of importance, according to Chinese records, since the Christian era. Like most Chinese cities it is square, and is about [illegible] in circumference. It formerly possessed extensive suburbs, and we were repeatedly informed that before the rebellion the eight main streets were one uninterrupted street, though the present condition of the ground hardly corroborates the statement. The eastern or lower side of the city is almost wholly laid out in irrigated fields and gardens, having a fine winter crop of poppies, garden produce, &c. The western half, though somewhat ruinous, is tolerably well filled with a ragged population, and is, the officials said, the seat of the plague, as a preservation against which the inhabitants partake freely of snow brought down for that purpose from the mountains. There were no shops of any importance, the best belonging to saddlers, clothiers and druggists.

FOREIGN GOODS.

I failed utterly to obtain a trustworthy list of prices of foreign goods, but I ascertained that they were brought here from Bhamo as well as Yunnan fu. In fact, this city forms at present the terminus of the foreign cotton goods trade viâ Bhamo. We were fortunate to arrive while the famous yearly fair was going on, which years ago was attended by Lamas from Thibet, Aborigines from Wei-si, Burmese, Cochin Chinese, and, in short, people from all the adjacent countries, and from eleven out of eighteen of the Chinese provinces. They brought Burmese goods, such as jade and other precious stones, pearls, musk, deer horns, and the like, in exchange for raw and manufactured silk, satin, copper, and other metals. When we visited the fair, the only strangers present were people called Ku tsung, from the neighbourhood of Wei-si and Batha. They were larger of limb and more strongly built than the Chinese, and also more dirty. Their black hair was curly, though otherwise they resembled the Chinese in countenance, colour and form. They brought down home-made woollen cloth for sale, specimen of which is forwarded herewith, and medicines, taking back salt in exchange. The only foreign goods we saw in the fair were Turkey reds, said to be brought from the Yangtsze and from Canton, some gauze said to come from Burmah, and wax matches of European manufacture. There was a very large supply of local medicines, samples of which I forward herewith, and also a large quantity of native-made cotton cloth. The rhubarb was said to be found in the neighbourhood of Li-kiang fu, in the north of the province. The rest of the goods were merely the ordinary articles of Chinese domestic consumption. In fact, the authorities stated that, owing to the disturbed condition of the country, the fair was merely nominal, the people simply taking the goods out of their shops and exhibiting them in stalls outside the west gate.

THE LAN TSAN RIVER.

On the 25th April, after a steep descent, we crossed the Lan tsan River on a suspension bridge, named Tsi hung ch'iao (Rainbow Bridge). Like the bridge at Nan-wa-tan, it is composed of a roadway of wooden planks laid across large iron chains passing over stone piers, and attached to the rocks behind. The bridge was provided with stays, and, although the span was 180 feet, the oscillation was unimportant, even when riding over it on a mule. In ancient days a suspension bridge of bamboo ropes was used (such as are common now over the smaller streams, where, the traffic being limited to human passengers, they are quite serviceable), which was constantly out of repair, owing to the immense span and the wear and strain caused by beasts of burden. In the fourteenth century iron stanchions were fastened into the rocks on either side, and a rope fastened to them stretched across the river, to which a ferry-boat was attached. The rapidity of the current capsized the boat so often, and so many lives were lost, that a wooden bridge was in some ingenious manner thrown across the river. Ere long it was burnt down, whereupon, in the year 1502, an iron suspension bridge was built.

On the 26th the Mission reached the prefectural city of Yungchang fu, once the commercial rival of Ta-li fu, and now in even a still more battered condition. It is situated in a plain about three miles and upwards in breadth, and said to be eighteen miles in length. The town is built at the base of a range of mountains called Tai pan shan, and is very old, having been furnished with a mud wall A.D. 744. At the end of the fourteenth century it was surrounded by the present brick wall, enclosing a hill which formerly commanded the town. It is about four miles in circumference, being upwards of a mile in length, towards the mountains, and three-fourths of a mile in breadth. Like other Yunnan cities, the suburbs were entirely destroyed. The plain was only partly cultivated, but well irrigated, one vast reservoir measuring at least 400 yards by 200 yards.

There was scarcely any trade going on here; a few shirtings and a little Russian cloth found their way from Yunnan fu, but the great trade of the place was opium. Formerly the city carried on a large trade in indigo, paper, wax, glue, cotton cloth, tung oil, manufactured silk, bamboo cloth, articles made of deer skin, chess men, (sent all over the Empire), and gauze, manufactured by white barbarians (Shans ?). The mulberry and nan-mu trees grew in this department, and excellent tea was produced in the adjacent Meng tung mountains. M. Garnier's Chinese work refers to a silver mine in Yung p'ing district.

THE SALWEEN.

On the 30th the Mission crossed the Nu-kiang, or Salween, on a suspension bridge of two spans, about 500 feet in length, the iron chains being attached to a stone pier built on the shelving bed of the river at the edge of the deep water channel. The span over the deep bed was about 270 feet in length, and the one over the bed exposed during the dry season was about 230 feet in length. This bridge was built during the present dynasty; under the Ming rule, passengers crossed in a ferry-boat capable of holding 100 persons. It is a deep, rapid, turbid stream, bringing down, like the Lantsan, an enormous volume of water even in the dry season. Yunnan is notorious amongst the Chinese for its pestilential climate, and this particular spot has for several centuries attained such a bad character as to be regarded as impossible during the hot season. The reason assigned by Chinese writers is the retention by its precipitous banks of the pestilential gases brought down by the river. The authorities at Yunnan fu described these gases as being visible to the naked eye, and invariably of a green, blue, and red colour, and of causing the traveller to bleed profusely from the eyes, nose, mouth, and ears. So great was the apprehension, that the officer commanding the escort started from his lodging before daylight in order to cross the river before the sun rose. On the other side the river the land runs with a gentle declivity to the base of a range of hills three or four miles distant, the whole of the ground having been laid down in terraces and irrigated. Part of this land had been broken up, and the villagers, some of whom had ague fits on them as we passed, were busy transplanting the paddy, prior to making a retreat to the nearest mountains, where they would remain until the harvest was ready in the autumn. Here the road, as usual, passes over another range of mountains, ascending about 5,500 feet from the bed of the Lu kiang. There was scarcely any passing traffic, except some salt from Yung-chang fu to Momein.

On the 2nd of May the Mission crossed the Lung chuen River, about sixty yards in breadth, but bringing down nothing like the volume of water of the Lu kiang or the Lan Tsan kiang. The country passed through was well terraced, but for the most part uncultivated, while the hills were much more thickly covered with trees and undergrowth, and the country generally began to assume a more tropical appearance. The woods (like all those I have ever visited in China or Manchuria) were evidently of modern growth, as in the thickest cover one met with the vestiges of tombs, irrigation ducts, and other signs of Chinese occupancy. On the 3rd the Mission, after an almost sheer descent of 2,000 feet, reached the valley and city of Teng-yueh chow (Momein). As this locality and the rest of the route have been recently visited and carefully described by Major Sladen and his party, I will merely observe that the city, though very thinly populated, must from its position rapidly recover itself, as it has probably done a great many times since its first appearance in history during the Chow dynasty (B.C. 1122-1235). The shops were comparatively well supplied with foreign goods from Bhamo, consisting chiefly of shirtings, broad cloth, camlets, Dutch camlets, and long ells. From Momein to Manwyne was the only level road traversed by the Mission since it commenced the land journey in the beginning of February. It was far more thickly populated and better cultivated than any part of the province we had passed through after reaching Chautung. The Shan village of Nantien, whose late commandant was the notorious Li hsi ta hi (Li Chen-kuo), was formerly famous for the manufacture of silk, which was sent as tribute to the Court. After leaving Manwyne, the Mission, accompanied by the escort, passed over the Kakhyen Hills (which afford a fair sample of the hills to be encountered the greater part of the way between Momein and the Yangtsze), and on the 21st arrived at Bhamo.

DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY.

Having given above, as briefly as possible, a description of the country traversed by the Mission, I must point out that the richest part of the province, the south, was left unvisited. The late French Mékong expedition either saw themselves or received trustworthy information of gold at Talon, in the sub-department of Yuen-kiang; copper at Sin-long-chang, in the same department; salt at two places near Esmok, in the department of P'u-erh; cinnabar at Esmok; iron at Kang-hwa, in the sub-department of Yuen-kiang chow, in great abundance, as also between the district cities of Shi-p'ing and T'ung-hai, in the department of Lin-gan fu; while the argentiferous lead ore in the same department has long been famous throughout China. According to Chinese statistical works, gold, silver, lead, iron, tin, zinc, and copper are to be found in several places in the province; while jade and amber are to be met with at the north of Momein, and many kinds of precious stones, including sapphires, lapis-lazuli, turquoise, agates, &c., at the south. In short, a volume would be required to point out all the mineral wealth of this richly-endowed province.

As regards vegetable wealth the province is considerably larger than Great Britain, being estimated at 107,967 square miles, which, with the exception of a few lakes and precipitous mountain sides, are unquestionably fertile. As I have already mentioned, the country presents to the unscientific eye a confused sea of mountains, some with a trend from north to south, contiguous to others from east to west, having no table land or anything approaching a plateau, nor any leading or main ranges. Between these mountains are valleys of every form and shape, the size depending generally on the elevation. At a high elevation the valley is narrow; lower down it becomes broader, being fringed with smaller ones, and is the seat of a valley or district city; while lower still it, with others, converges into a small plain, containing a departmental city and sometimes a lake. At a still lower depth are the courses of the large rivers, whose great volumes of water have worn, during the course of centuries, profound channels many hundreds of feet in depth through the yielding argillaceous sandstone or chalk.

Of this vast surface not one-twentieth part is at present cultivated or put to any use whatsoever; for, although not only the whole of the valleys, but a very fair proportion of the hill sides have been carefully terraced and supplied with water channels, yet only a small part of the patty ground has hitherto been broken up. The land under cultivation, moreover, is very small, even in proportion to the scanty inhabitants, compared with the north of China, and can only be accounted for by the greater difficulty experienced in keeping down weeds in such a fertile soil and mild climate, as well as the scarcity of manure. The latter, for the most part, consists of buffalo dung, which is plastered on to the sides of the cottages to dry, straw strewn in shady places on the highways whereon to induce and receive the stale of passing animals, and boughs and green leaves of trees and shrubs, which are ploughed into the land before the transplantation of the paddy.

I have mentioned that all along the route from the Yangtsze to Momain the chief crop we saw was opium, which is easily explained on account of its high price (8s. and upwards per lb. at Yunnan fu), together with the facility with which it is at present cultivated, manufactured, and transported without observation and consequent payment of taxes. It will grow without manure in a newly-broken-up unexhausted soil, either on terraces or the sloping mountain sides, while, unlike rice, it requires no irrigation and but little rain. Being well suited, if not indigenous to the climate, it grows so strongly as to require but little hoeing or other hand labour, and succeeds, it is said, where wheat and ordinary cereal crops fail. There is a common impression that two opium crops are grown yearly in Yunnan, but, so far as our inquiries extended, this is not the case; a light pea crop usually succeeds the opium gathering in May. The capsules are scored at three different intervals by the operators, the first scraping being the best. Yunnan opium is superior in quality to Szechuen, which again is considered better than that grown in other provinces, and, consequently, the former is largely consumed in Szechuen, Hupeh, Hunan, Shansi and Shensi, although themselves opium-producing provinces.

At present some unprepared silk is imported into Bhamo from Szechuen via Yunnan. The quantity is unimportant now, but in former years a large trade was done with Burmah in yellow silk, which was the product of the province itself. Before the rebellion it was a well-known silk-producing country, the department of Yunnan fu being famous for its satin, while silk was likewise produced in the departments of Yung chang, Yuen-kiang, Lin-gan, Shun-ning, Li-kiang, and King-tung. This industry will require a few years longer to revive, as we know, by a sad experience, that mulberry trees destroyed during a Chinese civil war require some time for replacement. I entertain no doubt that this trade will be vigorously resumed, in the first place, because the climate is admirably suited to silkworms, a bracing winter following a hot summer; and also because the Chinese, although unable to devise any improvement in any branch of industry, or to develop the resources of their own rich country, yet are, in most instances, able to resume an industry they have once carried on.

THE SALT WELLS.

I have already mentioned that the numerous salt wells of this province have been noted for centuries; it is, therefore, curious to find that this is probably the only part of China which consumes British salt, its importation being prohibited by treaty. Captain Cooke, the British Resident at Bhamo, informed me that the town imported from 500 to 600 tons yearly, and that 1,000 mules' load went thence to Yunnan fu in the month of March last. As an instance of the difficulty of obtaining information, I may mention that we were informed by the Salt Commissioner at Yunnan fu that the province was supplied from salt mines within its boundaries, and that the only salt wells were in Szechuen. I little thought that the salt mines referred to were at Northwich. Tobacco was seen growing all along the route in sufficient quantities to meet the consumption of the inhabitants, which is much greater in proportion here than on the sea-board, owing to the custom of smoking the rolled leaf. It was highly appreciated by the Mission. As before mentioned, we met tea coming from Esmok and the Kuang Mountains, in the department of P'u-'rh. There must be a large quantity grown in the south of the province, as throughout the journey every collection of huts contained a shed in which hot tea was sold to the poorest passengers, a sure sign in China of the neighbourh ood o a tea-growing district. In non-tea-producing countries, not only the coolies, but the poorer officials, are obliged to content themselves with drinking hot water. This tea was of quite a delicate flavour, and superior to any roadside tea I had ever previously tasted.

MINERALS.

With regard to the development of the mineral wealth, mines cannot be opened without the express permission of the authorities. It is well established that the late civil war originated in a quarrel about certain copper mines. I was informed by an official of high rank, who had spent some years in the province, that, whenever the Mahommedans wished to work a mine, the Chinese would seize the site, when the Mahommedans would petition the local authorities, who would decide in favour of one of the parties. Thereupon the other side would make a considerable present, and the decision would be reversed in their favour. This and the irritating behaviour of the Chinese generally so exasperated the Mahommedans that, after many riots and much bloodshed, they broke out into open rebellion.

VALUE OF THE TRADE.

With regard to the present trade, Captain Cooke, who has made a study of the question, states that about 25,000 bales of cotton, amounting, at 50 rupees per bale, to the value of 1,250,000 rupees, are sent yearly from Burmah to Yunnan, together with a considerable quantity of British salt (Bhamo consumes from 500 to 600 tons yearly), piece goods, &c.; taking in exchange Yunnan, Shan, and Kakhy'en opium, 3,578 maunds of orpiment (the Bhamo maund is the equivalent of 80 lbs. avoirdupois); iron and copper made into cooking pans in order to escape the tax on the raw material, and sundries, such as dried fruits, chestnuts, &c. Captain Cooke computes the total value of the present trade, including both roads, to amount, at a liberal estimate, to £250,000 yearly. This sum is simply ridiculous when we consider that, on the one part, there is the vast mineral wealth of Yunnan, and, on the other, in addition to steam communication with India and Europe, the great valley of the Irrawaddy, equal in inherent powers of production to the valleys of the Nile or Euphrates, and which, from its incomparable irrigation capabilities, would, if inhabited and cultivated, be probably the most productive valley in the world.

To show the difference between this petty restricted traffic and the trade attainable at a mart opened to foreign trade, I may instance the case of a port (Newchwang) opened in 1861, outside the Great Wall, in a country frozen up for nearly five out of every twelve months, and which has been described by a resident missionary as "of all savage regions, taking a distinguished rank, for the aridity of the soil and the rigour of the climate." Under these hard conditions the chief exports are beans, grown during the summer, medicines gathered amongst the mountains, and fungus, "whose cheapness," says the appreciative foreign Collector of Customs, "makes it a formidable rival to the superior but more expensive product coming from Yunnan." Nevertheless, the total value of the trade carried on in foreign bottoms at Newchwang, as shown by the foreign Custom-house reports for the year 1874 amounts to Tls.4,183,000, which, at the exchange of 5s. per tael, equals £1,045,750; and on adding one half, a very moderate estimate, for the goods carried in and out by native junks reporting at the native Custom-house, we have a total of upwards of £1,500,000 sterling, being more than six times the value of the trade between China and Burmah, including both roads.

PRODUCTIONS.

Seeing that Yunnan has two crops of beans a-year, a prodigious supply of upwards of one hundred different kinds of medicines, and fungus of a superior quality, as also the most delicate tea in the empire, growing over a very extensive range of mountains, opium, Tung oil, white insect wax, formerly exported largely to other provinces, vegetable tallow, silk, and tobacco, in addition to its enormous mineral wealth, while its roads, though steep and toilsome, are not, as in parts of the plains in China, often impassable or founderous during the summer rains, it would not be presumptuous to predict, were Bhamo situated on the sea-board, that the trade between Burmah and Yunnan, underpopulated and misgoverned as that province is, would speedily equal that carried on in foreign bottoms (exclusive of the large native junk trade) in such small ports as Kiukiang, Chinkiang, and Ningpo, viz., £3,000,000 sterling and upwards per annum in total value. Unfortunately the rates of freight on the Irrawadi are excessively high; the trade is at present a monopoly in the hands of the most powerful persons in the two respective countries; while the British merchant would not be able to avail himself in Burmah of the privilege of extra-territoriality which he enjoys in China.

In conclusion, I must observe that very great difficulty was experienced by the Mission in obtaining any information on commercial matters, in consequence of obstacles thrown in the way by certain officials. Respectable traders were unwilling to give the prices of the goods in their own shops, while, from the depopulation, the majority of the common people met with were as ignorant of everything connected with the province as strangers might be expected to be. No statistics of trade could be obtained which would not be utterly misleading without unrestricted access to the Government Li kin offices, with authority to demand information. Calculations as to the trade of a province, based on the traffic observed on one road during one season of the year, must be erroneous, more especially when travelling with an escort of Chinese soldiers, which would naturally cause the carriers of valuable or portable goods to choose another road or to keep out of sight. The copper mines, which for the most part have not been opened for more than 150 years, are not now, I believe, in working order, with the exception of those in the north of the province, from whence a large quantity is exported to Chantung. I am of opinion that no information of any value can be obtained on this important subject short of a visit to the mines themselves by a capable mineralogist.

COAST OF SYRIA.

A correspondent at Kaifa, one of the German Templars, writes:—

In a number of newspapers we read that the European colonies of the "Tempel" at Kaifa, Jaffa, Sarona, and Jerusalem are in great danger, from fanatical outbreaks of the Moslems. It is true we Europeans and Americans here are approaching dark times, for as soon as the political situation of Turkey becomes still more precarious, that is in case it would be beaten in a Russian-Turkish war, then the Moslem fanaticism, which is being well prepared for such an event, will be seriously felt by us, and particularly by the Christians in the interior. We are therefore very thankful to the Governments of England, Germany, and Austria for the promises they have made in regard to our protection, although up to the present not a single man-of-war of these three great Powers has shown itself, notwithstanding that whenever a ship of war has been here, it always left a wholesome impression on the inhabitants.

The exilement of Midhat Pacha created quite an excitement on the minds of the inhabitants, which, however, soon subsided, as stringent orders arrived that our vilayet, which has already been severely drained both of men and money, must send another enormous number of redifs and much more money to Stamboul. There is a revenue to be raised of 2s. to 4s. per head from every Turkish subject for three years in advance, but as there is no more money to be had the Kaimakams themselves (who by the way understand how to get money very well) wring their hands in despair, lamenting and not knowing where to procure the fixed enormous sum of money, and if they do not deliver the required amount they are sure to lose, in the best case, their situations. The debtors' prison is entirely filled, and the majority are the former revenue-collectors or purchasers. Most all the different pursuits are lying idle, trade is very weak, and the scarcity of money is making itself very much felt. The winter rainy season was very favourable, and a good harvest is expected, but on account of the heavy recruiting not so much has been sown as usually.

The new Turkish currency has also made its appearance here, but as a matter of course everybody refuses to take it. The Pachas of Jerusalem and Acre have received instructions from Constantinople not to have any harm done to foreigners, and particularly not to the German colonies. The Pacha informed us of this, with the remark that the Government will make itself responsible for us, but no one has any confidence in the lofty language and promises of the Government. Our vilayet has sent four representatives to the youngest Constitutional monarchy—one Christian, and three Moslems.

The German man-of-war Gazelle, corvette, has just arrived.

THE PROPOSED COINAGE FOR HONG KONG.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The proposal which your correspondent "W." makes with reference to coining a double rupee instead of a dollar for Hong Kong and the Straits would be a good one, but for one consideration, which I think is fatal. If such a coin were declared currency in Hong Kong, the Chinese would inevitably consider it was an attempt to mulct them out of the odd 2d. difference in value between it and the Mexican or old Hong Kong dollar. The coin would consequently fail to command their confidence, and its issue would perhaps also make it difficult to gain currency for any coin at all. I think it is beyond question that the coin to be introduced must be similar in weight and fineness to the Mexican dollar. Financial opinion is, I believe, unanimous on this point.—Your obedient servant,

London, May 11. YANG CHIEN.

Literature, Science, &c.

The complaints which we have noticed from time to time of a decline in the quality of the books now published continue unabated. The taste of the public runs so much upon the lighter kinds of literature that it is recognised that we have now come to an age not of real authors, but of bookmakers; and it is justly observed that bookmaking is not literature. At the same time, some few works of considerable importance are announced. Mr. Spencer Walpole is engaged on a "History of England, from the Conclusion of the War of 1815," which will be issued next year by Messrs. Longman and Co.; Messrs. Sampson Low will shortly publish a new work by Captain Burnaby, giving a description of his ride through Asia Minor; and Mr. Sala, who has recently visited Odessa, Constantinople, Athens, &c., as Special Correspondent for the Daily Telegraph, is now collecting his notes for publication, with considerable additions.

Maritime Warfare.—The lecture recently delivered by Mr Donald Currie at the Royal United Service Institution on the above subject, with special reference to the importance to the British Empire of a complete system of telegraphs, coaling stations, and graving docks, has been issued in pamphlet form, together with the speeches delivered on the occasion. It is of much interest, and is deserving of serious attention, both in official and other quarters.

The Anti-Slavery Reporter for May contains some further particulars concerning the slave trade on the Red Sea, and some notes on slavery in the Transvaal. It reproduces a valuable letter written by Mr. Catchside, of Paternoster-row, to The Times, in which he says that the negroes in Jamaica are, if properly treated, quite as good labourers as the Chinese coolies.

The China Review for January and February contains a large quantity of valuable and very readable matter. Mr. Walters continues his essays on the Chinese language; and Dr. Bretschneider his essay on Chinese intercourse with the countries of Central and Western Asia. Mr. Alexander Falconer contributes a very interesting review of Dr. Eitel's Dictionary in the Cantonese dialect. Mr. Alabaster sends some further notes upon the Law of Inheritance in China.

New Map of Japan. Compiled from Native Maps and Notes of recent travellers. By R. Henry Brunton, M.I.C.E., F.R.G.S., (late Engineer-in-Chief to the Lighthouse department of the Japanese Government.—London, Trübner and Co., Ludgate Hill. —This map, which is published in three sheets on a scale of twenty miles to the inch, and which is 5ft. by 4 in size, brings Japan before us in a manner that has never yet been attained, and will be invaluable to all classes, scientific, mercantile, official, or literary, interested in that country. At the present moment it will be especially welcome, affording as it does the means of tracing the various events of the civil war. Not only does it give the courses of the principal rivers, and the ranges of mountains; the lines of high roads, and the more important bye roads; all towns and villages of any size, a distinction being made between "Castle Towns," or the former residences of the feudal chiefs, "Ken Towns," or the capitals of the Prefectures, and "Station Towns," or places were accommodation for travellers is provided, but it also notes the public works so far as they have been carried out, namely, the lines of railway, the lines of telegraph, and the lighthouses; the division of the country into "provinces" and "Kens" or prefectures; the depth of the sea round the coast, and the routes taken by the different mail steamers. In addition to this, the names have been translated from the Japanese characters on the native maps, and have been revised by W. G. Aston, Esq., Chief Interpreter to H.B.M. Legation at Yedo, while a variety of statistical information, collected from reliable sources, such as the population of each district, the revenues of the Government, the foreign trade, the mineral production, &c., is given. The explanation which it contains of Japanese terms, such as "Ken," "Shima," &c., will be of the greatest value to those who are not already familiar with them; and with the present map before them, we can confidently say all will be able to obtain accurate ideas of the country and the important events now going on in it up to the present. No trustworthy or detailed map of Japan has hitherto been published in Europe, though the materials available for forming one are numerous. The compiler, in the present instance, has taken the coast-line from the Admiralty charts, which may therefore be considered as absolutely correct; and a certain native map, which is very incomplete, but, so far as it goes, exceedingly accurate, forms the basis from which large portions of the chief features of the country were taken. The Foreign-office, the War-office and Japanese Legation have taken copies of this map, and we make no doubt that it will be adopted as a basis of reference in the various newspaper and other public offices in which the affairs in that country are watched.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Society of Antiquaries on May 3, F. Ouvry, Esq., President, in the chair, Mr. A. W. Franks exhibited some beads and other remains from a cairn near Shap, in Westmoreland. He also exhibited the matrices of the following seals: seal of an ulnager or aulnager, an officer appointed under the Statutum de pannis of the 25th of Edward the Third, for collecting the subsidy on woollen cloth—the seal of William Norman, one of the Normans of Honyngham—seal of the Custom House of Shoreham, in Sussex, temp. Charles the First. Along with these matrices Mr. Franks exhibited a curious piece of hone-stone, on which are engraved moulds for casting leaden seals of ordinary types. Mr. J. C. Dent exhibited two large Patagonian earrings of silver.

At the Society Royal on May 3, Dr. Hooker, President, in the chair, the following papers were read: "Further Observations on the Modification of the Excitability of Motor Nerves produced by Injury," by Mr. G. J. Romanes—"On the Temperature-Corrections and Induction-Coefficients of Magnets," by Mr. G. M. Whipple.

At the Linnæan Society on April 19, G. Bentham, Esq., V.P., in the chair, M. C. Decandolle read an important paper "On the Geographical Distribution of the Meliaceæ." His general conclusions with regard to the Melia family may thus be summarised:—(a) The number and the mutual affinities of the various genera of Meliaceæ decrease from the Asiatic region towards Africa and America on one side, and towards East Polynesia on the other. (b) Between the Meliaceæ of America and Africa there exists analogy, whilst Polynesian species belong to Indian type. (c) New Caledonia contains within itself a remarkable number of distinct species, the type of which, however, is Indian. (d) In Australia three Indian genera are found, along with three genera exclusively belonging to Australia. (e) No species of Meliaceæ has hitherto been collected in the most eastern islands of Polynesia; if subsequent observations reveal such, it will be interesting to know whether they pertain to Indian or American type.

Mr. R. N. Cust has written a very full report "On the Languages of the Indo-Chinese Peninsula and the Indian Archipelago," for the annual address of the President of the Philological Society on the 18th. Other reports contributed are "On Japanese," by M. de Rosny; "Irish," by Mr. Hennessy; "Lithuanian, Armenian, Dutch," &c. The President, Mr. Henry Sweet, will review the Progress of Phonology, and insist on its importance as the necessary basis of all sound linguistic work.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for the last month are more promising than any of the previous Returns for this year. There is still a decline in Exports, but the difference as compared with April, 1876, is so slight as to confirm the opinion that the downward tendency has spent its strength. There is a decline of 8½ per cent. in the import total as against April, 1876, and the exports have decreased not quite 1 per cent. Last year the figures as against 1875 showed an increase of over 11 per cent. in the imports, and a decrease of 4½ per cent. in the exports, and so far, therefore, as the statement of a single month indicates anything, the present returns would seem to show that the export trade is about at its lowest, while the excessive importation so long characteristic of the accounts has been in a measure checked. There is, at all events, a decided falling-off in this last return as respects the imports of nearly all leading manufacturing staples, the total being kept up by the increased quantities imported and greatly enhanced prices of articles of consumption.

The total declared value of the exports last month was £15,296,577, against £15,430,177 in April, 1876, and £20,221,830 in April, 1875; so that while the decrease this year was 25 per cent., as compared with the corresponding month two years ago, it is only 1 per cent. compared with April last year. Many of the principal items show an increase in the present return. Among these are: alkali, apparel, bags and sacks, cotton yarn, cotton manufactures, haberdashery, iron and steel, lead, linen yarn and manufactures, silk manufactures, telegraphic wire, wool, and "unenumerated articles." On the other hand, there is a diminution in woollen yarn, woollen and worsted manufactures, silk yarn, machinery, jute yarn and manufactures, leather, hardware, and earthenware. The effect on trade of the reduced cost of coal is exhibited in an increase of 5 per cent. in the total quantity exported along with a decrease of 3½ per cent. in value. The returns of the imports are less remarkable than those of March, the excessive augmentation then being partially counterbalanced by a diminution of three millions in the value for April, which was £32,067,934, against £35,050,490 in the corresponding month of 1876. This decrease is entirely under the two items of cotton and wool.

Monetary and Commercial.

Business in Tea during the past week has been slightly firmer, the trade in fact seem to have at last arrived at some kind of ground, and a better tone has in consequence prevailed, while there has also been a good export demand at fully previous prices. The sales which have been made again show a marked discrepancy as compared with those ruling less than three months ago, common teas being then worth fully 5d. a pound more than at present. This fact clearly shows that people have become desirous to clear out their stocks at any prices. It is reported that a telegram has been received to the effect that the market at Kiukiang for the new teas was opened on the 16th inst.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London during the week ended the 14th inst. was 3,312,161 lb., which was 94,081 lb. more than was cleared during the corresponding week of last year. Of this quantity 2,354,149 lb. went for home consumption, 155,881 lb. for exportation, 5,235 lb. for ships' stores, 718,857 lb. went coastwise to various outports, and 78,039 lb. went coastwise to be immediately exported. The sum paid in London last week for tea duty amounted to £58,853 14s. 6d., which was £4,145 8s. 6d. more than was received from the same source of revenue during the corresponding week of 1876.

Some little stir has been created in the Silk Market by the telegrams received during the last day or two, with reference to the prospects of the China crop. They are of an entirely conflicting character, some stating that the crop in China would undoubtedly be short, and others that the normal quantity might be looked for. The cry of a short crop among the Chinese Silkmen before the opening of the season is so familiar that it is impossible to attach much importance to any such statements, though they seem to be considered in the present instance to have at least some foundation. The latest accounts concerning the European crop are somewhat more adverse to the prospects of an average supply, but nothing definite is as yet known. The continued unfavourable weather, however, increases the chances of a short supply. However this may be, the Ministerial crisis in France will check anything like a move in the Silk Market until it is known what view is taken of it in Lyons.

In the Produce Markets there has been a continued absence o speculative demand, but quotations generally are fairly maintained. Tea and Silk continue quiet. Coffee after declining in the earlier part of the week has recovered towards the close. Sugar is less animated, but fairly steady. Hemp, Rice, and Sago are lower in value. Japan Wax and Tapioca show a slight advance. Spices are very inactive. Tin is quiet at £70 10s. to £71 per ton for Straits.

The dividend to be recommended by the directors of the P. and O. Company, at the half-yearly meeting on the 5th proximo, will be 2 per cent. for the six months, ended 31st March last, being ½ per cent. more than for the corresponding period last year.

The dividend of the Messageries Maritimes is officially recommended for the year 1876 at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, the same as for 1875.

The case of Strachan and Thomas of Yokohama, v. Hogg, Walker and Co., London, arising out of repudiation of orders for silk is expected to come on for hearing shortly, and is looked upon with considerable interest by the trade.

A preliminary meeting of the creditors of Mr. E. Holdsworth took place on the 16th inst., and, after some discussion, was adjourned to the 30th. It is hoped that an arrangement may be come to for carrying on Mr. Holdsworth's business, in which case it is considered there is every prospect that the estate would pay a good dividend; and, indeed, might, with a favourable turn in the Silk market, realise twenty shillings in the pound, while the commission business in China, which is of some magnitude, would be saved. The proposed arrangement would, therefore, appear to be in every way desirable.

The London branch of the National Bank of India has been removed to 39A, Threadneedle-street.

Tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 16th inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £214,900, and Bombay, £50,100. Tenders on all presidencies for telegrams at 1s. 9d. will receive about 6 per cent. Bills at that price and all above in full. These figures show a decline of ⅛d. compared with those of last week.

The P. and O. steamer Australia, which left Southampton on Thursday with the heavy portion of next inward mail, has on board £421,320 in specie, including £120 in gold for Ceylon, and of silver £42,050 for Penang, £133,400 for Hong Kong, and £19,750 for Shanghai.

A rather large business has been done in Bar Silver during the week at 54⅛d. per oz. for India, but the Market is very quiet now, and 54⅛d. per oz. is the nearest quotation, this being nominal. Mexican Dollars have been sold at 55d. per oz.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—The steadier tone for common Teas, lately noticed, has been confirmed during the past week, the quantity offered at public sale being moderate. Business by private contract still continues limited, but there has been some demand or good to fine Kaisow kinds of Congou, which are rather scarce. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain firm, the supply being small; common to good common have been rather more in request, and prices may be quoted a shade higher. Fair kinds show no improvement, but good to fine from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 7d. have been inquired for. Pak Lin kinds sell slowly at about previous prices. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common have sold at fully last week's prices; the fair kinds are still only saleable at low prices, but in some cases they show a slight recovery; medium to good and fine show no alteration, the demand being moderate. New-make kinds: Common to fair show no alteration; 400 boxes new season sold, at auction, from 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 0½d. per lb., being rather lower. Oolongs: Common to fair kinds are rather better, but good to fine sell slowly at previous prices. Souchongs: A few sales have been made of good to fine at former prices. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: Common kinds have sold at about previous prices, fair to good and fine show no improvement. Orange Pekoes sell slowly at about former rates. Foochow Capers remain as before. Orange Pekoes meet with a fair inquiry—a parcel of fine has been sold at 2s. 3½d. per lb. Green Teas: The quantity offered is still in excess of the wants of buyers, and prices have generally been easy.

The public sales have comprised 14,520 packages, nearly the whole of which were printed and sold without reserve. Deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

MANCHESTER GOODS.

There was rather more inquiry both on Wednesday and Thursday, but little business resulted, owing to the low prices offered. The renewed activity in Liverpool on Friday helped to stimulate the demand for both yarns and goods, but producers becoming more confident advanced their quotations, or held more firmly, and a good amount of business has thereby been prevented, as buyers have been reluctant to operate at prices above what have lately ruled.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

LOCK-OUT OF SHIPWRIGHTS ON THE CLYDE.—The largest meeting of shipbuilders ever held in Glasgow took place on the 11th inst. At this meeting it was unanimously resolved that, in consequence of the strike of the Clyde shipwrights for an advance of 15 per cent. in their wages, there should be a general lock-out, to take effect on the 19th instant. This includes all the yards in Glasgow, Greenock, Port Glasgow, and Dumbarton. Thirty thousand men will be thrown idle. The masters are said to have refused all contracts for two months. A conference which had been arranged between the masters and the workmen was held in Glasgow yesterday. The Shipbuilders' Association was represented by six of the members, while a similar number of delegates from the Men's Society were present. A long discussion ensued, when the representatives of the workmen stated that they had no power to make any substantive proposition, and could only report to the members of their trade. They however expressed a feelin g f satisfaction at the manner in which they had been met by the employers.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

THE Rev. T. RICHARD, of Chefoo, whose communications have been recently referred to in the columns of The Times, writes as follows: "People of all ages die of actual starvation by thousands. This is no exaggeration. The famine extends over a district which includes at least 5,000 villages, and in these, taken together, I am certainly within the mark in saying, that 500 die daily. Perhaps 1,000 may be within it. A few days ago I traversed the worst part. It is most heartrending. Can anything be done immediately at home? Friends in Chefoo have sent me £500. Shanghai and other places I have not heard from yet. The first steamer of the Spring is expected north to-day. Perhaps £1,000 more will be made up. Funds will save lives up to the end of May. It will be only charity after that. If you can do anything telegraph." Under date March 5 Mr. Richard says:—"I draw another £50 to-day, making in all £250. If I die before the year is out let my property here make up the deficiency, so long as I have anything to mortgage. I cannot abide the sight of people dying about me without giving them relief. Thousands upon thousands have perished already, Houses are pulled down in every village to sell the timber and thatch in order to get food. Those who can get husks and dry leaves ordinarily used for fuel are considered well off. Most of the poor young girls have been sold. Old men, middle aged, young men, and children die daily of sheer starvation, and others freeze. The dead cannot get a burial; they are too many, and none can afford the expense, so they are cast daily into large pits. Terrible."

The Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society have, by telegraph, advised Mr. Richard to draw £250 at once, and authorised the payment of a further sum of £250 if urgently needed.

CONTRIBUTIONS in aid of the Famine Relief Fund will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, Joseph Tritton, Esq., 19, Castle-street, Holborn, London, E.C., or by the bankers of the Society, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Twells, and Co., 54, Lombard-street.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The miseries of the famine in Shangtung have been increased by the outbreak of a fever which is spreading rapidly. The correspondents of the local papers continue to describe the state of affairs as most disastrous. The funds were getting very low, and there was in many places scarcely sufficient to supply the famishing people with gruel for another month. A further amount of $1,200 has been forwarded from Japan. Wuhu was formally opened to foreign trade on the 1st April. It is described by a correspondent as a pleasant place, but there was as yet a difficulty in finding quarters. The officials concerned in the Hangchow cause célèbre, in which a woman was wrongfully convicted of murdering her husband, have been brought to account, and the district magistrate who gave the first conviction has been sentenced to transportation to the Amoor. The tail-cutting mania has appeared at Peking. At Shanghai the North China Insurance Company have held their meeting, and passed the report and accounts. Several improvements in the roads have been made by the Municipal Council. The public gardens are spoken of as being in a very flourishing state, and an extraordinary birth of calves is considered to speak well for cattle-breeding in China. Forty-two pirates were executed in one day at Canton. Pakhoi was formally opened to trade on the 2nd April. The port is described as being very shallow, so that vessels have to lie a long way off. The combination among the cotton and yarn dealers at Hong Kong was reported to be subsiding. The health of the Colony during 1876 was, according to the Colonial Surgeon's report, good. That official has recorded his opinion that when smoked in moderation, opium is no more harmful than tobacco. The total Revenue for the year 1876 amounted to $885,308. A marine Court of inquiry on the loss of the Naworth Castle has been unable to form an opinion as to the cause of the casualty in consequence of the loss of all books, charts and papers.

From Japan the dates by the present mail have been anticipated via America. We give the details of the recent fire in Tokio. From the Straits Settlements we learn that the prevalence of cholera at Singapore, with regard to which such alarming reports were received by last mail, was decreasing. The eight Chinamen who were accused of kidnapping coolies to Deli have pleaded guilty, but sentence has been deferred. The Rajah of Sarawak has had a narrow escape from drowning, while proceeding up the Rejang river in a small steamer. There is a prospect of a good supply of coal being obtained from the new mines in the province of Albay, Philippine Islands.

TOKIO.

The Japan Gazette gives the details of the fire at Tokio on the 16th April, which was briefly mentioned in last mail's papers. It states:—Tokio has been the scene of another disastrous fire, which has not only destroyed a vast amount of property, but was the cause of several lives being lost, and a number of persons being more or less injured. From the accounts in the native journals, it appears that the fire broke out at about twenty minutes past two A.M. on the 16th April, in a house on lot No. 5, Taidokoro-machi, Kanda. A very strong wind was, unfortunatley, blowing at the time, which carried the flames with great rapidity from house to house, until about 1,000 families were rendered homeless. In a large godown situated in Ichome, Yumushima, a large quantity of powder was stored. Whether it was thought that the building was fireproof, or the people had no time to take away the contents, does not appear to be known. However, the fire reached the godown, the powder ignited, and a terrible explosion took place, fairly shaking down some of the houses in the neighbourhood. This explosion was probably the cause of the loss of life. It is to be hoped that, for the sake of the poor people in Tokio, this fire will be the last of the season. The number of houses and the quantity of property destroyed in the capital since the commencement of the winter must be enormous.

The following story, which has been going the round of the native press, is told in the Mainichi Shimbun, probably not so much for the sake of the story itself as for its application, which evidently is meant to convey a meaning not exactly apparent to the eye:—"Last year, while Japan was engaged in a controversy with China, bets were made between Englishmen and Frenchmen to the amount of three million yen, the former maintaining that Japan would get the worst of the diplomatic game then being played. Anxious to retrieve the loss they sustained on that occasion, the Englishmen have now made a bet of equal amount that the insurgents will conquer the Imperialists in the present struggle. It may be asked, 'why should the English thus favour the rebels?' The answer is, that when their countrymen fought with the Satsuma men in Kagoshima they were obliged to retreat without capturing even one fort, and they greatly respect the prowess of the Southerners. In fact, they say in their newspapers that all the military power in Japan is vested in the Satsuma clan. We have been told the above by a Chinaman. If it be true, the eyes of Englishmen must be as serviceable as a knot-hole in a piece of wood, when they are looking at the affairs of our country."

The Nichi-Nichi-shimbun, referring to the shizoku of Shonai, Yamagata-ken, says:—Various rumours are heard in Tokio. In the city of Tsurugaoka, late Sakai, there is a party consisting of stubborn shizoku. They are intimate friends with the Satsuma men, and respect Saigo as their father or lord, just as the Christians revere the Cross, and the Buddhists adore Amida. When the news of the Kagoshima expedition first came to them, on or about the 23rd February, they became much excited, and held meetings, where they debated whether they should assist their friends or not. But their chiefs ordered them to disperse, and reassemble only at such time as they should be sure that Saigo had taken the lead of the insurgents. They accordingly dispersed, and a force of troops from Sendai arrived in the Yamagata-ken, which was, besides, well guarded by police. But as soon as the news of the deposition of Saigo and the two others was received by them on the 4th March they again became excited, and busied themselves collecting firearms, ammunition and swords. It was then too late for the shizoku to take up arms against the authorities, and the Kencho purchased all the firearms and ammunition in their possession.

PEKING.

The Courier's Correspondent says:—

I think you will be glad to hear that the missionaries labouring in the famine districts in the north of Shantung have already begun to reap their reward. We hear of nearly 200 baptisms and of over a thousand inquirers. Most of these are from regions untouched by the grain distribution. About eight days ago we had an unusually heavy fall of rain for this time of the year. The rain only fell for a few hours in the night, but in the morning all the low-lying places in the streets were flooded. I mentioned some time ago that there had been an incipient tail-cutting. That incident was explained. One youth in the binding office of the American press, seeing a fellow-workman nodding over his desk, was seized with a mischievous desire to apply the shears which lay at hand. Now the mania seems to have begun in earnest. It is reported that many persons in the outer city have lost a portion or the whole of the tail; sometimes the loss is sustained in the daytime, and sometimes by night. Some of the people are in a state of terror, believing that the individual who loses his tail will die within a hundred days. Others seem indifferent, saying, "What does it matter if the tail goes?" The inner city is as yet free from this mysterious epidemic, though charms are being freely distributed amongst the people. More astounding than the loss of tails is the news brought by your last issue that quondam missionaries have been by their presence sanctioning the rites of ancestral worship. How many years ago is it that these gentlemen would have said to any one who prophesied such an event, "Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?" If a train leaves the rails it is very apt to come to grief.

TIENTSIN.

The correspondent of the Daily News writes under date of April 6:—

I only hear of one item of important or interesting news, viz., the return of the Viceroy Li on the 4th inst. What moves he may propose are yet unknown. A report is in circulation that a nephew of Governor Li has come up from the South, bringing serious charges to his Excellency in regard to irregularities in the management of the C. M. S. N. Co.'s business. I cannot confirm the rumour, however.

I wrote last week of the memorial tablets in honour of Hai Ch'ang Wu. It may interest you to know that twenty of the literati of Tientsin have preferred charges against his son, before the local official, of irregularities in connection with this ceremony and procession.

An honorary tablet has recently been placed, by Imperial decree, in the Hsie-kung-sz, outside the west gate, setting forth the merits of one Hai Ch'ang Wu, a wealthy resident of Tientsin, who died two years ago. He rendered some services to the Government at the time of the rebel invasion, for which the posthumous honours are awarded.

Although the beneficiaires of the soup-kitchens were sent away some time ago, there are still a large number of poor people on the streets.

CHEFOO.

The Rev. H. Corbett, a missionary gentleman employed in the southern part of Shantung, distributing food among the sufferers from the famine, writes:—

The money that has just arrived has gladdened my heart, for it will enable me to alleviate the sufferings of many, and also to save life. Last week I found one family which I had formerly known. The man was unable to rise from his couch; his whole body terribly swollen, death seemed near at hand. His wife, formerly a large stout woman, was emaciated so that her relations would not have known her. Three children were crying for food. Some tea was given to the man, and rice which I had brought with me was cooked as speedily as possible. He ate four large bowls and pleaded for more. He is now able to walk about, and says he will soon be able to work on his farm. This is only one case among many I might mention. A man died from hunger in the village from which I am writing, leaving a starving family. Daily I hear of deaths from starvation. Many have committed suicide when they found they must starve. My plan has been to send reliable men to visit towns and the villages, quietly inquire for those who are entirely destitute, get their names, and then send them word to come at an appointed time to some centre, when I distribute according to the size of the family and the necessity of the case, giving a sum sufficient to help them over the present months. Without some plan closely adhered to, I do not see how any efficient aid could be rendered by distribution. Many have come with doleful stories, but when I sent some one to inquire I found they were not likely to starve, at least there were others more needy. With the funds just received, I shall be able to enlarge the circle and render aid more or less over the greater part of Chimeh. I have written to Mr. Richard to despatch a messenger to me, if he has not sufficient force to reach the greatest number possible with the means at his command. Dr. Devius and several efficient natives have gone, so possibly my services may not be required. The destitution there (Ching-chow Fu) greatly exceeds the general destitution here. I have not enjoyed my food since coming here and seeing the people daily eating the dried potato vine. They grind it and mix it with water, and take it in balls, very much as they would take down pills. Those who can afford a little bean to mix with it get along better. Old people and children soon succumb on this diet; 80 per cent. or more are living on this. I could use an almost unlimited amount of means in aiding the destitute.

Recent reports from the central districts describe the famine as getting more and more intensified as time goes on. Mr. Richard, writing from Cheng-chow-foo, under date the 29th March, says the district magistrate had informed him that their funds were getting very low, and had requested a share of the remittances by foreigners. He said the suffering was very great, and that they have not sufficient money to distribute or supply the gruel long. How long? I asked. Till about the end of the month, he answered; then the starvation will be very great. When saying this, I must say, his eyes filled at the prospect.

last year. The advance in the value of cess per cash, as compared with 1876, was equivalent to about 5 mace a picul. It was generally thought that the funds sent to the Hankow Tea districts were 30 per cent., and to the Ningchow districts 50 per cent. less than last year.

Antoine, the toll-collector at the bridge of boats, where the riot recently occurred, has been brought up before the Austro-Hungarian Consul, but no evidence being offered against him he was discharged. The bridge had not been reopened to traffic on the 7th April.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 13th April; the French mail from London Feb. 23 was received on the 10th April.

The general news from Shanghai by the present mail is not of a very important character, the most interesting event being the meeting of the North China Insurance Company, a summary of whose report we gave in our last issue. The Chairman, in proposing its adoption, said that beyond congratulating the shareholders on the eminently satisfactory results of the company's business for that period he was not aware that there was much for him to say. But before asking them to pass the report and accounts he thought the following details might prove of interest: The premia collected for the half-year were Tls. 632,950.30, being the largest amount ever yet earned in six months. In the corresponding half-year of 1875 the net premia was Tls. 536,598.17. The total premia for the year 1876 was Tls. 1,190,883, against Tls. 1,039,844 in 1875. The total amount insured in 1876 was Tls. 118,269,728, as compared with Tls. 97,609,491 in 1875. Losses and claims paid during the half-year under review amount to Tls. 253,215.11, of which the most important item is the Sarpedon's loss by collision; and, unfortunately for all concerned in her, that vessel has been held to blame. The settlements of claims on the 1876 underwriting account, up to 31st December last, were about 41 per cent. of the premia received, and as a large proportion of the risks have now terminated, only about Tls. 12,000,000 being still running, the result may be considered very satisfactory. As regarded the present year, it was too early to form any definite opinion as to the result of the Company's business, as the London and other distant agency accounts for the first quarter are not to hand; but premia amounting to about Tls. 184,000 appears in the books, and claims paid since 31st December to about Tls. 75,000.

The North China Daily News publishes a translation of the last report of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company. The especial wishes and intent of the founders have been quite well understood, but it is interesting to have them openly stated. A tolerably just impression, too, prevailed as to the financial position of the Company, but it is none the less interesting to find this impression confirmed by the actual statement of figures. The accounts refer only to the term ended in September last; and the Company appears then to have had stock valued at Tls. 1,822,737, of which amount only Tls. 685,100 had been raised by shares, the remainder having been obtained by loan—of Government moneys, from native banks, from private individuals, and from the Insurance Company which was some time since created in connection with the Steamer Company. It does not appear that anything is written off for depreciation, and a "deficit" of Tls. 35,000 is shown; still a 5 per cent. dividend is spoken of. The purchase of the S.S.N. Company has been since consummated, and a further advance of Tls. 1,000,000 was obtained from the Government towards that object. Whether any more shares have since been allotted, or whether the remainder of the purchase-money will have also to be raised by loan, is not shown, but in the meantime the proportion of shares shown to be taken up to the capital employed seems small.

Some long-wanted improvements in the Settlement are being made by the Municipal Council. The widening of Nanking-road, at Lee Ching's corner, is in a fair way of being completed, and a further move is to be made to obtain the necessary slice off the lower portion of the same block, at the corner of Honan-road. Messrs. Dent and Co. made an offer to sell a strip of land widening the Kiukiang-road for Tls. 1,500, but it was declined by the Council. The wheelbarrow strike seems to have come to an end, and licenses for over 2,000 barrows have been taken out.

From the paper above named we take the following items:—

The two Chinese gunboats having on board the late Tartar General of Fohkien and his family and attendants left on the 10th April for the North. At starting the usual salute was fired.

All the different Consular flags were half-mast on that day, in respect to the memory of Colonel Fukobara, the late military attaché to the Japanese Legation, who was killed while bravely leading a charge against the rebels in Japan. He was well-known and much respected, and the news of his death was received with great regret.

The third annual Flower Show is advertised to be held in H.B.M.'s Consular grounds during the second or third week in May.

We notice that a second pair of crows are building a nest on the P. and O. flagstaff—on the top of the lower mast. On Saturday evening they attracted great attention, being so tame as to break twigs from the low trees in the E-wo compound and convey them to the nest, heedless of several passers-by who lingered to watch their operations.

An unusual event in natural history has occurred at "The Farm." One of Mr. Ferguson's Shanghai-bred Ayrshire cows gave birth to two bull calves, weighing together 121½ lbs., one being 72 lbs. and the other 49½ lbs. The biography of the mother is somewhat remarkable. Christened after Fielding's heroine, she is appropriately named "Amelia." She was born in the spring of 1872, having been bred by Mr. W. Lent, and has calved four times, all her offspring being bulls, and she is besides a most prolific milker. Altogether, this speaks well for cattle-breeding in Shanghai.

Most of our readers are aware that the sight presented by the peach orchards in the neighbourhood of the Loong-hwa pagoda at this time of the year is exceedingly beautiful; and very many, during the last few days, have visited the neighbourhood. The whole country is covered with trees, which are now in perfect fulness of blossom.

The new French Gas Shares offered for sale at auction were taken at seventy-one, which is exactly the equivalent price of the shares in the English Company.

From the Celestial Empire we take the following:—

The demolition of old King-kee (Augustin Heard and Co.'s hong) has, we notice, been stopped. It is said that this has been done by order of a gentleman who holds a lien on the property.

The case against William Henry Shaw, charged with stealing Tls. 5,800 belonging to his employer, Mr. Francis, at Kiukiang, again came before the Supreme Court on the 11th April, but, on the application of Mr. Rennie, it was again adjourned for a week.

The appearance of the Public Garden just now is such as to justify the highest eulogiums. During the last week the weather has been moist and hot, and however disagreeable this may be to human beings the effect upon the vegetable kingdom is undeniably most favourable. The grass is now beginning to look charmingly green and soft, while the corner at the Northern end—"Poet's Corner" we have heard it called, from its seclusion and beauty—is a perfect picture. The flowerbeds which decorate the lawn are really a brilliant sight, some of them gorgeous with tulips, scarlet, yellow, and striped, while others are all ablaze with magnificent clusters of double hyacinths, which are now in the fullest bloom. These are of every hue, from white and the most delicate pink to pale purple and dark, affording an exquisite contrast to the vivid verdure with which they are surrounded, as in a frame. The belt of rare shrubs which lines the lawn and shelters it from the north-easterly wind presents also a beautiful appearance, and gives a perfect finish to the whole, while the effect is heightened by a few beautiful little trees growing in wooden stands, which are carefully shielded from the attacks of the profane by fine wires, over which, by the way, it is by no means impossible to come to grief during an evening stroll. Some of the camellias, too, are extremely handsome, and the garden in its present aspect reflects the very highest credit upon the gentlemen who have undertaken its superintendence.

HANGCHOW.

A correspondent sends to the North China Herald an account of the trial of a Chinese criminal, which can hardly be surpassed by the most ridiculous tales narrated of African savages. It occurred some time ago, but has not the less interest, as illustrating some of the views and practices of the rulers of the people. A secretary attached to one of the yamens in the city was mysteriously murdered in a lonely place on one of the city hills. Every effort was made to discover the murderer, but not the least clue as to the motive or the agent of the deed could be obtained. The officials then concluding that the case was too hard for those whose authority was confined to the visible world, had recourse to those who took cognisance of the affairs of the invisible world; that is to say, the gods of the city.

The trial occurred in one of the temples on the city hill, and the bench of judges consisted of the criminal judge of the province, who sat in the centre, the most honourable seat; on his right hand, the seat of honour, sat the god which ranks with the governor of a provincial city; on his left, the governor of the city. These three sat on the platform. In front of them, the two district magistrates, with the two corresponding district gods, sat at a table. In each case the officer of the invisible world occupied the seat of honour on the right hand. A number of official runners were in attendance. The trial took place at night, as it is said the officers of the invisible world would not serve in the day time. The manner of conducting the trial was truly characteristic. Several strawmen were prepared and brought before their honours, to represent the criminal, and these were examined with torture. The lictors were ordered to beat the straw criminals to make them confess. But as they were incapable of making articulate sounds, the officials depended upon the drawing of the lot for an expression of their opinion and feelings in the matter. So, after a good beating, the lot was drawn according to the common method in the temple, but without giving any satisfactory result, and the affair is now cited as a case in which neither the officers of the visible nor the invisible world were able to secure justice, and hence the uselessness of appealing to them.

At the quarterly meeting of the native Christians, held here a few days ago, the case of the sufferers from famine in the North was presented by the leader, and a collection was taken up, which amounted to a little more than a hundred dollars.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 19th April; the French mail from London March 9 arrived out on the 18th April.

The health of the Colony, according to the report of the Colonial Surgeon, continues satisfactory. Dr. Ayres states that there has been a slight increase in the mortality among the European community as compared with the previous year, but the health of the residents has, on the whole, been good. The health of the Police and of the Military—more especially that of the latter—during the year exhibits a decided improvement. Last year only 563 patients were admitted to the military hospital, and two deaths occurred, compared with 716 admitted and nine deaths in 1875. The Regiment is a fresh out, but this fact certainly does not account for the improvement altogther, since 1875 showed a decrease in sickness and mortality over 1874, and the 80th Regiment was stationed here in those years. The main cause of the decrease is therefore ascribed to improved drainage.

The Daily Press in commenting on the above-named reports, observes that when remarking on the health of the prisoners in Victoria Gaol the Colonial Surgeon touches on the opium smoking question. He avers that the effects of the drug have been greatly exaggerated. It was formerly the rule to put prisoners addicted to the habit under special treatment, allowing them a certain quantity of opium per diem and decreasing the amount every day, at the same time using tonics and stimulants, such as gin and quinine, to support them. Dr. Ayres has found, by experience, that there is no necessity for this indulgence, and in very few cases has he permitted either opium or gin to be given. He maintains that opium smoking has very little permanent effect on the system, and can as readily be stopped, with no more harm to the subject, as tobacco smoking. An opium smoker, he points out, consumes but a small quantity of the drug, and its power is not exhausted by one smoking, as the ashes are re-prepared over and over again. The conclusion he arrives at is, that when smoked in moderation opium is no more harmful than tobacco, and that the effects of opium smoking and opium eating have been confounded together in the minds of the British public.

The returns of the revenue and expenditure of the Colony for the year 1876 have been issued. The total revenue was $885,308.54. The receipts from land revenue amount to $136,413.40, showing a decrease of $11,083.06 on the previous year; rents, exclusive of lands, amount to $61,446.10, an increase of $3,799.31; payments for licenses amount to $179,389.98, to which the opium monopoly contributes $133,000, $4,000 less than in the previous year, while the nett decrease on all licenses amounts only to $3,510.02. Taxes amount to $288,354.94, showing a decrease of $2,277.69. Postage also shows a decrease of $2,631.49, the receipts from this source being $53,760.01. Fees of office amount to $72,161.81, showing an increase of $8,420.40, to which increase light dues contribute $4,959.28. The remaining receipts from various sources make up the total given above. The largest portion of this sum is of course absorbed by the salaries of the various officials, from the Governor downwards. $176,628.61 is set down for the police, being $2,796.56 less than in 1875. The expenditure on works and buildings, roads, streets, and bridges, amount to $190,954.57, an increase of $39,092.20 on that of 1875. The military contribution also shows an increase of $7,949.99, the amount of the contribution being $105,855.53, as against $97,905.54 for the previous year, which, of course, is caused by loss in exchange. The total expenditure amounts to $902,500.21, being an increase of $32,677.70 on that of 1875, and $17,191.67 more than the total revenue.

The combination among the Chinese Cotton and Yarn dealers, which has attracted so much attention, was breaking up, and several of the Hongs were beginning to commence transactions secretly; but were soon discovered, and the Canton Cotton Guild forthwith passed sentence of excommunication on the recalcitrant firms, forbidding any of its members to have transactions with them under heavy penalties. According, however, to the Press, the rebellious hongs openly defied the Guild, and carried on business with the foreign merchants on the old terms without any effort at concealment. This defection from its ranks had evidently had a great effect on the Guild, for it was trying a new policy. By its subsequent action coercion was virtually admitted to be a failure. It empowered the commission agents to do business on the old terms—that is, payment for goods by notes—on condition that foreign merchants would make an allowance of half per cent. Several wily attempts, too, were made to induce one or two of the foreign firms to give way by the use of specious promises. These overtures had, however, all been steadily refused, and the foreign merchants had wisely maintained a firm, dignified, and unanimous stand on the subject. They co-operated to resist the audacious attempt at coercion on the part of native dealers, and intend to carry it through. Indeed, they were bound, both by motives of self-respect and self-interest to show themselves unyielding on this question, as it was well known that the native dealers in opium and piece goods were watching the issue of the struggle in the cotton trade with the keenest interest, and that were the Cotton Guild to gain any concession it would have the certain and immediate effect of causing other native guilds to adopt the same line of conduct.

A marine Court of Inquiry has been held at the Harbour Office to investigate the circumstances attending the loss of the Naworth Castle. The Court was composed as follows:—Mr. May, president; Captain Thomsett, harbour-master; Mr. McMurdo, Government marine surveyor; Mr. Linstead, unofficial justice of the peace; and Captain Edmunds, master of the P. and O. steamship Malacca. The following was the finding:—

"We find that the British barque Naworth Castle, official number 58,116,354 tons, of Sunderland, left Swatow, in China, on the 13th February last with a cargo of sugar, bound to Falmouth, England, for orders; and that the vessel was totally lost on the Bombay Shoal, Paracels Group, China Sea, at about 0.45 A.M. of the 16th February. The log books, charts, and all other papers connected with the navigation of the ship having been lost, the Court is unable to form an opinion as to the cause of this casualty, beyond that in two and a half days the ship was set about one hundred miles to the westward of what was supposed to be her position. We find that the master, Henry P. Weppner, was washed overboard and drowned soon after the vessel struck, and that a seaman named William Scott was also drowned in endeavouring to swim to a boat from the ship. The remainder of the crew were taken on board a Chinese junk from the boat into which they had got, and were ultimately landed at or near Leong-soy, on the S.E. side of the island of Hainan, whence they were transferred to the recently opened port of Hoihow, and from there sent to Hong Kong by the British Consul."

The police-station at Hung Ham, near the Kowloon Docks, has been attacked by thieves whilst the European constable in charge was out investigating a daring robbery of large sheets of iron-plating from the docks. It appears that on his return to the station he found the Indian constables asleep and his quarters ransacked of all he was possessed of.

The following account, duly certified, of the average amount of bank-notes in circulation in Hong Kong during the month ending 28th March is published in the Gazette:—

Banks.	Average Amount.
Oriental Bank Corporation...	$269,530
Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London and China	653,836
Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China ...	415,682
Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation...	1,637,945

Several local appointments, &c., are gazetted. The Administrator has recognised provisionally Don Edward Toda as Vice-Consul for Spain; Mr. A. Falconer has been appointed provisionally Assistant Superintendent of the Hong Kong Fire Brigade; and Mr. McEwen, Assistant Harbour-master, has been provisionally appointed to act until further notice as Deputy Superintendent of Police, vice Mr. Creagh, appointed Acting Superintendent.

From a return in the Gazette it appears that the largest number of prisoners in the gaol on the last day of any week during 1876 was 563, on November 12th, and the smallest, 347, on February 20th. The largest number of Europeans confined in the gaol at any one time was 75, and the smallest 30. On January 2nd the European prisoners numbered 68, and on December 31st only 30. The largest number of female prisoners (Chinese or coloured) at one time was 38 and the smallest 10.

CANTON.

The Daily Press Correspondent writes:—

A proclamation posted up in the Viceroy's yamen says that forty-nine pirates were to have been executed at the execution ground by the South Gate on the 13th April, but that only forty-two suffered, seven of them having appealed for a new trial.

Notice has been issued to the effect that the mourning for the late Emperor Tung-chi ceased on the 13th instant, since which date officials have been allowed to don their usual costume.

The Viceroy and the Lieutenant-Governor have re-opened the Yuet San and Yuet Wah schools in person, when they addressed the students and examined the essays.

On the afternoon of the 10th April the Viceroy and suite inspected the Arsenal at the South Gate. He appeared to be quite satisfied with the condition of the guns, machinery, &c., and expressed himself to that effect.

The other day a bride, accompanied by her servant, while on her way in a chair to meet her husband, in the Sam Shuey district, fell in with a band of robbers, who carried off both mistress and maid, and now demanded a heavy ransom for their release.

PAKHOI.

By the arrival of the Chinese gunboat Fei Hoo the Daily Press received the following information anent the new port of Pakhoi:—

Digitized by Google

The port was formally opened on the 2nd instant by Mr. McKean, the Commissioner of Customs appointed to Pakhoi, and salutes were fired by the Chinese gunboats Fei Hoo and Shen-chi. The British gunboat Fly arrived with H.B.M. Consul on board, and all vessels were dressed. The port is very much like Hoihow, being very shallow, and vessels are compelled to lie a long way off. There is a small river running into the bay, which is navigable by junks, but it is dry at low tide. The British Consul was compelled to remain on board the gunboat Fly, as there was no suitable house ready for Europeans to live in. The principal products of the port are said to be sugar, betel nut, and spice. Game, in the shape of snipe, partridges, and wild ducks, is plentiful and cheap, and fowl of all kinds are cheap. There is a large city across the bay, about seven miles from Pakhoi, noted for its pagoda, having a large tree growing up its centre, with its branches shooting out of the windows. The port of Pakhoi is much used by junks from Hong Kong and Amoy. Pakhoi and the islands near are noted for the presence of great numbers of French priests, all of whom dress like the natives, and wear the queue; one of them resided on one of the islands for eighteen years. The Chinese gunboat Fei-Hoo left H.M.S. Fly and the Chinese gunboat Suitsing in port when she departed. She passed a French paddle-wheel gunboat, name unknown, evidently from Hoihow, steaming into Pakhoi.

A correspondent in dilating on the various and promising sanitary and other improvements going on in the town of Sooloo itself observes that:—However antagonistic the idea of free trade in that quarter may be to the views and interests of a few, yet the many will see that Sooloo may yet become of great importance to Spain in many respects, if only a liberal care be taken. The liberty of trading might be restricted to a few ports, and of course nothing contraband of war admitted into the Archipelago until a proper pacification and due submission takes place among the still recusant chiefs. The general population are believed to be favourable to the supremacy of the Spaniards, who proceed on a humane and liberal plan among all who have peaceable intentions. Let free trade have a fair trial at first, and then see what is to be done in the way of imposts. Such a plan will be in accordance with the advance of the age we live in, at all events.

The works at the coal mines of Sugud, in the province of Albay, were in a forward condition by last accounts, and there were hopes that shortly abundance of good coal will be extracted therefrom.

It is also notified that the fact that the Messageries steamers will touch at Colombo during the N.E. monsoon will not in any way after the dates fixed for the other points in their voyages.

There have been in the past week the ceremonies attending the cremation of three of the Royal family—Phra Ong Chow Chai Klang (son of the King), Phra Ong Chow Butsabong Buk Ban (princess), Phra Ong Chow Unakan (prince), (the two latter children of P'ra Chom Klaw). It is customary to give many presents at the time of cremation. This year the publications of the several printing offices have been bought as presents for the occasion. It is an admirable idea, and must lead to the preparing of books suitable for presents.

The Sarawak Gazette of the 16th April has an article upon the falling off in the production of rice in the Principality, and attributes it to the high prices of raw produce which has led to the abandonment of rice-planting for other cultivations and manufactures.

H. H. the Rajah, accompanied by Messrs. Gueritzand Deshon, started in [the Aline on the 8th April on a visit to the Rejang river, and on the 10th when going up the river to Balleh Fort, in a small steamer, the Ghita, a heavy fresh was encountered near the Fort; the Ghita was driven on the bank helpless against the torrent, and the whole party had a most narrow escape from drowning. H. H. the Rajah was swept overboard, and a whirlpool sucked him under the steamer, but with great exertion he contrived to get his head above the water and was rescued by a boat from the Fort. The rest were saved by other boats manned by Dyaks and Chinese, and after some time the Ghita was swept into smooth water, minus funnel, bulwarks, awnings, stanchions, &c., and otherwise much battered by huge trunks of trees brought down by the fresh.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 26th April; the French mail from London March 23 was received on the 23rd April. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

This week will see two homeward mail steamers despatched from here within two days' interval of each other, owing to the change of monsoon. The M.M. steamer Djemnah left Hong Kong at noon on the 19th April, and the P. and O. steamer Geelong at noon on the 21st.

We learn that the general agents of the E. and A. Company have received a telegram from the Brisbane agents, dated the 18th April, to the effect that the Normanby had arrived off Cooktown on the 17th April, all being well on board, but, notwithstanding, all passengers for Queensland ports were to go into quarantine, while the steamer and her Sydney passengers were allowed to proceed south without any detention. H.E. Sir William Jervois, who took his passage by the Normanby, from here for Sydney, was, therefore, not quarantined or detained in Queensland.

When the case of the eight Chinamen who are accused of being concerned in the attempt at kidnapping coolies to Deli was called in Court, a nolle prosequi was entered by the consent of the Attorney-General on two of the three counts of the indictment under which they had been charged, and Mr. Vaughan, who appeared for the prisoners, advised them to plead guilty on the third count. The Attorney-General recommended the prisoners to mercy on political grounds, the Government having lately introduced a Bill under which protection would be afforded to the coolies, and by which they should be able to come directly into contact with Government officials. His lordship having passed some severe censures upon the conduct of the Dutch planter concerned, on whose behalf Mr. Donaldson watched the case, postponed sentence.

We learn from official sources that only two deaths from cholera have been reported within the last two days, making thirty deaths in all from that disease, in its sporadic form, officially recorded within the last twenty-seven days, and that the Medical authorities consider the sanitary state of the town to have recently improved, and to be on the whole satisfactory, or not, at all events, affording any reason for alarm or uneasiness. It is only right to point out that while official statements differ widely on this cholera question from the general impressions prevalent, the former are much more likely to be substantially correct, especially as the authorities have been put on the alert by the general alarm recently felt and which found expression in these columns. It will be acknowledged that four deaths from cholera in twenty-four hours or so in connection with employés of this office, and authenicated reports of other deaths among the sale class, was sufficiently alarming, to say nothing of the reports with regard to the Chinese, Malays, Klings and other Natives.

We understand that at a meeting of the building committee of the Presbyterian Church three tenders were received and opened for the building of a new church. Mr. P. Nuy's tender was $24,500, Wong Ah Hock's was $22,500, and Messrs. Riley, Hargreaves, and Co.'s was $19,500. The latter tender was accepted, and Mr. E. J. Wells, C.E., one of the committee, ha kindly offered his services gratuitously to superintend the erection of the church. Messrs. Riley, Hargreaves, and Co. provide an experienced clerk of the works at their own cost. The site or the church is at the foot of Fort Canning, opposite the Dhobie Green, and was granted by his Excellency Sir Andrew Clarke, when Governor of the Straits. The design of the church is after the Italian style, and will when completed be an ornament to the town. It is expected the church will be open for public service by the end of the year.

A correspondent in Sunghie Ujong, under date 16th April, sends us the following account of a remarkable encounter between a boa, some fifteen feet long, and a bull-dog, belonging to the Resident, Captain Murray—the same dog, unless we are mistaken, who distinguished himself by charging with his master and the 10th across the swamp when Paroa stockade was stormed in December 1875. The boa had been confined in a cage for some days, but having been disposed of to a Chinese doctor for its gall, to be used as medicine, he was hauled out of the cage on the 16th to be taken away "The boa was immediately attacked by the dog, who had formerly had a passage of arms with him. For some time the boa was quiet, and only now and then made a snap. The dog got bold at last, and seized the snake by the head, but the tables were soon turned. In an instant the boa caught the dog by the upper lip and held firmly on, the dog backing vainly and trying to get away. In less than half a minute the whole of the snake's body had enfolded the dog's in so close an embrace that the head only could be seen. Before choppers could be procured, blood was gushing from the dog's mouth, and I heard his bones give one crack, and it was only by chopping the boa to pieces that we saved the dog. I found on examination that the boa has very strong, sharp, recurved teeth, not only in the jaws, but also in the palate bones, which accounts for the dog being unable to extricate himself in the first instance, for the teeth being like the "Vacune beeche" of South Africa, the more he struggled backward the tighter he was held by the boa. I may add for the information of the friends of the dog that he is none the worse for his squeeze."

EXPORTS.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—Business in produce has been moderately active since our last and a slight decline in freights and in exchange has tended to facilitate operations somewhat. Sugar: Our market has been very firm, and sales during the fortnight amount to about 25,000 piculs, extra at $5.37½ to $5.43¾ per picul and about 10,000 piculs superior at $5 per picul. More Sugar is still wanted at about these rates, but dealers are anything but anxious sellers, as it is now certain that the deficiency in the Manila crop will amount to something like 300,000 piculs, and considerable fears are entertained for the coming one, the want of grain greatly interfering with the planting of the new cane. We are glad to say, however, that this deficiency will just be about made up in the Visayas, as the crops there are likely to exceed those of the past year by close upon 250,000 piculs, and the coming ones, so far, are very promising. Unclayed: The arrivals from Taal during the fortnight amount to 20,000 piculs, part of which has been delivered under contract at $3.18¾ per picul, and the balance has been sold as it arrived at $3.06¼ to $3 per picul. At the last named price there is only a partial demand, but, so far it has not been practicable to buy at a lower rate. Ilo Ilo and Cebu advices extend to the 12th and 13th instant respectively, and in both markets prices were slightly easier. In the latter market, however, superior was being bought up for shipment to the former one. Hemp: The market has been an advancing one, and last sales have been at $5.43¾ per picul (£22 4s. 2d.) for Sorsogon and $5.31¼ per picul (£21 15s. 2d.) for current. Cebu is being held for $5.37½ per picul (£21 19s. 8d.) The advance in price has principally been caused by the decline in freights and in exchange, but stocks are also reduced to a low point, and the article is reported scarce in the principal producing districts. Sales of Quilot have been made at $6.25 to $6.50 per picul (£26 to £26 17s. 10d.), and for Lupis $8 to $8.25 per picul (£32 5s. 2d. to £33 3s.) has been offered and refused. Coffee: A good demand exists for the article and all that has arrived has been readily placed at $20.12½ to $21 pe picul £74 17s. 9d. to £78 0s. 5d.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Piet and Co.'s Circular says:—Coffee, Java: A parcel of West India preparation or Blue Bean has changed hands at Samarang at f.59 per picul, but of ordinary preparation we have not heard of any sales. The Government will sell publicly during the year 100,000 piculs. Padang: The usual quarterly auction was held at Padang on the 28th March, when 19,400 piculs, No. 1, averaged f.60.44 per picul and 800 piculs Triage f.28.01 per picul. Refining Sugar: The market has been more active and purchasers have shown some inclination to meet the views of planters. Grocery Sugars: Nothing has been done as yet in these descriptions for the season now fast approaching.

SINGAPORE.—Messrs. Boustead and Co.'s Report says:—Tin: During the fortnight about 3,400 piculs have been settled for the States at $20.25 to $19.70, closing at $20. For America there is still some inquiry, but for England and China there is no demand whatever. Supplies continue to come in slowly, and unless prices improve we do not look for any increase. Gambier: With advices of a considerable advance in England the price has rapidly advanced to $4.75, at which it closes; from $4.40 to closing quotation 1,000 tons have been settled. Supplies are coming in very slowly in consequence of continued drought, and if demand for England continues we expect dealers will be able to exact a further advance. Cube Gambier: About 3,000 piculs No. 1 have been settled at $5.70 to $5.75, and dealers now decline to sell further. No transactions in No. 2, which continues very scarce. Cutch: 2,000 boxes settled "to arrive" at $5.52½ to $5.50. Further lots are expected to come to market within a month, and we expect to see prices decline. Black Pepper: There has been very little demand, and prices have fluctuated considerably; prices opened at $8.27½, but rapidly declined, with few transactions, to $7.87½ at close, however, with a slight demand for India, the price has advanced to $8.5; the transactions reported are only 2,600 piculs; supplies have been very small, and it is this that has caused the advance at close. White Pepper: About 1,300 piculs settled at $15½ to 14¼, according to quality; these figures show a decline of 25c. to 50c. per picul on previous quotations. Bonthyne Coffee: 120 piculs settled at $21⅝, and about 50 piculs remain, for which same price is askep, but at this there are now no buyers; no important supplies of Bonthyne can be expected for two months or so. Nutmegs: About 200 piculs in shell have been settled, and market is now bare; no further arrivals are expected for about three weeks; we quote $73 to 72 for good 110's. Mace: Considerable supplies have come in, and good quality has been sold at $54.

SAIGON.—Messrs. Kaltenbach, Engler and C.'s Market Report says:—Rice: The hopes entertained when issuing our last report as to a further decline have not been realised, and despite the unfavourable advices to hand from China, prices do not show any change of consequence on last quotations, and continue to rule high, owing to the paucity of stocks and a considerable falling off perceptible in the receipts from the interior. Cotton: Uncleaned, which remains in very small supply, has advanced to $5.70 per picul. No. 1 cleaned being quoted $16.10 and No. 2 do. $9 per picul. Fish: Arrivals have been liberal and hence all kinds have considerably declined in value. Hides: Buffalo remain quoted as before $7.90 per picul whilst both scoured and unprepared Cow have receded to $17.50 and $14.25 per picul respectively.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

Telegraphic advices report that the Tea Market opened at Hankow on the 17th inst., and that from 15,000 to 20,000 packages were settled that day. The quality was inferior to last season. The opening rates were for Oonfas Tls. 5, and for Ningchows Tls. 10 lower than last year. A Reuter's Telegram dated May 25th reports that the Gleneagles and Loudoun Castle left Woosung with the first of the New Season's Teas that day. Freights for the New Teas at Hankow are quoted by telegram at £5 to £5 10s.

The Messageries Maritimes steamer Djemnah, with the present inward mail, brought 170 passengers and a general cargo, including 880 bales of silk, 7,600 packages of tea, and 480 packages of sundries, also specie to the value of £15,000 for London, which part of her cargo will be forwarded to its destination by the company's steamer Euphrate, due in London on or about the 5th June. The P. and O. Company's steamer Peshawur with the heavy portion of last inward mail left Gibraltar on the 22nd inst.

THE Société des etudes Japonaises Chinoises et Indo Chinoise of Paris has elected the following gentlemen as honorary members:—Mr. LOUIS ROCHET, formerly Professor of Mongol and Manchu at the Ecole Speciale des Langues Orientales; M. FRED. BARROT and M. de GREHAN, Consul General for H.M. the King of SIAM. There are three vacancies for corresponding members; and the first election will take place on the 28th June. All gentlemen engaged in Oriental studies are eligible, and application is to be made to the President, the Comte de MONTBLANE.

THE subscriptions in aid of the sufferers by the famine in China are, we are pleased to observe, progressing satisfactorily. The Baptist Missionary Society (as will be seen by the advertisement) acknowledge a large number of donations, and Messrs. JOHN BOURNE and Co., of Mark Lane, have received further sums, aggregating close upon £40.

THE CHINESE MINISTERS.

The Ministers have attended a ball given at Willis's Rooms in aid of the Central London Throat and Ear Hospital, Gray's-inn-road. The entertainment was numerously and fashionably attended, being also under the immediate patronage of the Brazilian Minister, the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress, and many other distinguished personages. They were also present at the first great firework display of the season at the Crystal Palace, and will be present at the dinner of the Geographical Society.

The Lords of the Admiralty have arrived at no decision with regard to the successor to Vice-Admiral Ryder as Naval Commander-in-Chief in China. The ability shown by Vice-Admiral Ryder in the discharge of his duties on the Station has induced the authorities to prolong his stay there for as long a period as possible.

The First Lord of the Admiralty has conferred the good service pension of £150 a year, vacant by the promotion of Colonel Penrose, C.B., upon Colonel Commandant J. H. Stewart, Royal Marines.

On the 19th inst., the Swallow, 3, gun-vessel, Commander J. B. Warren, sailed for the West Coast of Africa; and the Elk, 4, gun-vessel, Commander A. Tupman, for the Pacific.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE CAPTAIN OF THE "IMMORTALITE."

The court-martial for the trial of Captain F. A. Hume, late of the Immortalité, one of the vessels of the Detached Squadron, just returned from the Far East, who is charged with three indecent assaults on an ordinary seaman, named William Rogers, on board his ship, while at Singapore, on Dec. 22 last, was begun on board the Duke of Wellington, flagship, at Portsmouth, on Friday, the 18th inst. The Court is composed of the following officers:—Vice-Admiral Seymour, C.B., president; Rear-Admiral the Hon. F. S. A. Foley, Capts. F. T. Herbert, W. Arthur, the Hon. W. Carpenter, J. C. Wilson, G. H. Parkin, and C. R. F. Boxer, and Mr. G. P. Martin, Paymaster, R.N., Deputy-Judge Advocate. Capt. Blake, R.M., barrister-at-law, prosecuted; and Mr. Fegan, barrister at-law, appears as the prisoner's "friend."

The court-martial was brought to a conclusion on Thursday. The prisoner, in defence, emphatically denied the charges, but admitted that his kindly and, he might say, free manner towards those under him, of which he now saw the result, was very reprehensible. He analysed the statements of Rogers, and declared that he had neither in thought nor deed been guilty of any conduct such as that attributed to him. Evidence as to character having been given, the Court, after an hour's deliberation in private, came to the conclusion that on all the three occasions referred to in the charges, prisoner was guilty of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer, in that he conducted himself improperly towards Rogers. They, therefore, sentenced him to be dismissed from Her Majesty's service.

MR. HART AND THE CHINESE LOANS.

IT is certainly not surprising that the China papers, and we presume, also, the China public, have been somewhat astonished at the unexpected circular which Mr. HART, the Inspector General of Customs, issued with reference to the Loans which were projected, as was supposed, under the authority of the Chinese Government. The intimation conveyed to the effect that there was no Imperial authority in any one's hands to contract a Loan came at a moment which was somewhat inopportune (or opportune as the case may be), as a Loan was actually in the course of being concluded by the delegate of HSU TAOUTAI, apparently with the sanction of the provincial authorities, and presumably, though by no means conclusively, with that of the Imperial Government also. The tone in which the matter is treated by the China Press no doubt fairly represents the feeling of the public on the subject; but we think it is only justice both to Mr. HART and the Imperial Government of China to point out that there are considerations which place the affair in a somewhat different light to that in which it was generally, and, no doubt, not unnaturally, regarded at first blush. The public, as might be expected, felt disappointed at what seemed to some extent a repudiation of responsibility by the Peking Government of the acts of the subordinate authorities; but it was too hastily assumed that Imperial sanction had been given. No doubt, judging from our own standard, the fact that a Government official entered into an engagement of any kind might be taken as in itself binding upon the Government, provided the act were in any way one springing from the position which the official performing it occupied. But in China this conclusion cannot by any means be arrived at in all cases. The provincial authorities act in so many matters independently of those at the capital that it is absolutely necessary to be quite certain that they possess the necessary powers in any given case, if we wish to hold the Peking authorities responsible for their acts. It appears that in regard to the Loan which HSU TAOUTAI endeavoured to raise, he actually did not possess authority; but the fact was not discovered until the negotiations had gone to considerable lengths; and it seems that, at the time Mr. HART'S circular appeared, the matter was being pushed on by WU, a Hangchow banker, under precisely similar circumstances. However annoying it may have been to those who thought to complete the Loan, to be told that the Imperial Government had given no authority to it, it can hardly be denied that in the interests of the Chinese Government, and also in the interests of the foreigners concerned, Mr. HART adopted a wise course in sounding a seasonable note of warning. It was certainly better to know that the Imperial Government would not hold themselves responsible for the Loan before it was contracted than to have discovered the fact afterwards. It was clear that there was every danger of a misunderstanding arising on the subject unless some steps were taken to warn the public how the matter actually stood; and, looking at the subject in a purely practical point of view, we may congratulate both the Chinese Government and the intending investors at having been saved from what might have been a very unpleasant and very unsatisfactory complication.

While, however, admitting this in fairness to Mr. HART and the Chinese authorities at Peking, we cannot ignore that the matter, even as it at present stands, is annoying and irritating to all concerned, and is certainly not calculated to raise the credit of the Chinese Government. The lesson which is to be learnt from it is obvious on both sides. Those disposed to lend money to the Chinese authorities should, unless they negotiate direct with Peking, assume that they have only the credit of the provincial or local officials with whom they deal to look to. The security for a Loan to a moderate amount thus made need not necessarily be bad; but it cannot, of course, be regarded in the same light as if the Imperial Government gave their sanction. On the other hand, the Peking authorities should take steps to guard their credit against the injury which would be worked to it by its being wrongfully used by any of their own subordinate officials. The only way to do this effectually would be to declare that no Loan would be guaranteed by them unless contracted through a responsible agent of their own; whether, considering the already multifarious duties of the Customs, Mr. HART would be the most appropriate person to place in the position of their financial agent is a question; but if China desire to obtain money on loan it will, especially now that prominent attention has been called to the nature of the relations between the Imperial and provincial authorities, be absolutely necessary for her to place the matter in some light which will make it clear that the Peking Government holds itself responsible. On the other hand, it can do no harm if a general notification be issued stating that the Imperial Government will not, as a rule, hold itself responsible for Loans negotiated by provincial authorities.

MR. GLADSTONE ON RAJAH BROOKE.

RAJAH BROOKE has been brought before the recollection of the public in an unexpected manner, through some of the ill-considered and intemperate invective in which Mr. GLADSTONE unfortunately so often indulges, and by which he so greatly detracts from the weight of much that he says and writes. In the course of his speech in the House of Commons on the Eastern question he stated that he could not recollect a more shameful proceeding on the part of any country than the slaughter of the Dyaks by Her MAJESTY'S forces and by Sir J. BROOKE, adding that this was vindicated and approved by the House. This uncalled for and unwarranted attack upon the late Sir J. BROOKE has, we notice with pleasure, called forth from Earl GREY an earnest but temperate vindication of the memory of the late "Rajah." The aged peer, who shows that he still retains enough of his old fire to be able to make a good stand in the interests of justice, gives the details of the matter alluded to by Mr. GLADSTONE, and which show clearly that the suppression of the Dyak pirates was a perfectly justifiable and necessary act, and that Mr. GLADSTONE'S implied censure of the House of Commons was unwarranted by the circumstances under which the matter was brought forward. He says:—

The late Mr. Hume, on June 12, 1850, in moving for a commission of inquiry, made a bitter attack on Sir J. Brooke and the naval officers who had taken part in the engagement with the Borneo pirates. After a long debate the motion was rejected by a majority of 169 to 29, not, as your expression would seem to imply, because the House of Commons was indifferent to the commission of acts of cruelty by servants of the British Crown, but because it was fully satisfied, after hearing what was said on both sides, that nothing had been done which was not consistent with humanity, and which was not urgently required in order to put a stop to an atrocious system of outrage and plunder. I have felt justified in troubling you with this statement, because I hope it may induce you to look more closely into the evidence upon which you made in the House of Commons the assertion of which I complain. If you will only do this and consider the question impartially, I cannot doubt that you will find it right to withdraw the cruel charge you have brought against Sir James Brooke, which has given much pain to me and, I am sure, to his many other friends and admirers. I take a special interest in this matter, because I had the means of becoming fully acquainted with Sir J. Brooke's proceedings in Borneo from having held the office of Secretary of State for the Colonies during part of the time that he was engaged in his noble endeavour to introduce civilisation and Christianity among its barbarous inhabitants. What I then learnt excited my high admiration of him, and led me to advise the Crown to appoint him to be the first Governor of Labuan when this new colony was established, chiefly for the purpose of promoting British trade, but also not without the hope of giving at least indirect support to the interesting experiment then in progress in Sarawak. The additional information respecting him which I have since gained has only tended to confirm the impression I then received that his character was a truly noble one, and I am sanguine enough to believe that it would be regarded in the same light by yourself if you could be induced to read the letters he addressed to his mother in the earlier part of his career as Rajah of Sarawak. These, to my mind, most beautiful letters are to be found in the very interesting life of Sir James Brooke published some months ago by Miss Jacob. They were written while the events they describe were going on to a mother whom he passionately loved, obviously without the remotest idea that they would ever be published, and contain an account, bearing the clearest impress of truth and sincerity, of all that he did, and of the feelings and motives by which he was guided. We find in them a touching record of his pity for the poor oppressed Dyaks, of his righteous indignation against their oppressors, of his noble self-devotion, and of his fixed determination to hazard, and, if necessary, to sacrifice for their welfare not only the whole of his moderate private fortune, but ease, health, and life itself, while he steadily refused to listen to all the attempts that were made to induce him to use the position he had acquired for his own personal advantage.

Mr. GLADSTONE'S reply is very short, but is little to the point. He says that his recollection was that instead of there having been a protracted battle there was "a large easy unsparing slaughter" of the pirates. Vice-Admiral FARQUHAR also writes to The Times on the subject. He says :—

"I had the honour to command the expedition on the occasion of the 'so-called' slaughter alluded to, in July, 1849, Her Majesty's forces having been supported by Sir James Brooke and native allies. My orders were to attack and destroy certain piratical communities of Malays and Dyaks which had long been the terror of the north-west coast of Borneo, rendering life and property utterly insecure, and completely shutting out all commerce; and, happily for the future security of the well-disposed inhabitants and for the development of trade, a rare opportunity occurred of inflicting a severe punishment on the pirates, as I encountered and destroyed a large flotilla of piratical praams returning red-handed from slaughter, and laden with the plunder of several villages. The service I performed was fully approved by the Government of the day. The lesson thus read these pirates had a most salutary effect; it turned them in a great measure from their predatory habits and from head-hunting, and, under the wise governance of that great and good man Sir James Brooke, they became peaceful communities. The coasts, hitherto unapproachable by small traders, were rendered safe, a flourishing trade sprang up, and a country formerly reeking with blood and slaughter now owns a quiet, inoffensive, prosperous, and happy people.

In Thursday's Times a second letter appears from Admiral FARQUHAR, in which he narrates the actual facts of the encounter, and states definitely that as soon as the fight was over orders were issued to stay pursuit, although it was in the power of our naval forces to have cut off the pirates almost to a man. Admiral FARQUHAR says that from close intimacy and friendship with the late Rajah BROOKE he is in a position to assert that a more truly humane man never lived.

INQUIRIES have been made of us as to whether the Straits Settlements Association is living or dead. If we are to judge from the absence of any movement in it we might regard it as extinct, but we believe that it has not been formally dissolved. There is the same chairman, the same hon. secretary as when the Association was active in good works on behalf of the Straits community. Why, then—to use MARK TWAIN'S words—"this thusness?" The truth is, we believe, that there is no longer the union within the Association which made it powerful outside, and the more active members, rather than pass resolutions by a majority, have preferred to pass no resolutions at all. At the last meeting the whole raison d'etre of the Society was attacked by two of the leading members, who, in objecting to the proposed representations to the Secretary of State for the Colonies on the condition of judicial affairs in the Straits, maintained that the Association should take action only at the request of the community at Singapore, Penang, &c. After a warm discussion the meeting broke up without doing anything. A mistake is, we think, being made by the Association, and we call attention to the matter, hoping that a change of policy will be decided on.

THE promise made by the Under-Secretary of State that the papers relating to the Yunnan Expedition and the Chefoo Convention would shortly be laid before Parliament gives only faint hope that the matter will be settled at an early date, as the state of affairs indicated is only that which has been recognised as existing for months past. It is impossible, however, to ignore the danger which the Government here is incurring of placing itself in a false position by this continued delay. The Chinese are acting apparently in perfectly good faith in opening the new ports and carrying out the other terms of the Convention; and it will become simply impossible for us to accept what is offered on their side and refuse what we have promised on ours. This is the position into which the Government is rapidly drifting, if, indeed, it have not drifted into it already.

Unpaid letters from Japan will be charged on delivery with an additional rate of 3d. per ½ oz. Letters, post-cards, newspapers, legal and commercial documents, and patterns addressed may be registered, the registration fee being in all cases 4d., which, in addition to the postage, must be prepaid.

AT the meeting of the Aborigines' Protection Society, which took place on the 23rd inst., Sir BENSON MAXWELL, the chairman, formerly Chief Justice of the Straits Settlements, made some very important observations on the circumstances which led to the murder of the late Mr. BIRCH. We regret that these remarks are noticed only very summarily by the daily papers. As will be seen by the report which we give elsewhere, Sir BENSON considers that the conduct of Sir ANDREW CLARKE in this matter was in every way to be regretted.

WE understand that Mr. DAVIDSON, the late Resident at Perak, has declined an invitation to a public dinner, at which it was desired to express satisfaction with his administration in the native States. Mr. DAVIDSON, while warmly appreciating the honour sought to be conferred on him, deprecates any formal manifestation of it.

ABORIGINES' PROTECTION SOCIETY.

On the 23rd inst. the annual meeting of this society was held in the Temperance Hotel connected with the Friends' institute and meeting in Bishopsgate-street; Sir P. BENSON MAXWELL in the chair; but at eight the attendance was so large that the assembly adjourned to the Women's Meeting, where business commenced with the reading of the report by Mr. F. W. CHESSON, the secretary. In reference to the probable ultimate collapse of the Ottoman Empire, it urged the necessity of concerting measures for the abolition both of slavery and of the slave trade in Turkey and Egypt. With regard to the extension of the rule of the Khedive into the regions of Equatorial Africa, the committee were convinced that the only effect of it would be that, while the unfortunate negroes were harried with fire and sword, the slave markets of Egypt and Arabia would be provided with new sources of supply. Some of Mr. H. M. Stanley's friends had warmly inveighed against the society for having called Lord Derby's attention to the fact that the American traveller had hoisted the British flag on the occasion of his second attack on Bambireh, although the society had done no more than take his own story, and make that the foundation of its complaint. When Mr. Stanley's reply to Lord Derby's despatch has been received, the correspondence will be moved for. With regard to affairs in South Africa, the committee recounted the steps they had taken to express sympathy with the natives against whom the Boers of the Transvaal had recently waged war; and on the subject of the South African Confederation Bill they laid down the principle that "native Africans who have withdrawn from the tribal system, and have acquired both education and property, should not be excluded from the elective franchise, or from the enjoyment of any other civil rights." They reprobated the legalising of the practice of selling women for cattle in Natal. In their remarks on the Coolie question they stated that the British Government had stopped immigration from India to French Guiana. In conclusion, the committee congratulated Sir Arthur Gordon on his successful administration of the affairs of Fiji, and on his attempts to prevent the development of a local slave trade.

Sir BENSON MAXWELL then rose and said there was one subject not touched upon in the report, but which was a matter of some little importance as showing the manner in which we managed our dealings with inferior races. He thought it well to allude shortly to it, as he happened to have been long connected with the part of the world where it took place, and was consequently well acquainted with the subject. The meeting would remember that about a year and a half ago a report reached this country that a British officer had been murdered in the Malay Peninsular; that the population had risen against us; that troops had been sent on from China, and, in fact, that a serious state of affairs had arisen, of such a nature that it occupied public attention for some time. He would like to call attention to the manner in which we came to be connected with these people. We had a colony called the Straits Settlements in the Malay Peninsular; and for many years past the Malays had had treaties with the East India Company, and had been always in a state of amity with our Government. About four years ago some disturbances arose in the Peninsular. The Malays fought among themselves, and the Chinese immigrants also had disagreements, so that there was a good deal of trouble, and almost anarchy. Our Government had always been anxious to avoid becoming entangled with the Malay States. Lord Granville and Lord Kimberley while Secretaries for the Colonies had successively written out on the subject; but the anarchy continuing, when Sir Andrew Clarke was governor in 1873, Lord Kimberley wrote to him that the Government were still anxious to avoid interference with the Malay affairs, but the country was in such a state of anarchy that it became desirable to see if we could not use our influence with the Malay Princes to save this beautiful region from anarchy and ruin, and to ascertain whether it was desirable to appoint an English "Resident" to reside in and assist in governing the country. He should be paid by our Government, and should act only with the full sanction of the Sultan of the States. Sir Andrew Clarke accordingly called the Malay Chiefs together, and drew up certain regulations which he proposed to them to accept. Among these articles was one which said that a Resident should be appointed for the purpose of advising the native Princes, but it went on to say he was not only to give advice, but that his advice was to be followed. Another thing of importance was that the finances and revenue were to be administered under the advice of the Resident. Some time had now elapsed since the Resident in question was appointed. He was now under his grave, and Sir Benson Maxwell did not wish to say anything against his qualifications for the post; but before he had been in the country six weeks the whole place was in hot water. The Resident, it seemed, had a comprehensive scheme for the government of the country; one part of which referred to the tolls which the native chiefs had levied from time immemorial and in which their revenue consisted, and the taking away of which was nothing less than an annexation of the rights of these men to some portion of their property. The Sultan at once refused to carry the scheme into effect; and on being pressed again, a month later, refused his assent. This refusal was reported to the Governor, and the Governor wrote to the Sultan saying he had broken the Treaty. The speaker would remind the meeting what the Treaty was. We had been merely asked for an English officer to assist in the government of the country and the management of the revenue; that is to aid the Sultan in looking after the taxes, and to see that there was a better administration of justice and improved protection of life and property. But we soon taught them what we intended to understand by this contract. We practically said to them, "You undertook not only to ask our advice, but also to follow it, and to do nothing without it." This opened the eyes of the Malays to the state of things. As the English Governor read the treaty, its effect was not to supply them with an officer to assist in the government, but to hand over the country to the English. The English Government, indeed, did not stop there, for they entirely denied the right of the Malay Rajah to levy money, and such authority was given to the Resident that he had no reason to doubt his own powers to do exactly as he liked; and in one of his despatches he says: "I send you a proclamation, in which I laid down a tariff." If that was not dictation the speaker did not understand what the term meant. The Malays saw the gulf before them; and they acted a rational part. They sent a deputation of chiefs to see the Governor and complain of the conduct of the Resident, and to request that he would recall him, or that his powers might be seriously restricted. The Governor was upon the point of leaving the country, having been promoted to another appointment, namely, in India. He accordingly merely received the deputation, and said it was not in his power to do anything, which he must leave to the incoming Governor. The Malays went back, and seeing no means of obtaining justice, they retired to the jungle—and for what purpose? They saw nothing for it but to shake off the English yoke. They were in despair as to how to get rid of the burden which they had taken upon themselves so unnecessarily. The Sultan was again called upon to issue fresh orders. He resisted, and the Malays plotted. At this time Sir W. Jervois visited this country; and he thought that this Treaty, which, as explained, was under the guise of a promise to the Malays of an officer to assist them in governing the country, had virtually transferred it to England; and he, as a rational man, and one who disliked shams, tried to get the Sultan to give his consent to a proposal to take over the country at once. He proposed to both Sultans—that is, to the old one who had been deposed, and to the Sultan Abdullah, who had been set up, that this should be done; but the old Sultan said he had been no party to the treaty. He was willing to be bound by all engagements which he had entered into, or which had been entered into by his predecessor, but he would not be a party to the arrangement which the other Sultan had entered into; but at the same time he said if the English Government would give him a suitable officer to assist him to rule the country he would be obliged. Accordingly, the Governor went to the other Sultan, Abdullah, and the result was that he made over the whole of the country to the British. This illustrated our manner of dealing with these people. The speaker's object was not to comment upon it, but simply to bring these facts to notice. We had heard a great deal of late on all sides of the necessity of protecting our interests abroad. He thought that among those interests one of the strongest was our character, and that we should act so as to obtain a character for upright and fair dealing.

The adoption of the report having been moved by Mr. BRAITHWELL, and seconded by Mr. EDWARD PEASE,

Sir F. BUXTON said he was glad to bear his testimony to the usefulness of the society. One great cause of difficulty between the settlers and the natives arose from different ideas as to land tenure. Sir FOWELL concluded by moving the first resolution:—

"That this meeting desires emphatically to protest against any proposal to extend the authority of Egypt into the regions of Equatorial Africa, as being alike injurious to the peace and civilisation of that continent, unjust to independent native States, and calculated to promote the evils of the slave trade."

The Rev. W. DENTON, in seconding the resolution, said that the slavery which exists in Turkey was so utterly abominable that he could not speak of it in a Christian assembly. Turkish girls were strangled at their birth, in order that Circassian slaves might be bought for wives. Wherever Russia had gone she had put down slavery.

The resolution having been carried,

Mr. R. N. FOWLER moved a resolution:

"That this meeting earnestly hopes that Her Majesty's Government, in carrying out a policy of confederation in South Africa, will secure to educated natives equal civil and political rights; and it also desires to express its sympathy with Mr. Alderman M'Arthur's motion for the reform of native law in Natal, and especially with that portion of the hon. gentleman's object which contemplates the abolition of practices involving the enslavement and degradation of native women. That the Chairman be requested to forward a copy of this resolution to the Earl of Carnarvon."

It was seconded by Mr. A. M'ARTHUR, M.P., and supported by Mr. EDMUND STURGE, and the meeting terminated in the usual manner.

HAMBURG, MAY 22.

The holidays are over. Whitsuntide this year has been remarkable for exceedingly bad weather, both cold and wet, and the many keepers of pleasure establishments in the vicinity of the city, for which Whitsuntide is the best day in the whole year, have been utterly deceived.

Of late some philanthropists here are cultivating the idea of founding a labourers' quarter, that is to say, a suburb consisting of small but comfortable houses for the labouring classes, after the same system which has already given such good results at Muchthausen in Alsace. The inhabitants of these houses by paying an inconsiderable surplus to the very low rent, after a time of twenty-two years will call these houses their own, at the same time being allowed to sell their claim, if they choose to give up their dwelling. Thus the labourer would be put into the possession of a small landed property, and the undertakers, who require but 4 per cent. interest for their money by this very practical manner hope to suppress the daily increasing socialism. The socialists of course are agitating against the project as much as possible, and it is doubtful whether the plan ever will come to execution.

The Joint-Stock Company Wiser, at Bremen, launched on Saturday, the 19th of this month, the last of the five gunboats ordered by the Imperial Government to that establishment. This new vessel has been christened Scorpion, while the names of the four other ships re—Wespe, Biene, Viper and Muecke.

The political events which have taken place recently in France are regarded here with much suspicion; Prince Bismark, although having taken leave only a few weeks ago for four months, has already returned to Berlin, and the opinion is that if a clerical ministerium will be installed in France, ere long this nation will partake in the present disturbances in a more active manner, as hitherto has been the case. The garrisons of Strasburg and Metz, as well as all the troops in Alsace, are to be augmented without delay, and it is not beyond the limits of possibility that the present summer may bring a similar surprise as that of 1870.

The owners of a number of Westphalian pits have joined in a union in order to stimulate the export of their black diamonds to transatlantic and European ports, and are giving now an account of their activity in this direction. From Tapenburg, on the river Ems, have cleared during the four months, January—April, 1876, twenty vessels with 4,000 tons, bound for St. Petersburg, Cronstadt, Reval, Riga, Christiana, and Gothenburg; from Emden have cleared three vessels to Russian and German Baltic ports; Hamburg has taken 25,000 tons for the traffic of her transatlantic steamer companies, and further 1,700 tons have been sent from our port to China; the Dutch city of Dordrecht sent two loads to Bilbao, in Spain. In addition, the Nord deutsche Lloyd, at Bremen, takes considerable quantities for its steamers. In connection with these circumstances a remarkable pressure is visible in the activity of our coal-jumpers, hitherto employed on board of British coal-steamers, and many of them complain of holidays.

The official statistics concerning the emigration via Hamburg during the month of April have been published, according to which 2,686 passengers went to transatlantic ports, viz., to United States, 1,909; to British North America, 12; to the Brazils, 204; to Australia, 508, &c. During the same month in former years the following total has been reached:—1876, 3,909; 1875, 4,696; 1874, 6,974; 1873, 13,954; 1872, 10,511; 1871, 3,806.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

This market did not show any remarkable feature during the past week. The Minister crisis at Paris, and particularly the reported victory of the Turks at Saukum-Kale (Black Sea), being of rather no influence; the business has, therefore, been a regular but not at all an agitated one.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, MAY 17.

The Members of the Second Chamber have left the Hague for the summer recess, but before the adjournment the Minister of the Colonial department gave some most important information about the Atjeh War. Mr. Fransen van de Putte asked for some elucidations chiefly with reference to the effect of the visit paid by the Governor-General to Atjeh; and the answer of the Minister may be summarised as follows:—Mr. Mees in the first place referred to the difficulties which attended the campaign against a brave enemy without the least fear of death, and against cholera, morass fevers, want of pure water, want of hospitals, with an army enfeebled by sickness and fatigue. The end of the war cannot yet be foreseen. The national honour and our prestige in the Indian Archipelago are both at stake, and it is necessary to act promptly and decisively if we wish to save our reputation. In the beginning the war cost one million of guilders a month; this year the cost will be thirteen millions, and next year sixteen millions will be required. Such an expenditure cannot last much longer. This fact had induced the Governor-General to ask permission to visit the northern coast of Sumatra, in order to establish a permanent system of government there. As to the results of the visit the Minister stated that the Governor-General had formed an excellent opinion of our establishment there. The population acknowledge our authority, and are beginning to trust us. They are weary of the war, which is only continued at the instigation of the chiefs. These are the outlines of the speech of Mr. Mees.

During the same sitting a sham-fight took place between Mr. Kappeyne and the Premier about the Lower Class Instruction Bill. The particulars of this debate I will send you in my next letter. I can only say now that it was a most determined attack on the Cabinet, which has already sustained a severe check in the rejection of the Bill of the Minister of War asking a credit to provide our new fortresses with guns.

Yesterday the shareholders of the East India Railway Company met to discuss the proposals of the managers to sell to the State the line Batavia-Buitenzorg for a sum of five millions of guilders. There was only a very trifling opposition. The number of shares represented not being sufficient, the meeting was adjourned for one month.

The dividend of the Netherlands Bank has been fixed at f.164. Mr. Beels has been re-elected manager, and Messrs. G. C. Crommelin, C. Rueb Czn, and Professor Vissering, commissaries.

AMSTERDAM, MAY 23.

Last week I gave you the outlines of an answer of Mr. Alting Mees on an interpellation of Mr. Van de Putte, regarding the Atjeh War. I have little to add to that part of the sitting, which was the very last, but indeed not the least of the Session. Another question, however, was dealt with, viz., the general policy of the Cabinet, of which the following particulars may do. In the first place, our Minister of War underwent an échec. He asked for a credit of f.700,000 to order more heavy guns from Mr. Krupp at Essen, and his Bill was outvoted. The principal fault was that the Minister of the Financial Department did not propose the means to cover this amount, though he asserted that no extraordinary votes would be necessary, which of course was in contradiction to the words of Mr. Mees, telling that 1876 would show an unfavourable balance in the Colonial account. Mr. Blusse urged that such behaviour was at least very strange, and he warned the Minister not to put on his nose spectacles provided with rose-coloured glasses. This debate was only an accessory matter, and did not give a practical result. The point of the discussion was the struggle between Mr. Kappeyne and Mr. Heemskerk, who had asked a credit for improving the new canal from Rotterdam to the North Sea. The leader of the Liberals began by declaring that he would give his vote to this Bill, but with aversion, because it could not prove that he had confidence in the Minister. The majority have voted a large number of Bills in order to make the Cabinet possible to govern. But instead of laying before the M.P.s the Lower Class Instruction Bill, by which the country is agitated, the Minister has delayed his answer to the Section-report so long that it has been an impossibility to deal with it. In the same style Mr. Heemskerk treated the Electoral Bill. This proves that he is afraid to bring political matters in Parliament; the Cabinet thus becomes an "administration." Mr. Kappeyne was quite convinced that the polling-day in June next would not confirm such a state of things. The Minister made excuses, and said that the Section report had made a new inquiry necessary, so that the delay was not the fault of him. The Liberal leader, however, said that Mr. Heemskerk does not dare, or does not will. Thereupon the matter dropped, and the M.P.s left the Hague. Yesterday evening the members of the Senate met for the despatch of business.

On the meeting of shareholders of the Netherlands Bank, at which a dividend of f.164 per share was declared, the report was read. It stated that the year 1876 had not been an important one for the operations of the Bank. The greatest calmness prevailed; there were no difficulties to overmaster,—in one word the trade was healthy, whilst the discount market remained unaltered. The figures bear of course the impress of these facts. The Netherlands, India Gas Company has issued a new loan of f.1,200,000, divided in 1,200 shares, and bearing an interest of 5 per cent., whilst the rate of issue is fixed at 95 per cent., f.90,000 of this amount is destined to pay off the existing 6 per cent. loan, whilst the rest will be used on behalf of the new concessions granted to the Company for Sourabaya and Samarang. The whole will be repaid in twenty-five years.

According to the statistical returns, the population of our country reached on January 1, 1877, the figure of 3,865,456, that is 55,929 more than on that date of 1876.

The Company Zeeland ordered in England two new powerful steamers to ply between Flushing and Queensboro'. They will be baptised Prinses Marie and Prinses Elisabeth. Some days ago a very large steamer, built in England for account of the Royal Steam Shipping Company, arrived here; she will start to Java in June next for account of the Company Nederland.

The Tyd, the principal Roman Catholic paper, collected in behalf of the Jubilee of the Pope a sum of f.30,000, which will be handed to him in specie, it being now no period to make the chief of the Church costly presents.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Owing to the season the greatest calmness prevailed in our markets for Colonial produces; the only demand is for the direct wants. Prices, however, remain firm.

COFFEE looks now duller, which must be ascribed to the forthcoming public sale of the Dutch Trading Company, in which only a few fine qualities will be offered. The broker valuation is based on 52 for good ordinary. Prices are well maintained. Several lots of private import have changed hands.

RAW SUGAR.—The market is very firm, but holders are declining to operate without a further advance of the prices, and the transactions have been of no importance. The lots which have changed hands amount to 7,000 mats, which were sold at f.2½ to f.3½ above April value. Refined is much quieter.

TEA.—The result of the public sale which was held last week at Rotterdam made an excellent impression. For the superior qualities of Congou and Souchong very high prices were paid. The article looks very healthy.

RICE (uncleaned) is very calm. The holders decline to operate without more profits, which, of course, checks business. Cleaned Java and Japan meet with a regular demand.

SPICES.—In public auction were sold 68 bs. Amboina Cloves at 91 to 95 cents, and 10 fard. Cinnamon at 125 cents. Next Friday the Dutch Trading Co. will bring under the hammer 77 casks and 46 chests Nutmegs, and 38 casks and 52 chests Mace. Both the last-named articles met with a good demand for export. The other ones were rather dull.

TOBACCO.—The transactions were rather trifling; only a very few lots changed hands. In the last days of this and the first ones of the forthcoming month 10,024 bs. Java and 5,390 bags Sumatra will be offered by private tender. The stock includes 20,238 bs. Java, 6,201 bs. Sumatra, and 3,000 bs. E.I.

COTTON looks dull; prices are declining, the stock is very large and the industry languishing.

DRUGS.—On the 1st of June the Dutch Trading Company will offer for public sale several lots Gutta-percha, Getah, Gitang, Gum Copal.

CAMPHOR.—Some lots were offered at lower prices; they were sold in a moment for export. Nothing can be bought now under 55c.

RATTANS.—253 piculs, ex Aurora, were sold; prices did not transpire.

INDIGO looks firm, but the transactions were very trifling. Only 40 chests changed hands.

HIDES.—In consequence of the war, this article met with a good demand. Several lots changed hands.

TIN looks dull. Banca cannot obtain f.43; Billiton is quoted f.1 lower.

Monetary and Commercial.

In the Produce Markets owing to the temporary interruption of business by the Whitsuntide holidays business in all articles has been on an extremely limited scale. The rising tendency of Coffee has made further progress, stimulated by the favourable result of the Dutch Trading Company's sale. Camphor and Japan Wax have also risen in value. Pepper, Rice, Spices and Sugar are dull. Gambier is lower. Tin has also declined, Straits being quoted £70 to £70 10s., Banca £74, Billiton £71 per ton.

The Tea market has been in a state of suspense, and transactions have been only on a limited scale, attention being mainly directed to the telegraphic advices from China. The market at Hankow opened on the 17th inst. About 20,000 packages were settled that day, and the tone was reported active, which seemed to indicate that prices would be upon the rise. It appears, however, that more prudence than usual has actuated buyers, probably from the opening rates not being countenanced on this side, and later telegrams indicate a quieter tone, and state that steamers find a difficulty in filling up. The Chinese, who for so many years have dictated their own terms, will be scarcely able to realise the novel spectacle of buyers holding off for lower prices. The limits actually sent out appear to have been very much higher than those spoken of by the brokers in their advice as to prudent opening prices. The crop in China is reported to be a full one, but the quality is considered inferior.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London during the week which ended on the 19th inst. amounted to 3,470,326 lbs., which was 369,740 lbs. more than was cleared during the corresponding week of 1876. Of this quantity 2,294,948 lbs. went for home consumption, 341,564 lbs. for exportation, 3,386 lbs. for ships' stores, and 830,428 lbs. went coastwise to various outports, 101,368 lbs. having been for immediate exportation. The sum paid in London during the week for tea duty was £57,373 14s., an increase of £3,290 7s. 6d. over the amount derived from the same source of revenue during the corresponding week of last year. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week :—Coffee, 486,349 lbs.; cocoa, 61,960 lbs.; tobacco, 350,676 lbs.; cigars, 12,491 lbs.; wine, 149,566 gallons; brandy, 28,312 gallons; and rum, 26,565 gallons.

In the Silk market there has been a better tone, and prices are quoted at 1s. to 1s. 6d. higher; but holders are not willing to meet this comparatively small advance on the heavy fall of the last few months. The latest telegrams from China are confirmatory of the reports of a probably short crop there, and trustworthy authorities consider that the export will not be likely to exceed from 50,000 to 55,000 bales. The quantity of Hainings it is said will be only about a half what it was last year. The reports from the Continent are still indefinite; but there seems good ground to believe that the cold weather which has prevailed in Italy and France will affect the yield. Latest advices from Milan confirm these reports, and there seems no doubt that the Italian crop will be a poor one.

Telegrams from Shanghai announce the suspension of Messrs. J. M. Canny and Co., of that port, and Chinkiang; also of a small firm at Yokohama.

The 22nd inst. was a heavy day for acceptors in the China and Japan trade, but we have not heard of any defaulters.

Tenders for £265,000 in bills and telegrams on India were received on the 23rd inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £178,500; Bombay, £85,500; and Madras, £1,000. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras, for bills at 1s. 8$\frac{3}{4}$d. will receive in full; telegrams at that price nil. On Bombay telegrams at 1s. 8$\frac{3}{4}$d. will receive about 90 per cent.; above in full. This shows, as was anticipated, a reduction of $\frac{1}{4}$d. compared with the price of last week.

The market for Bar Silver is quiet, and in response to the decline in the rates for the Council Drafts prices have given way, and Bars may be quoted at 54d. to 54$\frac{1}{8}$d. per oz. Mexican dollars have also declined in value, and have been placed at 54$\frac{5}{8}$d. per oz.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—Business during the past week has been much interfered with by the Whitsuntide holidays, transactions by private contract being unimportant, and sales by public auction very small. A further supply of new season's new-make Congous, placed on the market, have been taken at about previous rates. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings continue firm; common to good common have been saleable at the slightly better rates quoted in our last report; fair to medium and fine show no change. Pak Lin kinds sell slowly at low rates for fine to finest. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common are fairly saleable at the low rates now ruling; fair to medium are neglected, and very low prices must be accepted to effect sales; good to fine show no alteration, the demand being small. New-make Congous: Further arrivals of new season's have met with a moderate demand at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 4d. for fair to good, and 1s. 5d. to 1s. 7d. for fine quality. Oolongs and Souchongs show no alteration. Scented Teas: Canton Capers are difficult of sale at the reduced rates now ruling, good to fine being especially depressed in value, and without any inquiry. Green Teas: The quantity offered is much beyond the requirements of the trade, and prices realised at auction have been very irregular.

The public sales have comprised 13,381 packages, nearly the whole of which were printed and sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

Home Consumption	1,859,983 ...	2,125,050
Coastwise...	587,137 ...	674,597
Exports	402,024 ...	234,855
	*2,849,144	3,034,502

* This week comprised five days, as against six last year—Whit-Monday being a holiday.

SILK.

There has been more inquiry during the last few days, and some transactions have taken place at advanced prices. The deliveries are still unsatisfactory, being from 1st to 23rd inst. inclusive :—China 1,011 bales, Canton 280, Japan 85, Bengal 64, total 1,440 bales.

COFFEE.—The Dutch Trading Company's public sale was held on the 23rd inst. at Rotterdam; 104,586 bags Java, &c., were offered, and the sale went off with spirit at 1c. to 2c. above valuations, good ordinary Java selling at about 54$\frac{1}{2}$ cents (equal to about 89s. 6d. per cwt., or 6s. 6d. above last sale). This result has not only maintained the previous upward tendency in this market, but has further stimulated the demand, and the moderate supplies at auction were disposed of with strong competition at a further advance for Plantation Ceylon, closing prices of which are as follow :—Triage 86s. to 91s. 6d., common grey to coloury small 95s. to 101s., low middling 102s. 6d. to 104s., middling 104s. 6d. to 106s. 6d., good middling to fine middling 107s. to 109s., bold 112s. to 117s. 6d., pea-berry 106s. 6d. to 111s. There have been no transactions in Native Ceylon or in other East India descriptions.

COCOANUT OIL.—The market is steady. Cochin is quoted £42, Ceylon £37 10s. to £38, according to packages. Of 193 casks Ceylon at auction 22 hogsheads sold, good at £38, the remainder being withdrawn or bought in, pipes at £37 10s. to £37 15s.

COTTON.—A slight improvement in the tone of the market early in the week has since entirely disappeared, and renewed depression h prevailed. The sales for the week are about 3,500 bales. On the spot —Tinnivelly 5 5-16d. to 5$\frac{3}{8}$d., good fair to good. Western Madras 5d., good. Salem 4 11-16d., fair. Bengal 4d. to 4$\frac{3}{8}$d., fair to good fair.

CARDAMOMS are in demand, and 8 bags bold Ceylon sold at 4s. 9d. to 4s. 10d.

CAMPHOR.—The market is firm; 150 tubs Japan have been sold at 97s. 6d. landing weights, and for China, 95s. per cwt. is refused.

CUTCH.—Privately sales of Elephant Pegu have been made at 25s. per cwt., showing no alteration in value.

GAMBIER.—The market is flat, and prices are lower, 300 tons in dock having been sold at 19s. ex ship, whole bales at 20s. In auction 74 bales were withdrawn.

GUM COPAL.—22 packages Manila sold without reserve, good hard dark at 22s. fine 32s. per cwt.

JAPAN WAX.—100 cases fine squares have changed hands at 46s. per cwt., being a further slight advance.

PEPPER.—Black: The demand exhibits no improvement, and sales continue very small, but prices unchanged. In auction only 406 bags good Singapore were offered and bought in at 3$\frac{3}{4}$d. to 3$\frac{5}{8}$d. White: The small supply of 146 bags Singapore at public sale met a steady demand, and 106 bags good fair sold at 6$\frac{5}{8}$d. per lb. For arrival 25 tons Singapore, April-May shipment, have been sold at 6$\frac{5}{8}$d.

PLUMBAGO.—132 barrels Ceylon sold steadily, middling to bold lump 14s. 6d. to 16s., good bold chips 9s. 3d. to 9s. 9d., common dust 7s. 9d. to 8s. per cwt.

RICE.—Scarcely any business has been done, but the tone of the market is firm. On the spot 2,000 bags new Rangoon, ex steamer Renpore, have been sold at 10s. 6d. A cargo of 1,100 tons Rangoon, May-June shipment, has been sold at 10s. 3d. open charter. On the spot 5,500 bags inferior Japan have been sold at 10s. 9d. to 10s. 10½d.

SAPANWOOD.—14 tons Manila sold at £5 to £6, including slightly damaged.

SUGAR.—The market has reopened, after the Whitsun recess, with a quiet tone, home refiners showing an unwillingness to buy, and scarcely any business has been done in refining kinds, low brown sorts are also dull, but grocery descriptions and fine Java at auction have sold readily at firm rates. Previous to the holidays 800 bags fine Native Penang sold at 21s. 6d., and 2,600 tons unclayed Ilo Ilo, ex previous auction, at 21s. 6d. Since the reopening of the market the following transactions have been recorded :—On the 23rd inst. in auction 2,432 baskets 510 bags fine Java, per Manfred, sold at full prices, chiefly good and fine grainy yellow at 33s. to 53s. 6d., a small part middling at 32s. 6d., washed at 31s. 3d. to 33s. 4,133 bags China were bought in, chiefly low and ordinary brown at 20s. 6d. to 21s., a few lots yellow at 29s. THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

THE Rev. T. RICHARD, of Chefoo, whose communications have been recently referred to in the columns of The Times, writes as follows:—"People of all ages die of actual starvation by thousands. This is no exaggeration. The famine extends over a district which includes at least 5,000 villages, and in these, taken together, I am certainly within the mark in saying that 500 die daily. Perhaps 1,000 may be within it. A few days ago I traversed the worst part. It is most heartrending. Can anything be done immediately at home? Friends in Chefoo have sent me $500. Shanghai and other places I have not heard from yet. The first steamer of the Spring is expected north to-day. Perhaps $1,000 more will be made up. Funds will save lives on to the end of May. It will be only charity after that. If you can do anything telegraph." Under date March 5 Mr. Richard says:—"I draw another £50 to-day, making in all £250. If I die before the year is out let my property here make up the deficiency, so long as I have anything to mortgage. I cannot abide the sight of people dying about me without giving them relief. Thousands upon thousands have perished already, Houses are pulled down in every village to sell the timber and thatch in order to get food. Those who can get husks and dry leaves ordinarily used for fuel are considered well off. Most of the poor young girls have been sold. Old men, middle aged, young men, and children die daily of sheer starvation, and others freeze. The dead cannot get a burial; they are too many, and none can afford the expense, so they are cast daily into large pits. Terrible."

The Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society have, by telegraph, advised Mr. Richard to draw £250 at once, and authorised the payment of a further sum of £250 if urgently needed.

CONTRIBUTIONS in aid of the Famine Relief Fund will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, Joseph Tritton, Esq., 19, Castle-street, Holborn, London, E.C., or by the bankers of the Society, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Twells, and Co., 54, Lombard-street.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The present mail steamer having (in consequence of the change in the Monsoon) left China only two days later than the last French Mail, the intelligence brought is necessarily of a scanty character. The most important general news is that connected with the intended closing by the Chinese authorities of the Tele graphic School at Foochow. This is looked upon with some disappointment by the foreign residents and by the Press; as though it is alleged to be done only on grounds of economy, it is generally considered that the step has been in reality induced by considerations of a reactionary character. It is, however, stated that the natives have faithfully fulfilled their engagements with the Company. On the other hand, the rumour that the Woosung Railway is to be extended to Soochow is again gaining ground, and should this prove to be the case, it would appear that the Chinese are, at all events at present, more disposed to appreciate railways than telegraphs. In Hong Kong much regret was felt at the sudden death of Mr. Thorburn, of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China. Mr. Pope Hennessy, the new Governor, was looked for by the mail next expected.

The news which is brought from Japan with reference to the insurrection appears to be a shade more favourable to the Government, but is still of a doubtful character. The beleaguered castle of Kumamoto had been relieved, and this fact was generally regarded as the turning-point in the struggle. It is considered there is little doubt that, had Saigo contented himself with leaving a body of his men behind him to watch the garrison of Kumamoto, and, with the remainder, have pushed on towards the seat of Government, the samurai of the provinces through which he passed would have joined him. But in place of this he wasted precious time before Kumamoto, and so enabled the Government to concentrate their forces against him. Reports had also been spread to the effect that General Saigo had died, but they have not been confirmed. Probably they were set on foot merely with the object of discouraging the rebel cause. Complaints are made by a Tokio paper, which has strong Government proclivities, of the support which the Yokohama journals, in publishing the news, have given to the rebels. These accusations, however, are clearly unreasonable, as the Government can scarcely be considered to have just ground to complain of being misunderstood, if it persistently withhold all news from the public. The obvious result of its adopting that course is that those who do give information are able to put forward matters in a light favourable to themselves. Perhaps the present state of affairs may teach the Japanese a useful lesson in this respect. The trial of Oyama, the ex-Governor of Kagoshima, is proceeding in a special Court presided over by Ogi, the Minister of Justice. It was rumoured that the Ministers were discussing the desirability of the return of the Mikado to Tokio.

From the Straits Settlements we learn that the eight Chinese who were found guilty of kidnapping coolies to Deli have been heavily fined. The weather continued intensely hot and the prolonged drought had exercised an unfavourable effect upon the public health. The decision of the Secretary of State regarding the future Government of Perak was awaited with some amount of anxiety. The work of reconstructing the buildings destroyed by the fire at Tanjong Pagar Wharf had been commenced.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 11th April, and we have advices via San Francisco, twelve days later, viz., to the 23rd April. The French mail from London, Feb. 23, arrived out on the 12th April and the following P. and O. mail of March 2 was received on the 18th April.

At last intelligence has been received by the Japan papers of the relief of the long-beleagured castle of Kumamoto. The Herald, in commenting upon this news, does not consider that the circumstance was likely at the present time to have any decisive effect on the ulterior results of the campaign, for the relief of the place had been conducted in the same mysterious and unsatisfactory manner which had characterised the general features of the campaign. The place has always been believed to be surrounded by the Satsuma men, and the cause of the quiescence of the garrison was always supposed to be the strength of the rebels opposed to them, and it was this view that seemed to throw doubt on the truth of General Tani's letter, as in it he stated that there were but 800 rebels in face of the town. It was impossible to believe that a garrison of some three or four thousand men was held in check by this small body of opponents, especially when the relieving army was known to be within a few miles of the place. Inexplicable as it must appear, it would really seem as though the above were true. On the morning of the 8th April a battalion of 600 men marched out from the castle, and with but very slight, if any, resistance joined the Imperial forces. Despite of this, it was not until the 15th that the Imperialists entered the town, without resistance. Since that date the Imperialists have been holding consultations as to their next step. The position which was by the last accounts held by Saigo would appear to be much stronger than the former one, for whereas the Imperialists, holding the command of the sea, were enabled to make an attack on his rear, he was at latest dates not only relieved from any fear of this, but was also at liberty to dispose of the corps of observation which held in check the garrison of Kumamoto.

A great deal of discussion has taken place with respect to an organisation known as the "Racing Association." It appears that latterly the more active spirits of the Racing Association have been a good deal exercised to bring about a fusion between the Association and the Yokohama Race Club. A lengthened correspondence has been going on, and prominent members of the Yokohama racing world have been more or less interviewed during the past fortnight by the go-betweens, who have busied themselves in the interests of the new and rather shaky Racing Association to bring about, if possible, an amalgamation with the old established Club, which has during so many years sustained the interests of the Turf in Yokohama. The Yokohama Racing Association has not yet been a year in existence, and has held only one meeting. It has served no useful purpose, but, on the contrary, has worked only mischief; it is not surprising then to find those who were principally responsible for bringing that superfluous body into existence should be already tiring of their uphill work. It took an immensity of personal effort to start the affair, and it requires that exertion should be continually unrelaxed to keep it going. It has no spontaneous go in it. It meets no real want, because it was based on nothing more substantial than a few personal grievances, or grudges against the management of the Race Club. It has entirely failed in realising the fondest hope of the leading promoters of the secession—in wrecking the old club—and as it is too weak to lead other than a sickly and precarious existence, an amalgamation is sought to be brought about under cover of which those who have been most prominent in connection with the association may effect their retreat from an irksome position. These gentlemen by this time have become fully aware that two racing clubs in this place are not wanted. There is not a field for both, and the public have neither time, money, nor inclination to support them.

From the above-named paper we take the following:—

It appears that the contemplated erection of the new theatre in Shimabarra has been indefinitely postponed, in consequence of the disturbed state of the country; but a temporary one has been recently opened to the public, and is well patronised. Within a remarkably short time, the immediate vicinity of this theatre has been metamorphosed from a scene of desolation and dismal tranquillity, into one of gaiety and bustle; and tea-houses in profusion have sprung up all around it, to minister to the wants and convenience of the theatre-going world. It is remarkable the effect a theatre has in Japan on the condition of the locality in which it chances to be situated; but this is peculiarly true of Shimabarra. It has been so unfortunate as to have suffered three times from the scourge of fire within a comparatively short time. By the first, the Yoshiwarra, which was then situated in that place, was destroyed, and its removal to Asakusa was the cause of much subsequent depression, many of those who directly or indirectly benefited by that institution having removed with it. But shortly after the erection of a theatre had been begun, a sudden appearance of life became manifest, dwellings soon sprung up, tea-houses became abundant, and things generally took a more cheerful turn. It has been said that the erection of the theatre in Shimabarra was a suggestion of Government, in order to appease the people for the removal of the Yoshiwarra, and also to mitigate, as far as possible, the calamities which they suffered from the fire. Be this as it may, it is an undisputable fact that its erection averted the utter desertion of the place, and saved it from becoming one of the already too numerous empty wastes of the city. The same cause is again operating favourably for the same place, and if the people have already learnt sufficient experience from the disasters of the puerile, but fatal manias which possessed them, and which, while seeming to enrich some, actually impoverished all, there is no reason why Shimabarra should not rise into equal importance and respectability with any other part of the capital.

A curious whim seems to have suddenly possessed the military element of the capital—an unaccountable desire to have their portraits taken. Great numbers of soldiers may be seen daily attending at the studios of the various photographers of the city for this purpose, and a temporary fillip has been given to this art in consequence. An artist, residing at Sannai, and who distinguished himself as a soldier during the Tokugawa contest, seems to be in great request, and receives more than others the military patronage. He may be seen from sunrise to sunset, his sleeves rolled up, busy executing with all possible speed the numerous orders with which he is entrusted. In the present state of times this sudden caprice of the soldiery appears to carry its own comment. Ignorant of how soon they may be called upon to join their comrades in the conflict now raging in the South, and uncertain of the destiny that may await them there, they may be animated with the praiseworthy motive of leaving something with their friends which could recall to their minds the features of those they held dear, should the fortune of war prove inauspicious to their ever again reappearing to them in the flesh.

The Japan Mail has the following:—

During the gale which raged so fiercely recently a diabolical attempt was made by a Japanese to set fire to a house in Sumiyo Schicho, near the Otomachi. The wretch had prepared a bundle of rags and sawdust, saturated with kerosene, which he lighted and threw among the outhouses of a silk-mercer's shop. By good fortune the blaze was extinguished, and the fellow caught. On being interrogated, he stated that it had been the intention of himself and some accomplices, as soon as the fire had well started, to set fire to houses in the Ogicho and at Ishikawa, thus causing a conflagration that would probably have swept away the entire native town of Kanagawa. The object was evidently robbery, as during the confusion wholesale plunder could have been carried on. It is to be earnestly hoped that the gang with which the scoundrel confesses himself connected will all be caught, and that effective measures will be taken to prevent their engaging in any similar enterprise. A fire is generally so frightful a calamity in a Japanese town that any attempt to wantonly cause one cannot be too swiftly or too severely punished.

We understand that a balloon is in process of construction in Tokio by the Government, which it is intended to use for obtaining certain information of the position of Saigo's army. As six weeks must certainly elapse before it can be ready for shipment to the South, it does not seem as though the Government expected speedily to bring matters to a victorious termination. It is not expected that any foreigners will be allowed to accompany the native aeronants on their exploring trip.

A correspondent writes as follows:—

There is a total want of confidence here in everything, and business is extremely dull. Fraser, Tinley, and Co. seem to have taken up what there was left of Heard and Co.'s business. Their old premises, No. 6 Bund, have, I hear, been sold to Findlay, Richardson, and Co. for $30,000, which, I think, includes lot 27 at the back.

A great deal of squabbling is going on among the racing community, but I fancy the two clubs will soon become one.

There is nothing new about the chaplaincy, but we shall have to find another man soon, as Mr. Garra.t is bent upon missionary work. I wish he would devote himself to the white heathens in the community. There is plenty of work to be done here.

TOKIO.

The Tokio Times, which has from the commencement of the difficulties spoken in very hopeful tones concerning the civil war, states in its issue of the 21st April that the news from the scene of the southern conflict is steadily favourable to the Imperial arms. Kumamoto was occupied by the troops of General Yamagata, and was the headquarters of Arisugawa no Miya. The rebels had retreated from all the strong positions in which they originally established themselves, and their situation was unknown. It adds :—"The struggle does not seem likely to be much longer continued. Kioto is still the residence of the Court and Ministry. Popular festivals of various kinds have enlivened Tokio during the past week. The report of established communications with Kumamoto, announced a fortnight ago and duly scoffed at by the rebel organs in Yokohama, is now more than fully confirmed. On the 8th inst. a detachment under Lieut. Colonel Oku made its way out of the castle and joined the national troops at Uto. From that day fighting was continued until the 13th, when the insurgents gave signs of an intention to abandon their positions south-west of the city. On the 15th they were driven from Kawajiri and the advance guard of the Imperialists, led by Lieutenant Colonel Yamagawa, took their stand beneath the castle walls. General Kuroda entered the place on the following day, and the two months' siege was finally raised. No positive information is given as to the line of retreat taken by the defeated insurgents, but they are believed to have fallen back toward their own province, whether to disperse in confusion or to resume the conflict on a fresh ground is yet to be seen. The news of the last few days has been received, naturally, with extreme discontent by the foreign newspapers in Yokohama which support the revolt."

From the paper above-named we take the following :—

The week has been eminently one of festivity in Tokio. Not only have we had the annual rejoicings over the blossoms at Mukojima—elsewhere spoken of — but Tuesday witnessed the commemorative holiday in honour of Gongen Sama, the founder of the Tokugawa line. On this occasion the fine temple at Uyeno, dedicated to him, was the centre of attraction for thousands who made their prayers and offerings to the illustrious dead. We are told that the contributions, though mostly in minute "cash," amounted to the considerable sum of one hundred yen. Another place generally visited was the monument to the sixteen soldiers who died at the tomb of their lord. Here two large censers were kept burning, and liberal gifts were bestowed by the multitude of devotees. At the Sei Yo Ken the entertainment given in honour of the retiring Italian Minister, Count Fé, lent increased gaiety to that quarter of the Park. A band of foreign trained musicians furnished amusement for the crowd of outside listeners. Those who preferred national music and drama attended the religious plays performed in booths near the Gongen temple.

The destructive fire of last week, in which nearly one thousand houses were consumed, adds another to a long list of similar catastrophes, which might, with additional care, have been prevented. While the firemen at these conflagrations work with a zeal and courage that command admiration, their efforts are seldom of much avail from lack of judicious direction. Peculiar traditions of honour, moreover, prevail in the force—such as, for instance, that which condemns the pulling down of houses not immediately in danger—which seriously interfere with efficiency. The extinguishing apparatus, again, is of antiquated and clumsy character, and should be discarded in favour of the more modern style. The cost of such changes, especially at the present time, we recognise as a serious difficulty; yet a single conflagration like that of the 6th April consumes as much property as would purchase a supply of engines and hook-and-ladder material sufficient, under wise direction, to render the occurrence of such a disaster well nigh impossible. While thus sitting in the seat of the critic, we must allude to the practice of storing gunpowder in settled districts of the city. The peril of such incautiousness was shown by the lamentable explosion of the magazine at Ichome, Yushima, during this fire. It is said that powder in large quantities is deposited elsewhere in the capital in places exposed to the reach of a conflagration. If so, it is to be hoped that these necessary but dangerous munitions may be transferred to more suitable localities.

The habit of clinging to old nomenclatures, long after they have ceased to be appropriate, is illustrated in more direct ways than in this irrelevant application of the word "East." The name of the capital of this country is Tokio, and has been for nearly ten years, by Government decree. We might suppose that a nation could call its capital what it chooses, even if it may not regulate its own tariffs and execute its own laws. But this is not the view of Europe and America. To discard the ancient and familiar title, on any occasion, is to affront the sensibilities of readers in either of those quarters of the globe.

HIOGO.

The Hiogo News of the 18th April says :—

For the past two days the unusual sight has been seen in Kobe of a number of men armed with Japanese swords, and on inquiry we learn that they are volunteers for the war. Some of them are the "following" of the fencing-master referred to in the Osaka Nippo, but a large number of them seem to be independent volunteers whose services have been offered to the Government and accepted by it, others again being said to be shizoku who were enlisted aforetime and disbanded. They were certainly rather a curious looking lot at first sight. Out of one batch we saw, numbering somewhere about a hundred, seventy-five per cent., we should say, looked as if they were no better off, financially, than jinrikisha coolies, while the remaining twenty-five per cent. were dressed in really expensive clothes. The physique of the men, however, was decidedly good for Japanese, and they will be formidable men in hand-to-hand fighting, if they can wield the swords they wore. These were of all sorts of lengths, some of them being certainly over four feet in the blade alone, to say nothing of the handle. Arrived at the Western Custom-house, the men were each given a muzzle-loading Enfield carbine, and they were then put into uniform by the summary process of turning out some foreign clothes in front of them, when each man seized what he could lay his hands upon, and put it on over his Japanese dress, all considerations of fit and size being apparently totally disregarded. The effect was absurd in the extreme, and certainly on the whole did not improve the appearance of the men; but it is astonishing what a smart drill sergeant may do with an awkward squad in a week. We suspect, however, that company drill will not be much required of these recruits, but that they are intended to match Saigo's skirmishers at their own game of ambuscades, night surprises and sword play at close quarters. They went on board ship in high spirits, seeming quite to relish the errand they were on.

Whatever the political troubles of the country may be, the sentiment of personal loyalty to his Majesty the Micado seems to remain unimpaired. When his Majesty first arrived at Kioto we believe that the officials (Kocho, &c.) of any given district used to be notified whenever his Majesty had a mind to take the air in any given direction; but we hear now that even this small formality has been dispensed with, and that he now rides whithersoever he lists, with a total absence of all previous formality.

Imitation of foreign trade marks has long been so common a sin amongst Japanese that the foreign newspapers in Japan have almost entirely ceased to give any prominent place to the cases that are continually being brought under their notice. As the local authorities never, so far as we know, took any steps to check the evil, things have had, in the course of years, to right themselves, and for some time past foreigners have had to protect themselves by only dealing with foreign compradores of acknowledged respectablility for all such things as Japanese were at all all likely to imitate. Had a case of, say, the imitation of a beer label, (one of the commonest of these frauds), come under our notice we should have said nothing about it, as in such matters as beer exposed for sale in the native town foreigners are well able to protect themselves; but we have seen some spurious butter, purporting to be Danish, and it may not be amiss to put foreigners on their guard. Tins of an acknowledged good brand of butter have evidently been bought up by Japanese filled with something that smells like salt tallow, and sent in to a foreign auctioneer for sale as the genuine article. Great care has been taken to preserve the labels, and a good deal of ingenuity has been shown in re-soldering and painting the tins.

We notice that another new industry has sprung up at Tokio —cigarette making. A quantity were landed here a few days ago, and should they find favour the trade may turn out to be.

Digitized by Google

one of some importance, as cigarettes have been for some time, we understand, in considerable demand at the native stores, and surely they can be turned out on the spot for much less than the import price of the foreign article.

NAGASAKI.

The Rising Sun has the following :—

The Sumida Maru arrived with about 340 wounded officers and soldiers from Takase— north of Kumamoto—where a temporary depot has been formed for the treatment of those disabled, until such times as they can be forwarded elsewhere. There were several severe cases on board, one man having died on the way up, and many more being seriously hurt. The average of wounds appeared to be about the ratio of two-thirds shot to one-third sword. The men looked as cheerful as they could under the circumstances, and were patiently awaiting the arrival of the boats in which they were to go on shore. The Sumida Maru having landed all the wounded left again for Takase, where we were informed there were about 1,500 more wounded and a daily increase of from 100 to 200.

The court-martial held on board H.M.S. Audacious with reference to the stranding of H. M. S. Lapwing has been concluded. The Court was composed of the following officers: Captains Buller, of the Modeste (President), Colomb, and Douglas, Acting-Commander Castle, and Lieutenant Garbett. At the termination of the inquiry the Court severely reprimanded Commander Wiseman and the Navigating Lieutenant, and reprimanded the gunner whose watch it was at the time of the disaster.

The Cosmopolitan Press says :—

Five hundred volunteers have offered to don the Red Cross and attend to the sick and wounded both in camp and hospital. This speaks well for the spirit of the Nagasaki people, and shows that they are loyal to the Imperial cause.

We may shortly expect H.R.H. Arisugawa-no-Miya to come to Nagasaki, but have no particulars as to the intention of his visit. We wonder if he intends to make this place the base of his operations ?

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 15th April ; no later mail from London had been received.

The arrival is noted, per French mail, of their Serene Highnesses Prince Alfred Montenuovo and Prince Henri Lichtenstein. They left Vienna in August last to visit the Philadelphia Exhibition, crossed the American continent, sailed from San Francisco to Japan, visited Siam, and intended to make various excursions to Hankow, Peking, &c., returning to Shanghai and going thence to Java, the Straits and India, and coming home via Egypt.

It is stated in the Shanghai papers that important telegraphic advices had been received at the United States Consulate-General, from Washington, with reference to Consular affairs ; but they were not in a position to say what their precise tenour might be. The China Mail, however, had a short time back a statement that the new administration had determined to send the Hon. George F. Steward to the Court of St. James, as a mark of respect to the memory of his uncle and of esteem for himself personally, and that in connection with this change Mr. Bailey, the United States Consul at Hong Kong, would be entrusted with the Peking Mission ; that Major Studer would be translated from Singapore to Hong Kong, or, failing that movement, that General Van Buren would be sent to Shanghai, in which case the new American Consul at Bangkok, Mr. Sickles, would be appointed to the post vacated by the General in Japan. Whatever value may or may not attach to this rumour, it seems probable that the communication above noticed has some connection with it.

The Courier contains the following somewhat amusing paragraphs :—

A curious sight is to be seen at a shop situated at the corner of the Honan and Hankow Roads. It is the studio of a native photographer who has lately failed. Now, according to law and custom among the Chinese, the creditors of a defaulter assemble at his house, with pipes, tea, and mattresses by way of making themselves comfortable, and then simply "take possession," to the great misery of their unwilling host. In other cases they all gather in front of his door and set up a howling chorus, clamorously insisting upon an immediate satisfaction of their claims—a demand which is of course impossible. In a foreign settlement such a proceeding is clearly out of the question, and a very curious method has been substituted in the present instance. On a board, which is apparently placed there for the purpose, each creditor has pasted the account which the bankrupt has failed to discharge, in full view of every passer-by ; while inside the darkened shop sits a native Municipal policeman, to see, we suppose, that no disturbance takes place. It is believed that this placarding of invoices amounts to a formal assertion of the claims of the creditors upon the estate ; and this may very probably be the fact. But it is one which we should be very sorry to see adopted among foreigners.

Mr. Deputy-Commissioner McKean makes a very curious revelation in his Report on the Trade of Swatow. He draws particular attention, in one of his concluding paragraphs, to one most singular article of export, namely, human hair, which consists of the combings collected in the barbers' shops. These débris go exclusively to Europe, says Mr. McKean, and the trade seems to have sprung up in 1873. Since then it has much increased, as the following figures will show :—

1873	... Export Piculs	141	value Hk. Tls.		2,904
1875	... „	„ 1,000	„	„	16,949

The only use to which this refuse can be put, as far as one is able to judge, is the manufacture of chignons for European ladies. "It is strange enough," says Mr. McKean, "that a queer uncertain fashion like this in Europe should have permanence and force sufficient to create a demand and supply in the interior of China; but it is worth while to reflect on the marvellous industry and thrift of a people which in a brief time turns to profit the seemingly valueless sweepings of barbers' shops." We are not sure that Mr. McKean will receive the thanks of the fair sex for this exposé, or for presuming to call any fashion that they may patronise a "queer" one ; but we think they ought to be very much obliged to him for letting them know of what unsavoury materials their head dresses are made. We believe, however, we are correct in saying that chignons are now a thing of the past ; and we shall be therefore curious to see whether the export of barbers' refuse from Swatow falls off in consequence.

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald announces the closing of the Telegraph School at that port. It says :—

After a successful term of twelve months the Provincial Government has decided on closing the Telegraph School, and terminating its contract with the Great Northern Company. Want of the necessary funds is put forward as the ostensible reason for this not wholly unexpected measure ; but our impression is that other considerations—of a reactionary character—have influenced the decision arrived at. The native authorities have, we are informed, faithfully fulfilled their engagements with the Company, and have also expressed their entire satisfaction and approval of the manner in which the Company has carried out the contract. The Pagoda Anchorage line will be worked entirely by Chinese educated at the school, and we are assured that they are perfectly qualified to do so. This is sufficient in itself to show that considerable progress has been made, though of course the instruction received has been quite rudimentary. We are confident that this decision will be viewed by the foreign community with regret ; and that the Chinese authorities will yet have reason to deplore the reactionary policy that has led to the suspension of a work full of promise in the future. Unlike many other enterprises to which the native Government is committed, the Telegraph School was a foundation of such practical value and utility that it must inevitably have succeeded in winning over all doubters in the official ranks. In a huge country like China, with a weak central Government, and a corrupt provincial administration, the advantage of having telegraphic communication between different parts of the empire is sufficiently apparent, and is, we believe, fully recognised by Li Hung-chang, Ting Futai, and other leading Chinese statesmen. But the literati and gentry are—like many English gentlemen of the last generation—strongly opposed to such innovations, and they are supported we believe by a strong Court party at Peking. We entertain a strong hope that wiser counsels will yet prevail ; and that institutions like the one under notice will not merely be tolerated but fostered by the State. China became great through the inventive genius of her people ; she is now miserably deficient in matters of material progress—through the selfish exclusiveness of her rulers. Increased contact removes ignorance, and thus diminishes hatred.

The same paper has the following :—

We have lately seen several sadly mutilated United States Trade Dollars. When these dollars first became current at this port it was understood that they should be exempt from the senseless and grossly unjust practice of "chopping," or, in other words, dishonest custom of slicing off portions of the precious metal—to the no small injury of servants and others who are paid by count instead of by weight. In fact, the Chinese authorities issued a proclamation on the subject, translation of which was subsequently published in this journal. The difference between a clean and a chopped dollar is keenly appreciated by the poorer class of natives, in whose minds shroffing is too often only another term for shrinking.

A watchman in the employ of a foreign firm hanged himself on the night of the 10th April, under the following circumstances :—Several robberies had lately been committed in the neighbourhood, and a man was arrested on the charge of being concerned in the same. This man, under examination, declared that the stolen property had been received by the deceased watchman. A yamen runner was therefore sent to arrest the watchman, who loudly protested his innocence, and resisted capture. The authorities were, however, determined to make him prisoner, and the unfortunate man was in such dread of the torture and squeezing incidental to men in his unhappy position, that he saved the paternal mandarins all further trouble by hanging himself under the porch of his foreign employer's residence. His fellow servants stoutly maintain the man's innocence, and say that the actual thief owed him a grudge and trumped up the story of his guilt. Under any conditions, the case fitly illustrates the native dread of the sort of justice (!) usually meted out in the city. The man was about fifty years of age, and had been in foreign employ since the opening of the port.

The hospital for native women and children lately erected at the west end of the Foreign Settlement, and which is to be under the care of Miss S. Trask, M.D., was to be formally opened on the 18th April.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by this mail extend to the 21st April; no later mail from London had arrived out.

H.E. Mr. Pope Hennessy, the new Governor of Hong Kong, was looked for there about April 23, by the English mail due that date. The usual official arrangements in connection with his landing were being made.

The appeal case of Lembke v. the Oriental Bank has been argued before the full Court, but judgment was not given at the date of the mail's departure. It will be recollected that in January last Mr. Lembke recovered against the Oriental Bank the proceeds of two bills of exchange drawn in July, 1875, under a letter of credit of Messrs. Im Thurm and Co. The drafts in question were purchased here by the Oriental Bank, and a letter of hypothecation was given by Mr. Lembke. Before maturity of the bills in London the Oriental Bank there delivered the shipping documents to the acceptors of the bills, and the acceptors became bankrupt during the pendency of the drafts. The bills were protested, and the Bank applied to Mr. Lembke for payment as drawer. He refused to pay, but to avoid legal proceedings finally paid under protest. The plaintiff then brought his action here to recover the amount thus paid, alleging that the Bank having taken letters of hypothecation was bound to keep the shipping documents till payment, and wrongfully parted with them, and thus were responsible for the loss. The case was tried before his Lordship Sir John Smale in December last, and resulted in a verdict for Mr. Lembke, and from this decision the present appeal was made.

Great regret has been felt in the Colony at the sudden death of Mr. Henry Thorburn, late Acting Manager of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China. The sad event, says the China Mail, which occurred half-an-hour past noon of 19th, created quite a gloom in business circles, not alone from its suddenness, but from the high regard in which Mr. Thorburn was held by the Community. The deceased gentleman had an apoplectic attack on the 18th, and shortly before noon next day he had a second attack, from which he never rallied. Mr. Thorburn had been ailing slightly for some time past, but nothing serious was apprehended by his most intimate friends until Wednesday. Though a young man in his prime, he had passed many years of his life in the East, chiefly in Hong Kong and the North. His genial soul, his affable disposition, and his thoroughly true and straightforward character had endeared him to many; and there are not a few in every port of China but will feel that in his death they have either lost a valued friend or a pleasant acquaintance. Those who knew him best will miss him most. His funeral was largely attended, as was to be expected, by many of the leading residents of the Colony. The annual meeting of the Hong Kong Club was postponed on account of the mournful occurrence.

From the above named paper we take the following items of general news :—

We understand that the Rev. E. Davys, but recently appointed Acting Military Chaplain, has been dismissed from that office by the Right Rev. Bishop Burdon; and that the Rev. J. Henderson has been appointed in his stead. This is much to be regretted at the present time, as many will be only too ready to read between the lines of the dismissal what is calculated to grieve the heart of every true Churchman. While we deplore the frequent changes in the Military Chaplaincy it is pleasing to learn that there is a hope that the Rev. W. H. Baynes may return to the post he temporarily filled so acceptably. If the Military authorities were to recommend his appointment to the Military Chaplaincy Bishop Claughton could not accede to a request that would give more general pleasure.

The following account of the average amount of bank-notes in circulation in Hong Kong, during the month ending 28th March, is published in the local Government Gazette :—

Banks.	Average Amount.
Oriental Bank Corporation...	$269,530
Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London and China	653,836
Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China ...	415,682
Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation...	1,637,940

By the arrival of the Chinese Revenue cruiser Feihoo, Captain Cocker, we learn that the survey of Pakhoi has been completed, and will soon be laid before the public. The work has occupied six weeks; and from the known skill and ability of Captain Cocker and his officers there is no doubt but that a great service has been rendered to foreign navigation by their labours just concluded. Captain Cocker and his officers are firm believers in the future success of Pak-hoi as a port for foreign trade, and are convinced that water communication exists between that port and the neighbouring provinces of Yunnan and Tonquin.

A confirmation for native Christians belonging to the Congregation of St. Stephen's Church was held by Bishop Burdon on the 18th April, at the Cathedral, when some twenty-six candidates (male and female) mustered at the time appointed to receive that rite. All of them, we learn, were baptized as adult converts from heathenism, and we congratulate the resident missionary of the Church Missionary Society upon the promising character of the work as evidenced by those he presented to-day.

Among the Chinese visitors to the City hall Museum on 12th April, there was one illustrious personage, viz., the new incumbent of the generalship at Chaou-chow, the successor of General Fong, who has been promoted to the chief command of the land forces in Kwantung. The name of the new General is Ho Ming Leang, and he is only thirty-one years of age. He has, however, rendered very meritorious services against the rebels, and has been at one time the Chen-tai at Chinkiang. It is unusual for a man of his age to have obtained the high rank he is now holding. He is, moreover, an officer who has been serving under Tso Tsung Tang, the Commander-in-Chief in the Kashgar Expedition. Among the places he visited to-day were the Police Court and the Central Police Station, where he happened to see drill, to which he paid great attention, and expressed a great desire to see a parade of soldiers on a large scale. He appears to be a clever man, and well able to understand the foreign manœuvres of warfare, for during the police parade he very closely observed every movement of the policemen. He next inspected the working of the telegraphic system, and by the kind attention of Inspectors Horspool and Grey he saw all he could wish to see and learn. He was accompanied by the officer in charge of the Capsuimoon Customs Station. The General is here en route to assume his office, and will leave either in the Namoa or Douglas.

"The Chinese will eventually buy us up stock, lock and barrel," is the most casual observation now made amongst Hong Kong residents. At a handsome premium it might not be so calamitous an arrangement after all. The wave of Chinese building operations seems to be slowly advancing nearer and nearer to the Clock Tower, and the latest site fixed upon for Chinese houses is the premises facing Queen's-road, now occupied by Mr. Armstrong, the Government auctioneer. It may be regretted, on various grounds, that the peculiarly foreign quarter should be thus encroached upon; but it appears to be the inevitable tendency. Some prophets predict that the Hong Kong Hotel may ere long pass into the hands of the Chinese; and we begin to wonder whether the Government buildings will next be mortgaged or sold to native speculators.

From a return in the local Government Gazette it appears that the largest number of prisoners in the gaol on the last day of any week during 1876 was 563, on November 12th, and the smallest 347, on February 20th. The largest number of Europeans confined in the gaol at any one time was 75, and the smallest 30. On January 2nd the European prisoners numbered 68, and on December 31st only 30. The largest number of female prisoners (Chinese or coloured) at one time was 38, and the smallest 10.

"When I came here I found the rule was to put opium smokers under special treatment on their entrance into the jail, allowing them so much opium and decreasing the quantity every day, at the same time using stimulants and tonics, in the shape of gin and quinine. I could see no necessity for this, and in very few cases have I allowed either opium or gin to be given. As a matter of fact, opium smoking, as used by the majority, has very little permanent effect upon the system; it is as easily stopped as tobacco smoking, and with as little harm to the subject. A very great deal of nonsense has been written on the subject of its injurious effects. An opium smoker consumes but a small quantity of opium, and the power of the drug is not exhausted by one smoking, as the ashes are reprepared over and over again. Opium, therefore, used in this way does but little harm; but it is a far different case with the opium eater, who is as rare in China as he is common in India. The effects of opium smoking and opium eating seem to have been confounded together in the minds of the English public. The opium smoker gives himself up to sensual indulgence, is lazy and incapable of work when he carries it to excess; in moderation it is no more harmful than tobacco, and stopping it causes as little inconvenience in most cases. Far different is it with the opium eater; to stop his allowance, when the habit is a confirmed one among Indians, is certain death. I have seen Indians deprived of their opium apparently having only a few minutes to live, revive in an hour, and go about their work after a full dose has been administered. These are the conclusions I have come to after considerable experience in India and here. There has been only one death in the jail this year, as compared with two in 1875."

CANTON.

The correspondent of the China Mail has the following:—

We are glad to hear that the efforts of the Chinese Hospital at Canton in raising a Famine Relief Fund for the distressed people in Shantung have been very successful; over $3,000 have been subscribed within three days, and more are daily coming in, the individual donations ranging from $500 to 50 cents.

A singular story reaches us from Canton, which reveals one of the many phases of Chinese corruption. The captain of a Chinese man-of-war, attached to the Foochow Arsenal, lately had occasion to go to Canton, his mission being to convey to Foochow the family of the new Viceroy at Fokien. As a matter of courtesy, he made a call on the Viceroy at Canton on his arrival there, but to his great dismay he was requested to make the usual payment of Mun-paou, or "door-perquisite," before he could be admitted into the Viceregal presence. The brave sailor, not the least daunted by this unexpected rebuff, told the official at the door (whoever he might be) that he belonged to the Mandarinate of a neighbouring province; that he had nothing to do with this province, and had no favour to ask of his Excellency; that he belonged to Foochow, and was on a special mission to convey the family of the new Viceroy from Canton to Fokien; that he was not going to give any bribe; that he only called as a matter of courtesy, and that, if there were any obstacles in his way, he could let it alone, although he meant to pay his respects to the Viceroy. In spite of his remonstrance he was not permitted to see the Viceroy, and the excuse given was one of official etiquette. But whether rightly or wrongly, we fancy there must have been some "little game" in hand on the part of the underlings in this matter.

MACAO.

The subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers by the recent floods in Portugal amounted to $1,345. A great deal of suffering is stated to be felt among the lower classes in the colony. A new deputy was to be elected, and as usual there was some little local excitement on the subject.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 28th April; no later mail from London had been received. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The short interval since our last issue has been chiefly remarkable for the great heat of the weather, and a prolonged drought, which has lasted now over two months, and has exercised a baneful effect on the health of the community owing to the consequent scarcity and bad quality of the water. In our last it was stated that cholera was rife, and it is now satisfactory to state that the reports of twenty deaths per diem were much exaggerated and originated in a panic caused by several very sudden deaths in rapid succession with symptoms of cholera. The disease is here, but in its sporadic, not epidemic form, and is termed choleraic diarrhœa. Only thirty deaths have been officially reported in twenty-seven days. The authorities have been on the alert, and have taken all sanitary precautions possible. The scarcity of water has been the sole cause of the appearance of the disease, and every effort has been made to give the town a supply from the water-works. The authorities expect to be able in a day or two, by means of powerful engines, to pump up water to the reservoir on Government-hill sufficient to give a moderate supply, until the works are finished, or at least until the existing drought has come to an end. Accounts from Penang report similar heat and drought there and in the province, with small-pox and cholera spreading. The natives have had several processions praying for rain.

The coals at Tanjong Pagar Wharf are still burning, but a day or two more will see the fire completely extinguished. During the whole fortnight that has elapsed since the fire began two powerful centrifugal pumps have been almost incessantly at work pumping water to a height of some eighteen feet, for conveyance in iron pipes and wooden troughs above the coal where it has been most needed. In addition three tugs and fire-engines have been at work pumping water through hose. Yet with the coal covering six or seven acres of ground it has been found impossible to put the fire out in a fortnight. The quantity of coal stored on the company's premises was 48,000 tons, of which 5,000 or 6,000 tons escaped untouched, and a considerable quantity will be salved. About half the coal is believed to have been covered with insurance. Already the work of reconstruction has commenced, and brick pillars are rising rapidly on the cleared portion of the coal sheds, and corrugated iron or zinc will replace the old attap roofs, which proved so fatally combustive on the afternoon of the 13th April, 1877.

The Criminal sessions here are not over yet, owing to some heavy cases occupying the attention of the Court. The police torture case was decided on the 20th, when the two policemen were found guilty and sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment. In connection with this case also, Inspector Strugnell has been suspended from duty pending an inquiry into his conduct in the matter. Another case of some interest which has been decided is that of the eight Chinese accused of kidnapping coolies for Siak. They were found guilty and sentenced, two to fines of $750 each or four months' rigorous imprisonment, and six to fines of $100 each or two months' rigorous imprisonment. There have been other heavy cases, and it will take all that the Acting Chief Justice, the Hon. T. Ford can do, to get through his work and be in Penang to open the Sessions there. The unspeakable wrong doing of the Colonial-office with regard to the administration of justice here is worthy of Turkey or Russia.

Ex-Sultan Ismail and followers are interned in Johore. Ex-Sultan Abdullah, the Mantri, Laxamana, and Shahbandar of Perak are in custody here in the Civil Prison, awaiting the decision as to their future place of abode. The community now await with interest the Secretary of State's decision as to the future government of Perak, as it is clear that the existing arrangement is not in conformity with his despatch of June 1876. Meantime Mr. Hugh Low governs Perak by advising the Rajah Mudah Yusuf. "My policy in Sarawak," wrote Sir James Brooke in 1850, "has been high-handed against evil-doers. Your slipshod policy is in the end a bloody and a cruel one."

Five forged notes for $500 each of the Singapore branch of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China have been detected. Four of them were presented at the Bank in payment of a draft on Hong Kong, but were at once detected by the head cashier, Mr. Ho Yiang Moh. They were in the possession of a respectable Chinese hong, who received them in the regular course of business. Inquiry being made, another of the same amount was found, making five in all. The forgery is most ingenious, and it is surmised was done in Canton.

H.M. Juno, at present here, proceeds shortly to China, and will be replaced by H.M.S. Charybdis from Hong Kong.

The present mail steamer takes home to Europe one of our old residents, who has done good service to the Settlements, namely, Mr. John Cameron, vice-chairman of the Chamber of Commerce and member of the mercantile firm here that bears his name. Mr. Cameron is no doubt known at home as the author of "Malayan India," written by him fourteen years ago, and which is probably the most readable history and description yet published of these settlements. He has also contributed various papers on the Malay Archipelago to the Geographical and other societies of which he is a fellow, and for many years he edited and was the chief writer in the "Straits Times." Mr. Cameron came to the East twenty-five years ago, and goes home now, we believe, chiefly on account of his health.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—During the interval a fair business had been transacted in Yarns, but the demand at the close had somewhat subsided. Shirtings were attracting more attention, at slowly advancing rates. T-Cloths (7 lbs.) and Drills were difficult of sale. Turkey Reds had been taken at lower prices, the lighter weights being, however, still somewhat neglected. Victoria Lawns had again declined. For Woollens there was generally but little demand. Business in Metals had been small and unimportant. The stocks were large, and prices showed no signs of improvement.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular contains the subjcined report:—The market has been wanting in activity, dealers showing little inclination to operate at previous rates. The local demand for Yarn and Shirtings continues to be met by importations from Yokohama on native account. A larger business than usual has been done in T-Cloths and Drills, principally for Government purposes. Turkey Red Cambrics are weaker again. Victoria Lawns have been placed to a moderate extent at irregular prices. Woollens and Worsteds: Orleans and Lustres of all descriptions are extremely depressed. The demand for Mousselines de Laine is quiet, and former quotations are with some difficulty maintained. A fair quantity of cloth has been disposed of for army use, and the remaining stock of Blankets has found the same destination, at an extreme rate. Iron: Square Bars are the only descriptions at present saleable. Sugar is declining. Kerosine Oil has been sold at $5.00, but is weaker at the close.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Cornabé and Co.'s Circular says:—Cotton Goods have continued very dull of sale, and the prices quoted are purely nominal. Metals: Both Iron and Lead are out of stock, and the first supplies that come to hand will be readily saleable.

HANKOW.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says:—The demand for Piece Goods has been very limited, and prices remain unchanged. Cotton Goods—Grey Shirtings: Sales have consisted of 500 pieces 8¼lbs. B. "Green Phœnix" chop at Tls. 1.78; 500 pieces 8¼ lbs. "Flower" chop at Tls. 1.35; and 100 pieces 7 lbs. "Stork" chop at Tls. 1.11 per piece. T-Cloths: The inquiry for these has been limited, and no sales have transpired. Metals—Lead: The market has continued quiet, and only a small business has been done at Tls. 5.80 to 5.90. L. B. is quoted at Tl. 5.90 per picul. Quicksilver: In the absence of any demand prices have declined Tl. 1 per picul, and are nominally Tls. 51.0 to 52.0 per picul. Tin Plates and Tin: There is no business passing, and quotations remain unchanged.

SHANGHAI.—There had been a very quiet market for all descriptions of Cotton fabrics. At Messrs. Cumines and Co.'s auction Grey Shirtings were from 2 to 4 candareens lower all round. T-Cloths, best Mexican 7 lbs. and 8 lbs. maintained previous quotations, were scarce, and well held. In White Shirtings there was still a small inquiry at Tls. 1.65 per piece. Woollens and Worsteds were selling at auction in moderate quantities at about previous quotations, but there was no private inquiry for such fabrics at present. There had been no improvement in Metals, the demand for all kinds being less active; Nail Rods showed a further depression. In Lead there had been very little doing.

FOOCHOW.—The sales during the interval had been:—T-Cloths: 7 lbs., 1,000 pieces at $1.72 per piece; 8 lbs., 500 pieces at $2.32; 8¼ lbs., 500 pieces at $2.62. Lead, 4,300 pigs at $8.50 to 9.00 per picul.

HONG KONG.—There had been no improvement in business generally, the only inquiry being for one or two special articles which were in small supply. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Good to best Nos. 16 to 24 English Yarn command former prices, but Nos. 28 to 32 are wholly neglected, and Nos. 38 to 42 are only inquired for at reduced values. Piece Goods: The market has been quiet for most articles, the only strong demand having been for White Shirtings, all counts of which have been in request at well maintained rates. 7 lb. Grey Shirtings have not been dealt in, and the sales of 8.4 lb. have amounted to only 4,000 pieces. English Drills are not wanted; quotations for American makes are unchanged, although there are now no supplies on offer. Of American Sheetings a few bales of Massachusetts mills have been placed at $3.55 per piece, and a few P.M.C. Jeans at $3 per piece. Woollens: A few parcels of Blankets have been sold, and Camlets have commanded higher prices, but in other articles there have been no transactions, and values are unchanged. Metals: Lead has been in better request, and has been fairly taken at former prices. Tin plates are not specially wanted. Quicksilver has been moderately speculated in and has slightly advanced, owing to telegraphic advices from San Francisco. Yellow Metal is somewhat easier as dealers are fairly well supplied at the moment. Coals: The receipts have been 10,100 tons, comprising 8,100 tons of Australian and 2,000 tons of Cardiff. The sales have been 5,860 tons of Cardiff at $10 to $10.25 and 42s. per ton, and 2,700 tons of Australian at $8.50 per ton ex ship. Owing to warlike telegrams from Europe, and advices from Singapore of the destruction of a large quantity of coal there by fire, there has been more desire shown here to buy, and an advance of 25 cents per ton has been paid. Ample supplies are near at hand, however, and no material advance is looked for by the most sanguine operators.

CANTON.—In the absence of inquiry quotations for Lead were unchanged, L.B. ruling at $8.30, and W.B. and Hole Chop at $8.40 to 8.45 per picul. Quicksilver had met with no attention during the interval.

SINGAPORE.—The import market had continued exceedingly dull, business in Cotton staples had almost come to a standstill, stocks were accumulating, and there were heavy supplies afloat; quotations generally were weaker.

PENANG.—The demand for Cotton goods in the interval had been very quiet, and only a small business had been done, at about previously ruling rates.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Business in old tea had been virtually suspended, whilst supplies had ceased to come in, and season 1876-77 was therefore considered closed. One or two "garden" samples of new leaf had been shown, representing, of course, nothing; and the usual small forced parcels were expected in a few days from date. The season generally, however, was a fortnight later than the last, and it seemed improbable that much more than these "garden" lots would be down in time for shipment even by the 10th May steamer, though doubtless ample supplies would be available for the following opportunity. As regards probable prices for new teas nothing was said, the up-country markets for green leaf being still unopened.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Settlements for the interval had been 188 chests Ningchow at Tls. 11 to 11½ per picul, leaving 833 chests in stock. Advices from Hankow state that the market is expected to be rather late in opening this year as the season is backward, and also that less money than usual has been sent into the country for the purchase of leaf. Green: Only a small business had taken place, and the season was considered as closed.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—The interval between this and the date of our last issue, being but ten days, coupled with the usual small business doing at this season of the year, leaves us with very little matter of interest to report upon. Market settlements and private contracts are said to exceed 2,000 boxes New Season's New make Congou, costing from Tls. 21 to 32, and, at these prices, they are at the parity of late current rates. The quality of the "leaf," daily arriving from the country, unfortunately does not improve, and what has been shipped may now be considered a fair criterion of the "first crop."

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—European advices had caused an almost complete suspension in business; the few settlements made had been on a basis of $580 to 600 (21s. 6d. to 22s. 2d., or f.60 to f.62) for Medium Sinshius. Oshius and "Filatures" were pressed for sale, but in the absence of firm offers, it was impossible to ascertain what prices would be accepted. Settlements, 1st July to date, 20,350 bales, against 12,600 bales during corresponding period last season. Stock, 1,400 bales.

SHANGHAI.—Very little business had been done, although the settlements (which had been partly on consignment or joint account) are reported at 1,300 bales. A further decline of fully Tls. 20 per picul had taken place in price. Only 25 bales of Re-reels had been bought, and these were for America. The estimated unsold stock was 10,000 bales.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon's Circular says:—A few dealers showing inclination to sell has resulted in the settlement of some 70 to 80 bales Tsatlee, but a concession of $15 to $20 per picul has again been made in favour of buyers, compared against last quotations. Our market is virtually cleared of Nos. 1, 2, and 3 classifications. No. 4 can be bought on basis of late rates ruling in Europe, say, $400, equal to 14s. in London and f. 39.50 in Lyons, but with anything like a general demand holders are sure to advance their prices. Long-reels have been dealt in, to a small extent, for shipment by this outgoing mail. Re-reels.—There is nothing fresh to report about these, beyond the settlement of 30 boxes at fully $20 per picul, decline in price. Stock is estimated as follows:—450 to 500 bales Tsatlee, 50 bales Cumchuck and Lucklow, and about 100 bales of inferior sorts. Reports say the weather up country continues favourable for the "new crop," and the "first yield" is expected to be a large and good one.

MISCELLANEOUS.

YOKOHAMA.—Rice was quoted $2 to $2.05, Isinglass, $31 to $34; Camphor, $16 to $16.50; Tobacco, $6.50 to 9.25; Wax, $11 to $12.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Copper: Transactions had been unimportant, amounting to 250 piculs only. Camphor: Deliveries of 700 piculs are reported at about previous rates. Wax: Some small purchases had been made at an advance on last quotations. Tobacco: About 800 piculs had found buyers at prices much the same as last reported.

HANKOW.—There had been small arrivals of common Zechuen Rhubarb, which was offered at Tls. 15 to Tls. 30. There had been no arrivals of Musk, and quotations were nominal. Arrivals of Hides continued on a large scale, and prices had declined m. 4 per picul. Shipments since 1st April 1,042 piculs, quotations Tls. 7.1 to Tls 7.4.

HONG KONG.—Camphor had been scarce, no Japan having offered and the receipts of Formosa being small; for parcels of the latter to arrive holders were firm, asking $18 to 18.25 per picul. Vermilion could be had at $34 per case. No good Gamboge was on offer. Moderate quantities of Drugs had been received at Macao, and quotations were:—Aniseed Oil $190, Cassia Oil $100, and Aniseed Stars $24.50 per picul.

SINGAPORE.—The market had been quiet; with the exception of a more active demand for Gambier and Sago Flour there was not much alteration; quotations for most articles were unchanged, but the tone of the market was firm. A considerable business, 1,900 tons, has been done in Gambier; the market opened firm, with an upward tendency, and the price advanced gradually from $4.40 to 4.50, then suddenly rising to $4.70 and 4.80, near the close $4.82½ had been paid, but there was no further demand at this rate, and at the departure of the mail supplies were being offered at $4.65; Cube Gambier was scarce; quotations were firm, 130 tons of No. 1 quality contracted for at $5¼, and 10 tons of No. 2 quality at $5.35 per picul.

PENANG.—There had been a moderate business in Pepper, Tin, and Basket Sugar, but the market for other produce had been very dull. Tin: Small transactions. Rates had declined from $19.50 to $19.20, closing at the latter quotation. Stock, 4,800 piculs. Black Pepper had been in good demand for England, but rates showed a decline. Sales about 7,400 piculs, at $7.65 to $7.56 for West Coast, and $7.45 for Atchin. Market nearly cleared, but moderate arrivals expected. White Pepper: A small lot purchased at $14. Sugar: Basket had been contracted for to the extent of about 350 tons, at $3.50 to $3.60, principally at the higher rate—delivery 1½ to 2½ months. Offers at $3.70 had since been made and refused. Manufacturers declined to do more at present. Transactions in Penang No. 1 from $6.80 to $7.10 according to quality. No. 2 in demand, but no supplies.

MR. BRASSEY ON GUNBOATS.

The subjoined letter from Mr. Brassey has appeared in The Times:—

It may not be uninteresting to many of your readers to know that the two gun vessels recently constructed by Sir William Armstrong's firm for the Chinese Government were at Aden on the 16th of April, having performed their long voyage from England satisfactorily. The opening of the Suez Canal, which has made it practicable to despatch vessels of small size and limited coal carrying capacity to those distant Eastern waters, in which our commerce is so important, has added a new element to the many complications of the naval problem. It is certain that small vessels can now be employed with far greater advantage than formerly. The most important positions which our naval forces would be required to occupy, such as the Straits of Gibraltar, Bab el Mandeb, and Singapore, are eminently adapted for the effective use of small vessels armed with powerful weapons. It has been urged most strongly by Mr. Barnaby that every monster ironclad should be supported by a flotilla of gunboats. Has due weight been given to this suggestion of the Chief Constructor, which received the strongest support from Sir Spencer Robinson and other authorities? As skirmishers, in combination with the monster ironclads of the Inflexible type, gunboats of the type designed by Mr. Rendel would be invaluable. In addition to the attendant flotilla of gunboats, each armoured ship should carry torpedo boats of great speed. Mr. Samuda, some years ago, urged the Admiralty to introduce into the Navy swift torpedo boats built on Mr. Thorneycroft's principle. His suggestion should have been more promptly followed. At the commencement of an action the torpedo boats should be lowered, ready, as soon as the contending fleets had opened fire, to rush in, under cover of the smoke, and destroy the enemy's ships. When it is remembered that the blow from a single torpedo would prove fatal, and how improbable it is that such tiny craft steaming at the rate of 17 knots, and enveloped in smoke, will be struck by heavy projectiles, it can scarcely be doubted that victory would incline in favour of that fleet which should possess the greatest number and the most effective of these light-armed naval skirmishers.

Again, considering how impossible it is to construct an invulnerable ship, and that the costliest ships are almost as liable to destruction as those of a smaller and less costly type, ought it not to be a cardinal maxim with naval constructors and administrators to distribute the strength of the navy into as large a number of ships as may be, taking care, of course, that no ship shall be built which is too small to be thoroughly effective in its own particular class? Let us seek for the best practical application of this principle. If, on the one hand, we agree that the Inflexible type is too large, and, on the other hand, insist that no design shall be accepted which is not adequate for the special object in view, then the only solution of the problem is to be found in the abandonment of the attemdt to unite in one hull all the qualities to be desired in a ship of war. The exaggerated dimensions of our latest ironclads are due to the attempt to carry the heaviest guns that can be constructed, under the protection of impenetrable armour, and at extreme speeds. The result has been a growth of dimensions which involves as a consequence, much to be regretted when the advances in artillery and torpedo warfare have rendered the most powerful ship destructible, a corresponding diminution in the number of ships built. And not only is there a reduction in the ships; there is also a reduction in the number of guns, which, viewed in connection with the inevitable uncertainty of aim in the excitement of battle, is equally to be regretted. The expediency of adding largely to the dimensions of an armoured steam ram, for the purpose of mounting an armament of two or four 80-ton guns, is open to question on another ground. A captain may hesitate to open fire, and to obstruct his field of view by the smoke of a heavy cannonade, when he sees a cloud of torpedo boats hovering round him, only deferring their fatal assault until their movements are rendered invisible to the enemy by the smoke from his own guns. How, then, are we to meet these various and complicated conditions with which the naval constructor has to deal? It can only be done by adopting distinct types of ships for the use of the gun, the ram, and the torpedo respectively. The artillery of the fleet should be mounted on floating gun-carriages of the Gamma type, designed by Mr. Rendel. For the torpedo each large ship should carry two or more of Mr. Thoneycroft's swift launches. For the purposes of ramming, a swift armoured ship of handy proportions is required; and, with the view to a limitation of size, and in order to secure that quality of handiness so vitally necessary to an effective ram, these vessels should not be encumbered with armour-protected guns. Let progressive, unprejudiced naval officers compare the kind of force that could be created for a given sum of money, if constituted, according to the suggestions here offered, with a fleet composed of vessels of the Inflexible type. I assume that armoured vessels can be built for £50 per ton. The Inflexible type, in round figures, has a tonnage of 10,000 tons, and costs £500,000. Five millions sterling, therefore, would produce only ten Inflexibles, which, powerful as they are, possess no special defence against the torpedo, are armoured with penetrable armour, and together carry only forty guns. A fleet of Inflexibles, it will be remarked, costs £125,000 a gun. I venture to believe that a like sum of £5,000,000 might be much more effectively applied in the construction of the following vessels:—

1. Thirty armoured steam rams of 2,000 tons, without guns, costing, at £50 a ton, each £100,000	£3,000,000
2. Sixty gun-vessels of the Gamma type, armed with one 38-ton gun, two 12-pounder breech-loading guns, and one Gatling gun, each £25,000	1,500,000
3. Launches on Mr. Thorneycroft's plan, and other descriptions of offensive torpedoes and torpedo boats...	500,000
	£5,000,000

For operations in European waters, in the Mediterranean, the Red Sea, the Straits of Singapore, in short, along the whole line of our communications with the East, such a fleet as I have indicated would, in the hands of dashing commanders, be more effective than ten Inflexibles. Is the ram, as some think, the most formidable weapon of the Navy, and is the quality of handiness the first condition of efficiency. Then thirty rams are matched against ten, and the smaller vessels, being more handy, are the more effective. True it is that the Inflexibles could steam faster than the smaller rams, and could therefore place themselves beyond their reach; but such powerful vessels were surely not built to run away from an enemy. Is the gun the weapon on which we chiefly rely? In the plan suggested eighty guns are carried as against forty; and they are, for many purposes, mounted, so as to be more available than if carried in ships of the Inflexible type. For bombardments and for coast defence, a shallow draught is often essential in the vessels employed. It may be necessary that they should pass over shoals or navigate shallow channels. St. Petersburg and Cronstadt were inaccessible to our line-of-battle ships. They might have been destroyed by gunboats. Take, again, the question of coast defence. What could be done to protect the Thames, the Mersey, or the Humber, by ships drawing 30ft., in comparison with the services which could be rendered by gunboats capable of navigating the inshore channels, and threading their way through the intricate maze of mud flats and sand banks, with which the estuaries of our largest rivers are beset? In a naval engagement the utility of gunboats would be scarcely less apparent. Having double the number of guns the chance of delivering a fatal shot is largely in favour of the fleet supported by a flotilla of gunboats. It may be thought that the gunboats could not sail in company with the larger ships. The plan of towing would meet this difficulty. For an example of what may be done with torpedo boats the recent experiments at Cherbourg are conclusive.

A general review of the situation cannot fail, as I think, to convince dispassionate minds that our present large expenditure on ironclads would be more judiciously applied in perfecting our means of attack rather than in a hopeless competition of armour against guns. In France, where the art of naval design has reached its greatest perfection, and where original ideas in naval architecture are boldly and freely adopted, some of the most eminent constructors have already pronounced the days of ironclads to be numbered. In the United States no attempt has been made to construct sea-going ironclads. Those produced in Russia have proved failures. The other Powers are followers of our example in matters naval. Were half the money, now so lavishly, and I fear vainly spent on unwieldy and no longer indestructible or impenetrable ironclads, employed in procuring for the navy the means of destroying them, the naval administrations of other Powers would abandon the construction of armoured vessels. They would acknowledge the hopelessness of the attempt to give protection to their fleets by means of armour against the cloud of gunboats, torpedo boats, and rams which we could bring together against them.

SHIPBUILDING EXHIBITION.

A very interesting collection of models of steamers, sailing vessels, tugs, fishing smacks, and the like, emanating from the Shipwrights' Company, has been opened for competitive exhibition at Fishmongers' Hall, by the permission of the governing body of that ancient civic guild. The Lord Mayor honoured the company with his presence at the opening ceremony, as did also the Sheriffs and many other persons of consideration; the chief magistrate of the City going in some State from the Mansion-house. The Company of Shipwrights as a society existed from a very early time in English history; but its incorporation by charter dated from the reign of James I.—May, 1612—its first Master being Mr. Phineas Pett. The drafts for the ships of the Royal Navy were afterwards ordered to be submitted to the company for approval previously to being built from; and upon it was conferred jurisdiction over all builders, whether of the Royal Navy or of merchant shipping. The Shipwrights' company, mindful of its old traditions, is now anxious to encourage any improvement that learning or invention can suggest in the building of ships of every class, and has offered in this Exhibition numerous liberal prizes for that purpose. The models now on exhibition are marvellous not only for their great number and variety, but for the excellent design and workmanship they display and the taste shown in their arrangement. The prizes include three for steamers of the largest class, suitable for passage through the Suez Canal, for our India and China trades; and for service between Great Britain and the United States. The first prize a gold medal, the freedom of the company, and £100; the second, a silver medal, the freedom of the company, and £26 5s.; the third, freedom of the company and honourable mention. Under this class is a model of the P. and O. Company's steamer Kashgar, exhibited by Mr. James Laing, of Sunderland; a half model of the Meiji Maru, built for the Mikado of Japan by Messrs. Napier, of Glasgow, and exhibited by Mr. Swan, of London. In the second-class, which consists of screw steamers, for cargo only, of about 1,500 tons gross, there are two prizes—a gold medal, freedom of the company, and £26 5s.; and, secondly, a silver medal and freedom of the company. In the third-class, which comprises fast steamers, either paddle or screw, designed for carrying passengers and mails, for the Channel service, there are two prizes—one a gold medal, freedom of the company, and £26 5s.; the other a silver medal and freedom of the company. In this division the comfort and accommodation of passengers are specially taken into consideration, having regard to the harbour room which might be given at Dover and Folkestone, Boulogne and Calais. Then there is a prize for sailing ships of 1,200 tons register—viz., a gold medal, freedom of the company, and £26 5s. Under the class of Miscellaneous objects there is a fine model of the P. and O. steamer Poonah, as lengthened 80ft. amidships, exhibited by the P. and O. Company; also a model of the White Star steamer Britannic, exhibited by Messrs. Ismay, Imrie, and Co., the owners. There is also under this class a model of the lighthouse on the S.E. coast of Ceylon. The list of rewards also includes one for the best model of a sailing ship of about 700 tons register. But rewards of money and medals with the freedom of the company, are not the only or the chief incentives held out. It is hoped that the exhibition of models and drawings will tend both to heighten general interest in the subject and excite a generous rivalry among designers. All kinds of commercial and pleasure craft have prizes allotted to them. Yachts, fishing smacks, seagoing and river tugs, and barges are exemplified by their respective models. It will thus be seen that it is the hearty wish of the company of the Free Shipwrights of London to exercise its influence again, and with more than renewed vigour, in promoting in every possible way the progress of the noble art they represent. It numbers in its ranks some of the foremost shipbuilders and shipowners and members of Parliament of the present day.

THE KASHGAR ENVOY.

The letter of a correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette on the subject of the visit of the Kashgar Envoy contains the following observations:—The Syud Yakub Khan and the object of his visit to England deserve more than a passing word of comment. Next to his Sovereign, the envoy who is now among us is the most remarkable man in Kashgar, and the successful consolidation of the Ameer's kingdom, and its friendly relations with England and Russia, are largely due to his influence. The object of his journey is one of those interesting combinations of business and pleasure which are not uncommon among Western diplomatists. A rapid sketch of the present circumstances of his country will make that object the more comprehensible. Some ten or twelve years ago a Khokand adventurer succeeded in recovering from the Chinese invader that part of Eastern Turkestan now known as Kashgar and Yarkand. A descendant of the old Kashgar princes was placed on the throne; but, sinking into lethargy and debauchery, the Khokand soldier removed his patron, and, by means that will not bear much examination, he set aside every other obstacle to his ambition and ascended the throne. The early days of his sovereignty were marked by a cruel and rigorous rule. No favour was shown to enemies or to doubtful friends. The Chinese and their religion were effaced, and the country reconstituted on the basis of a fanatical Mohammedanism. Even now he rules with an iron hand, but his vigour is tempered with sagacity, especially in his foreign relations. Yakub, for such was the adventurer's name, had no sooner fixed himself upon the throne than he sought to be recognised by his two great neighbours, Russia and England. In 1868 he sent an agent to St. Petersburg, who was coldly received. The following year this same agent was despatched to Calcutta. Lord Mayo was favourable to his mission, and adopted negotiations which had been unofficially commenced the year before by Mr. Shaw, then on a visit as a private traveller in Kashgar. Sir Douglas Forsyth was appointed as the head of a mission to return with the Ameer's agent; but the mission failed through want of time. Lord Mayo's over-caution having led him to prohibit its wintering beyond the mountains. The ruler of Kashgar not unnaturally took offence at the Viceroy's distrustful policy, and once more he turned his face towards Russia. The Viceroy's action had been unexplained to him, and the approach of the Russian armies to his very borders in 1871 led him to invite Baron Kaulbars to negotiate a treaty of peace and friendship. This treaty was ratified in 1872, and in the following year Russia acknowledged Kashgarian independence. The Russian capture of Kulja had forced the Ameer to come to terms with the Czar's Government, but he was nevertheless distrustful of the Russian commanders. Events in Central Asia had shown him that sooner or later his new kingdom might be absorbed into the ever increasing empire, and he therefore still looked for Calcutta to acknowledge his independence. In the summer of 1873 Syud Yakub Khan, our present guest, while on his way to Constantinople, made formal offers of friendship to the Indian Government, and on his return from Stamboul in the autumn of that year he was accompanied from Calcutta homewards by Sir Douglas Forsyth. This mission resulted in a commercial treaty, dated February, 1874, and one of the circumstances connected with that treaty forms a leading object of the envoy's present visit to England. The Syud's journey to Constantinople was not without importance to Kashgar and its relations with Russia. The religious revival which the Ameer's conquests had brought about in Eastern Turkestan had been watched with much interest at Stamboul. It was recognised that this new champion of Islam might some day head a Mohammedan rising, and become an ally of the Turkish Government. The Sultan revived in him the title of "Commander of the Faithful," once held by the Caliph of Bagdad, and distinctions and presents were heaped upon his Envoy. All these incidents were carefully noted by General Ignatieff, who was then living in Constantinople, and his knowledge of Central Asia led him to appreciate the danger of a union between the Mohammedans of the East and the West. Not the least interesting of that diplomatist's many intrigues at Pera relates to his negotiations with the Syud Yakub Khan. But the General's endeavours failed to arouse the Syud's suspicions of English sincerity, or to shake his fidelity to his master. The Syud returned home, his journey having been successful in every respect. His uncle's independence was recognised and honoured at Constantinople, and the Forsyth mission and treaty completed its recognition by the English Government.

The subsequent relations of the Ameer with the English and the Russian Governments have been highly honourable. Unlike Shere Ali, and departing from his earlier disposition, he has not sought to play one Power off against the other, but he has endeavoured to give offence to neither. His part has been exceedingly difficult, for Russia having gained little by Baron Kaulbars's treaty, has watched with no little envy the result of the Forsyth mission. The tariff under the Forsyth treaty is of a nominal amount; the only obstacles to trade are the mountain ranges, and, though these are immense, the trade has doubled from £60,000 to £120,000 in a season. Even this is not a large sum; but the rivulet is worth preserving, for the Kashgar population is enormously increasing, and though the treaty is purely commercial it helps to maintain that outwork of friendly and independent kingdoms which most statesmen now acknowledge as desirable for the protection of India. There is one clause in the 1874 treaty of much importance, but it has not yet been acted upon. It sets forth that the English Government shall appoint a representative at the Ameer's Court, and appoint commercial agents, subordinate to him, at any towns or places considered suitable within the Ameer's dominion. You pointed out some weeks ago as being remarkable that, while we were asking Shere Ali to let us place agents at Balk and Herat, in order to watch the attitude of Russia on the western frontiers of Afghanistan, we should fail to avail ourselves of our treaty rights in regard to this same matter in Kashgar. Kashgar may not open up so easy an access to India as Herat, but the signing of this treaty gives us an interest in Kashgar which is well worth preserving.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the above Society was held at the Cannon-street Hotel on the 1st inst.; Henry Pease, Esq., of Darlington, was in the chair, and the following gentlemen also took part in the proceedings of the meeting:—Serjeant Simon, M.P., Mr. E. Young, R.N., Rev. Joseph Mullens, Rev. John Kennedy, and the Rev. Horace Waller. The report was first read by the Secretary; after mentioning the work of the year, he called attention to the Commission on the China Coolie Traffic with Cuba, which he said paralysed the loan then being raised by the Cuban Government, at the time that the report of that Commission was issued. He also mentioned that he had a letter from a missionary in China, which reported that girls were being sold in numbers for slave purposes. Speaking on the fourth resolution, Mr. Chessan mentioned the report of the Commission which the Chinese Government sent to Cuba, for the investigation of the state of the Coolies there, which he said was shocking. Coolies were not absolutely sold, but were bound to serve for a term of six or seven years; this, he thought, was a system of coercion. Resolutions in accordance with the objects of the meeting were passed.

COLONIAL DEFENCES.

The Colonies has the following on Captain Colomb's paper, noticed in a late number:—

What are the undefended points in our Empire, and who shall pay the cost? Perhaps the most useful addition to the discussion was made by Colonel Crossman. He showed that the Russians were advancing down the Gulf of Saghalin to Vladivistok. Hong Kong is only defended at this moment by our fleet, though it ought to be fortified, the principal purpose of a navy being, not to guard isolated places, but to carry war into an enemy's country. When land defences are in existence the strength of the navy is virtually doubled. Singapore, which commands the Straits of Malacca—those Straits of Malacca about which Lord Beaconsfield has been so pompous and Mr. Gladstone so elaborately satirical—has no defences. Neither has Point de Galle, and the defences of the Island of Mauritius are inadequate. Yet these strategic points have the complete mastery of our route to Australia by way of the Indian Ocean. St. Helena, as Colonel Crossman thinks, has lost its ancient value. The good old days of the East Indiamen are over, the Napoleonic tradition has almost perished, and to use popular language, St Helena has rather gone down in the world. Nevertheless, St. Helena will always be a handy coaling-station, and as to the foolish rumour which has lately been current about our intention to abandon Ascension, we can only observe that a more silly fable was never circulated at a more inopportune time. Moreover, as Colonel Crossman stated, Simon's Bay is not fortified, neither are the Falkland Islands. The actual cost of the defences of the Empire, in Colonel Crossman's judgment, would not exceed two millions, and that two millions might be divided were an equitable quota paid by the Imperial Executive and the Colonial Exchequers. Another point on which Colonel Crossman touched was the need of more complete telegraphic communication between the different sections of the Empire. The telegraphic line from Australia to England passes through Java; and, though the Dutch are very good friends, circumstances might occur under which it would be inconvenient to transmit confidential news through one of the possessions of a foreign State. It is the same with regard to two other telegraphic lines. When we wish to communicate with British Columbia we have to send through the United States; and the only telegraphic line which unites our South African Colonies with the mother-country passes through Madeira; and therefore we are dependent upon the civility and the good offices of Portugal. It should be an accepted doctrine that no portion of our telegraphic system should be allowed to pass through an alien country, for our political allies of to day may be transformed into our foes of to-morrow. In matters of this sort, to be forewarned is to be forearmed, and Captain Colomb's advice was therefore seasonable. The main heads may be summed up shortly. If we do not make the Pacific our own, we shall find that we have been outwitted by Teutonic and Muscovite energy. We must acknowledge the truth that our military and naval base must be equal, one here and one at the Antipodes.

FULMER CHURCH, BUCKS.—Dr. Swabey, Chancellor of the diocese of Oxford, held a Court at Slough, with reference to the desire of Mrs. Sabine Ellen Dent, of Fern-acres, Fulmer, to erect, at her sole expense, a new chancel and add a vestry and organ chamber to the church of that parish, as a memorial to her late son, Lancelot William Dent. A Faculty was asked for by the rector (the Rev. C. Joyce) and churchwardens in accordance with a resolution passed at an adjourned vestry, held on March 15, and among those who had signalled a wish to see the work carried out in harmony with the present structure, and as Mrs. Dent desired, were the Duke of Somerset, Lord Leven and Melville, Lord John Hay, Lady Curtis, Lady Willoughby, and the Dean of Windsor. Major Gaskell, J.P., a non-resident landowner of the parish, represented a small body of objectors to the erection of a new chancel. The petition which he presented against the granting of the Faculty set forth, among other things, that the church was built in 1610 by Sir Marmaduke Darell, "servant to Queen Elizabeth in her wars both by sea and land, and after in her household; cofferer to King James, and died cofferer to King Charles;" that every consideration of the character of the founder, as well as the circumstances of the times and locality, pointed to the probability that the church was as carefully and liberally designed as it was substantially and usefully constructed; that it was the second or third parish church built in England for Protestant uses—i.e., since 1540; that, if simple, it was symmetrical and suitable to its position and purposes; that it was designedly left by the founder devoid of the architectural embellishments which it was now proposed to introduce, and of which the effect would be, by throwing back the architectural period of the portion treated, to confuse and falsify the tale which the whole exterior at present uniformly, consistently, and plainly told; that the church was a landmark of the religious history of the country, and that its characteristic features ought to be preserved. Major Gaskell also quoted the opinion of a most eminent architect, which was to the effect that no structure, however costly or architecturally designed, would compensate for the demolition of the present one. After patiently hearing both sides, the Chancellor granted the Faculty, observing that he did not think the Court ought to make itself judge of architectural propriety.

LONDON LIBRARY.—The annual general meeting of this society was held on the 31st May, Lord Houghton occupying the chair. The report of the committee, which was unanimously adopted, showed a net gain of 92 members, there being a loss by death, withdrawals, and otherwise of 119, as against 211 new members. There remain altogether on the register 1,518 members. The balance-sheet shows a gross income of £4,758 and a gross expenditure of £3,452, leaving a balance at bankers of £1,305. The sum expended in purchasing new books was £715, the number of volumes acquired being 2,245, whilst £228 had been absorbed in binding books. The circulation of books showed increased activity, more than 72,000 volumes having been taken out of the library by subscribers in the course of the year, being 9,000 more than in the previous year. Mr. C. M. Kennedy and Mr. Frederick Pollock having been elected members of the committee, and Mr. John O'Neill and Mr. F. Espinasse auditors of the accounts for the current year, a discussion ensued about closing the library on Saturday afternoons. After several amendments the resolution was withdrawn and the matter referred to the committee. The meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman, also to Mr. Harrison, the Librarian, and his assistants.

RETURN OF MR. BRASSEY, M.P.—Mr. Brassey, M.P. for Hastings, with Mrs. Brassey and family, arrived in their yacht Sunbeam off Hastings on the 26th ult., having accomplished a trip round the world. As soon as the vessel was sighted two gigs, manned by local Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers, a corps originated by Mr. Brassey, rowed off to her, and the men heartily congratulated him upon his safe return. The Sunbeam, in her voyage, has traversed 36,000 miles under steam and canvas, having been away forty-six weeks.

THE Queen of Holland died yesterday. The late Queen Sophie Frédérique Mathilde, consort of William III., King of Holland, was in her fifty-ninth year, having been born June 17, 1818; she was a daughter of William I., the late King of Wurtemburg. Her marriage took place on June 18, 1839, and she leaves two sons surviving her—Prince William Nicholas of Orange and Prince William Alexander.

THE Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer City of San Francisco has been lost while on a voyage from Panama to San Francisco. The vessel alone was worth over £100,000.

The London & China Telegraph.

LONDON: MONDAY, JUNE 4, 1877.

THE report of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, the substance of which we noticed in our last issue, is undoubtedly a very noticeable document; and, although the objects which it sets forth with little disguise, that, namely, of taking the steamer traffic out of the hands of foreign companies, can scarcely command the full sympathy of Europeans, it is undoubtedly a very elaborate and well-prepared statement, and shows a desire on the part of the Chinese to adopt foreign applicances, so long as they can see their way to do so, without injury to their own countrymen. It is evident that they are determined to throw all the energy possible into their enterprise, and to endeavour to enter independently into the field of steam navigation on the China coast and rivers. After enumerating the difficulties which have had to be encountered, the report goes on to state that the efforts of the Company during its three years of existence have not been without success. During the first year a profit of 10 per cent. was divided, and during the second 15 per cent.; while the profits of the Company during the third year had been good, in spite of the prolongation of the Yunnan disagreement, the famine in the south and drought in the north, the reduction of freights by foreigners, and the heavy rate of interest which had prevailed. Owing to these adverse circumstances, after payment of interest due on liabilities to native banks, the Company was in a position to declare only 5 per cent. dividend. The troubles, however, are yet to come, in the shape of repairs and renewals of steamers. We certainly admire the courage of the managers in publishing such an elaborate report.

IN another column we publish the Report of the P. and O. Company for the six months of their present financial year, which commenced on the 1st October last. Considering the depressed condition of business and the competition which has had to be met, the state of affairs shown is satisfactory. A dividend for the half-year at the rate of 4 (four) per cent. per annum is proposed, and, since the last report, further debentures to the amount, namely, of £70,500, have been paid off. The directors have succeeded in obtaining from the Italian Government an extension of the contract for the service between Venice, Ancona, and Brindisi for two years, from February, 1878.

IT is very much to be regretted that any one in the position of Dr. AYERS should have sent forth in an official report—to be found in our Hong Kong news—a statement in regard to opium smoking, which is not only opposed to the experience of residents in China, but is calculated to induce young men, who are ever ready for any new sensation, to give opium a trial.

MR. BRASSEY, M.P., has written to The Times valuable and important letters—which we reproduce—in which he calls attention to the two gunboats recently completed for the Chinese Government, and takes occasion to point out that small vessels can now be employed to much greater advantage than formerly.

ON the occasion of HER MAJESTY'S birthday, Sir HARRY ORD, formerly Governor of the Straits Settlements, has been raised to be a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; and Mr. GEORGE VANE, Colonial Treasurer at Ceylon, has been made a Companion of that Order.

SALES TO ARRIVE IN JAPAN.

IN a former issue we drew attention to the question of sales of imports to arrive in Japan, and the manner in which the case of TEMPLE WILLCOX and Co., v. YOKOZAWA ZENSUKE had been decided by the Japanese Court. On that hearing, the plaintiff sued his Japanese buyer, the defendant, for an order of the Court to compel him to take delivery of 300 pieces of velvets which had been sold to him by sample "to arrive," and which were refused, upon the ground that the goods did not come up to sample. This fact was clearly proved by the admission of the plaintiff's own arbitrator; and, in commenting upon the case at the time, we held upon this fact, and, contrary to the opinions expressed in some of the Japanese papers, that the decision was an obviously fair and reasonable one. Here it might have been supposed the matter would have ended, but a curious and interesting complication has since arisen. On the basis of the decision given in his own Court, the Japanese very naturally claimed back from the seller the earnest money, amounting to $150, which he had paid on signing the contract; but Mr. TEMPLE WILLCOX refused to return it, notwithstanding the adverse decision upon the quality of the goods which he had offered. This action seems to be quite inexplicable; and what follows is unique in the history of legal proceedings. The Japanese merchant brought a claim for the return of the earnest money before the Law Secretary of the English Court there, Mr. HIRAM S. WILKINSON, who with a display of learning which would probably astonish both Bench and Bar here, came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was bound to take delivery of what, according to the defendant's own arbitrator, were declared not to be goods which the plaintiff had bargained for, and that before he had done so he could lay no claim to the return of his earnest money. In other words, it has been decided that if a man buys one thing from another he is bound to take anything which the seller may offer him, provided that the said other thing happens to go by the same general name as the thing bargained for. No doubt, according to the proverb, "eggs is eggs," but velvets is not always velvets, and a variation in quality will ordinarily make so great a difference in the merchantableness of the article, that to offer a materially inferior kind of goods practically amounts to offering different goods altogether. This really is the whole gist of the case, but it has been lost sight of unfortunately in the very elaborate judgment which has been delivered upon this very simple matter. Had the difference in value been only trivial, and had the goods been such as could fairly be considered of the class bargained for, no doubt the Japanese buyer ought to have taken delivery, sold them in the ordinary way, and claimed the small difference if necessary. But 25 cents on the value of a piece of velvet is a large difference, and was at least quite sufficient to raise the presumption that the goods offered were practically of a different kind to those stipulated for. If this were the fact it is simply waste of time to argue as to what decision the Court should have arrived at. As the matter now stands, it has virtually been decided that the unlucky Japanese is to lose $150 because he will not take what he never asked for, and cannot get what he did ask for. A more unfortunate decision could scarcely be arrived at; and we trust that some of those in Japan who are interested in upholding our good name and credit will enable the Japanese merchants concerned to appeal from the Court at Yokohama, and in doing so take care that the true nature of the matter be stated. If the same ruling as that which has been given were made in the opposite case, for example, when a Japanese sold silk or tea for delivery and offered an article not up to sample, our export business with Japan would almost be brought to a standstill. On the other hand, it is needless to point out that such a decision as that under notice opens the door to wide-spread fraud on the part of any foreign trader who might think it a good stroke of business to make bargains for delivery of goods to Japanese, and on the basis of Mr. WILKINSON'S recent decision insist upon their paying for and taking delivery of widely inferior, and consequently different articles, on pain of forfeiting the heavy earnest money previously received from them.

CHINESE STRIKES.

THE history of the recent strike of the cotton yarn dealers in Hong Kong, particulars of which we have from time to time given, is interesting as illustrating at once the strength and the weakness of such combinations. That it is possible for Chinese Guilds to exercise much coercion and to force their members to comply with their regulations is shown by what was done by the Canton Cotton Guild, and has been illustrated by similar acts on other occasions. But that there is also some limit to this apparently arbitrary power is equally well displayed, and from what took place it is clear that even in China, where combinations of the kind are perhaps more powerful than in any other part of the world, it is not within the power of the few who direct them completely to ignore the wishes of the others concerned. Some of the cotton and yarn dealers were in fact found to be going their own way, notwithstanding the threats of the Guild, and it appeared by the last accounts beyond the power of that institution to restrain them. This indeed would seem ordinarily to be the weak point in Guilds and trade combinations in China as it is in other places. At the same time, strikes similar to the one which has recently attracted attention are of unpleasantly frequent occurrence both in Hong Kong and at the Treaty ports; and they tell with especial force in the latter place, as it is there impossible to bring the force of authority to bear upon them as can be done at the Treaty ports. Combinations among the Chinese to the detriment of foreign trade have often been put down in Shanghai and other places, simply by invoking the aid of the local authorities on the ground that such attempts at coercion are contrary to the provisions of the Treaty. In Hong Kong, unfortunately, this cannot be done, as we are unable to do with the Chinese there what their own officials can easily accomplish in China. It may, however, be worth while of the local Government in Hong Kong to ascertain, if possible, whether in some instances at least the aid of the Chinese officials might not be brought indirectly into play. Where, for instance, a Guild has its head establishment at Canton and a branch at Hong Kong, it might at times be possible to induce the authorities at the former place to bring a little wholesome pressure to bear upon the members of the Guild living under their jurisdiction. This could not of course be claimed as a right; but the Chinese authorities might be disposed as a matter of courtesy and comity to assist us to this extent; and if such were the case, we should at least on some occasions have a check upon the combinations which have so often proved harassing and detrimental to trade.

Literature, Science, &c.

Although no new publications of first importance have been announced, several very interesting works are noted as being shortly forthcoming. Macmillan and Co. are publishing a volume entitled Turks and Greeks, by the Hon. Dudley Campbell, being an account of a recent journey through Servia, Roumania, and Greece, including a visit to Constantinople. Cassells have invited Mr. Ffyfe to write a popular history of the present century, which is to appear a volume at a time as it is finished, and it is also known to Sir Charles Dilke's friends that he is engaged in collecting materials for a history of the nineteenth century, although it is believed that he does not intend that any portion of his work should appear for many years. A new work, bearing the title of "The Sea of Mountains," by Mr. Molyneux St. John, will be shortly issued by Messrs. Hurst and Blackett, which will comprise an account of Lord Dufferin's tour through British Columbia in 1876. Dr. Delitzsch's Hebrew New Testament is now complete, and Dr. Dorner, of Berlin, so well known to English theological students by his Christology, is said to be engaged on a treatise on systematic Christian doctrine.

Among literary matters connected with the East, we note that the second part of Facsimiles of Oriental MSS., &c., issued by the Palaeographical Society, is now ready for distribution. It consists of fifteen plates, with letterpress; and, dealing with eight languages, has, among others, specimens of Syriac, A.D. 509; Hebrew, A.D. 718; Arabic, A.D. 885; and Sanskrit, A.D. 1008.

The Contemporary Review and the Academy have both taken somewhat prominent notice of the Opium question. The former in its number for June publishes an article from the pen of Mr. Justice Fry, which is interesting alike for the lawyer-like skill and energy with which the case is argued, and the conspicuous want of accuracy with which the nature and bearing of the facts are set forth. These for the most part are taken from the Report of the India Finance Committee of 1871, but only a few isolated statements which go to make Mr. Justice Fry's case are noticed, and many of these are misunderstood, while the only practical suggestion made is founded upon a complete misapprehension as to the bearing of the Lekin duty question which has arisen in connection with the Chefoo Convention. Upon this point the writer of the article says:—

I have pointed out some things which in my opinion we ought to do; I will now refer to one which I think we ought not to do. The Treaty of Tientsin, as I have repeated, forced China for ever to admit opium at a fixed duty; subject to revision by consent of both parties at decennial periods. As regards goods, other than opium, the Chinese Government were restricted as to the amount of inland duties which they should levy; but with regard to opium, the Chinese Government were left free to levy what taxes they pleased on it after it left the hands of the foreign owner,—a distinction due to Lord Elgin, who accepted the opium trade as an inevitable evil, and thought a regulated and licit trade better than an illicit one, and at the same time held that we were bound to do nothing to quicken this trade or enable us to scatter the drug broadcast through China. This check on the opium trade the English merchants have greatly objected to; and they induced Sir Thomas Wade in his negotiations for the revision of the Treaty of Tientsin to urge the point on the Court of Peking.

This is entirely erroneous. What the merchants have been urging was that the levy of the Lekin, a species of inland duty, should not be made within the limits of the foreign settlements upon any goods, not that the inland taxes should be taken off opium—a request which the foreign merchants in China know perfectly well it would be useless to make. The article in the Academy, which is from the pen of Mr. J. F. Goldsmid, is based upon the Rev. Mr. Moule's recent pamphlet, and upon another pamphlet written by Mr. J. F. B. Tingling. Its tone is far more moderate and sensible than that of the more ambitious essay in the Contemporary. While disapproving of the Indian Government being directly concerned in the production of opium through the Bengal Monopoly, the writer admits there is at least something to be said on the other side. He concludes as follows:—

The whole question is beset with difficulties; and not the least striking commentary on the mistaken zeal of some pupils of the ultra-school of Opium Abolitionists is to be found in the very recent reply of the Chinese Ambassador in London to a deputation which waited upon him to ascertain his views. His Government, he is reported to have said, wished to put a stop to the import, but they found that unless they were assisted not only by England, but by other countries, it would not be sufficient. It would not be sufficient for only England and China to refuse to continue it. . . If England were to leave the trade it would simply fall into other hands. Slavery has been abolished in the United States, and serfs have been emancipated in Russia, irrespectively of money-claims involved. In a case of mere material profit and loss, England is capable of like efforts and a like sacrifice. But does the opium monopoly throw upon her shoulders the whole grave responsibility attributed to her? And is the time ripe for independent action? In any case, as the sudden removal of the objectionable drug must be physically injurious to the individual consumer, so might the cessation of the trade be gradual, and, to a certain extent, tentative.

Macmillan's Magazine for June contains an article upon Miss Jacob's recent biography of Rajah Brooke, from the pen of Mr. Sebastian Evans. He says with reference to the recent correspondence in The Times, that the vindication of the first English Rajah of Sarawak from the unadorned calumnies of Richard Cobden and Joseph Hume, calumnies uttered with motives as excellent as those with which Mr. Gladstone now reiterates them, has long ago been decisive and complete.

Japan Historical and Descriptive.—By C. H. EDEN. London: Marcus Ward and Co.—This book, which is compiled from larger and more expensive works on Japan, conveys a very good idea of the history, manners, and customs of that country, and will be acceptable at the present time, when so much attention is being directed to Japanese matters. To readers who are already acquainted with the subject, the most interesting part of the book will be the historical introduction, while the lighter and more descriptive portion of the work will also be acceptable to general readers. Mr. Eden has evidently taken considerable pains in consulting his authorities, and he brings a thoughtful and reflective mind to bear upon the different problems which present themselves for consideration. Speaking of the suppression of the powers of the Japanese Priests, he observes the curious parallelism which may be traced in it between Eastern and Western history. In the isolated Empire of Japan, the same difficulties which threatened the very existence of early European States made their appearance, and had to be confronted. The subjection, he notes, of the priestly or clerical classes to the State was found as necessary for the safety and well-being of Japan as of England or France.

Catalogue of the Buddhist Tripitaka. By Samuel Beal, Member of the Royal Asiatic Society.—The above valuable catalogue has been prepared for the India-office. The number of books in the collection is so large that a full report of their contents could not be prepared in time to accompany this catalogue, but sufficient has been done to show its peculiar value. Embracing, as it does, the writings of the early and late, or Southern and Northern, Schools of Buddhism, it will be seen that we have materials at hand for a complete history of that religion in all its developments. There are also a great number of volumes devoted to the early writings of the Buddhist Schools of China, particularly that of Tien-tai, and the Southern Contemplative (Tsung) School. And no history of Buddhism can be complete unless it reaches to these Schools, as they embrace within them many millions of followers, and in old time filled a still more important place in the religious history of China and Japan, the Tien-tai School being known in this latter country as Ten-dai.

Messrs. Wyld, of Charing-cross, have issued an excellent map of the country between Odessa and Constantinople, embracing the present seat of war on the Danube.

The author of "Flemish Interiors" writes to The Times as follows, under date May 25 :—"I observe you quote a paragraph from the Athenæum to the effect that the authorities of the British Museum are purposing to add to our National Library a rare, curious, and voluminous Chinese Encyclopædia, now offered for sale at Peking. It may interest bibliophiles to learn that there has long been in the Bibliotheque (Royale? Imperiale?) Nationale of Paris a Chinese Encyclopædia in fifty vols., 4to., entitled the 'Kou-kin-i-tong,' dating from a period answering to 220 of the Christian era. I may mention that among a vast number of very early discoveries practically in use by that ingenious people, but forgotten and discovered again in our own day under the fallacious idea that they are 'new' (as if there were anything new under the sun), is the employment of anæsthetics, at that time, and probably much earlier, in common use in surgery there, a Chinese physician, who flourished under the dynasty of Wei, by name Hao-Tho, being in the habit of administering a preparation of 'Ma-yo,' alias 'cannabis Indica,' or the hemp of the country, to his patients ; when after a few minutes they became as if dead, and remained insensible to any amount of punctures, probings, incisions, amputations, &c. It is, therefore, probable that should England become possessed of the work in question, and should our Oriental philologists live long enough to translate it, we shall stumble prematurely upon some of those results of a refined civilisation to which the ordinary course of progress would only bring us after the lapse of many centuries."

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Asiatic Society a curious and interesting paper has been read by Mr. N. B. E. Baillie entitled "Is the Sultan of the Turks the Caliph of the Mussulmans and the Legitimate Successor of the Prophet?" in which he examined at considerable length the admitted authorities on this question, especially Maverdy, and came to the conclusion that, on the taking of Baghdad by Tatars in A.D. 1258 and the overthrow of the Abbasside House, the Caliphate became vacant, and that the story of a certain Ahmed, who is said to have been recognised by Bibars, the Mamlook Sultan of Egypt, cannot be relied upon as satisfactory evidence.—At the Society of Antiquaries last meeting, Mr. Rendle exhibited a long Chinese roll on silk, representing, with elaborate mythological detail, the newly-born Cycle or Buddhist Kalpa. Mr. A. W. Franks explained the subjects of the drawing, and deciphered the Chinese inscriptions, which proved the date to be of a cyclical year of the period Wang-leit. The date would probably be A.D. 1631. Following the date was an inscription, which Mr. Franks rendered, "From the precious repository of the shining saint." In illustration of this roll, Mr. Franks exhibited a similar roll from his own collection. This was much shorter, but was coloured. It represented the same subject, and was inscribed, "A drawing of the birth of a Kalpa by Wang Chin-pang." Then followed the date, viz., the second year of Hung-wa, A.D. 1369. In both cases the hooks to fasten the rolls and the ends of the rollers were of jade.—At the Archæological Association, some important Roman remains found at Sittingbourne, Kent, have been exhibited by Mr. G. Payne.—At the Zoological Society's meeting, on the 15th May, the Secretary read a report on the additions that had been made to the Menagerie during the month of March, and called particular attention to a Ceylonese Fish Owl (Ketupa Ceylonensis), from Ceylon, presented by Capt. H. B. Turner.

A Paris correspondent informs us that Don. Pedro II., Emperor of Brazil, has been elected Associé Etranger of the Institution Ethnographique de France.

The various Fine Art Exhibitions continue to attract a large attendance. The Royal Academy, as usual, is crowded, and contains a large number of notable pictures, though upon the whole it is not considered to come fully up to an average. In addition to the works by the well known accademicians, there are many very excellent works from general sources. Mr. Leslie's Time of Roses, Mr. M. E. Fréres La Dinette, Miss Bonneau's La Siesta, Sir John Gilbert's Senators of Venice are well criticised, and Mr. Chevalier's opening ceremony of the Vienna Exhibition in 1873 is one of the most notable, and has attracted much attention. The Grosvenor Gallery, which is a great acquisition in the Art world, contains many of the gems of the season. Miss Thompson's "Roll Call," "Balaclava" and "Inkerman" continue to attract large numbers of visitors to the galleries of the Fine Art Society in Bond-street. The Burlington Fine Arts Club brought together in its galleries in Burlington-gardens a curious and interesting assortment of the etched works of Rembrandt. It is a loan exhibition, to which nineteen of the most learned acquereurs of these exquisite performances have contributed from their repective collections. The examples now displayed are not classified, as is the usual practice, according to subject, but rather according to the date of production, a plan which shows the successive phases of the artist's genius, and the progressive stages of its development.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The Envoys, accompanied by the Chinese Secretary of Legation and Dr. Macartney, were present at the Derby, and they have also visited the ships' models at the Fishmongers' Hall. They expressed themselves especially interested in the models of the Indian and Australian steamers. The subordinate members of the Embassy also appear to take great interest in our public institutions, and are frequently seen at the British Museum and other like places. A few days back one of them caused some amusement by the curiosity he displayed with regard to one of the Egyptian sarcophagi, to inspect which fully he hauled himself up with his arms till he could obtain a convenient point of view. The mummies are also much admired by the Chinese, but it is difficult to bring them to believe fully in their antiquity.

MR. GLADSTONE AND RAJAH BROOKE.

The subjoined letter has been addressed to The Times by Vice-Admiral Farquhar :—

It is with extreme reluctance that I again ask the favour of a small space in the columns of The Times, but the reputation of a naval officer is as dear to him as is that of Mr. Gladstone to him, and I cannot rest under the imputation conveyed in his reply to Lord Grey's letter of having, in July, 1849, conduced to the useless and wanton slaughter of Dyaks without giving the assertion the most widespread denial. Mr. Gladstone's words are (speaking of the destruction of the piratical flotilla)—"Instead of a severe and protracted battle, my recollection is of a large, easy, unsparing slaughter, either without resistance or after resistance had ceased." Very briefly I beg to narrate what actually occurred, and, having been in command, I can speak with authority and with certainty. The European forces under my command, acting in concert with Sir James Brooke and the native allies, arrived off the mouths of the Botang Lupar and Kaluka rivers in July, 1849, with the intention (in accordance with my orders) of proceeding up those rivers to destroy the strongholds of the piratical communities of "Sarebas and Sakarren," but information having reached Sir James Brooke that a large piratical flotilla had left the rivers a day or two previously, and proceeded along the coast on a plundering and head-hunting expedition, we determined to intercept the pirates and punish them returning red-handed from slaughter. Accordingly, we guarded the entrances of the river (the highways to the strongholds of the pirates), and on the evening of, I think, the third day, after dusk, the flotilla was reported approaching the rivers. Immediately we were discovered in position, the pirates seemed to hold a short consultation, and then pushed boldly forward, and it was in barring their progress that a considerable number of them were killed. Two thousand at least ran their prahus on shore and made for the jungle, encountering the native allies on the beach, where a hand-to-hand fight ensued. Another division of the flotilla met the European force, and several prahus, with their crews, were destroyed. Instantly the fight was over orders were issued to stay pursuit, it being in our power to have cut off almost to a man the body of pirates who had escaped into the jungle. On the beach were found ghastly trophies of the expedition in the shape of mutilated and headless trunks of a woman and of other captives. Thus was a severe punishment inflicted on these pirates without much loss of life on our side, and without having to inflict misery on helpless women and children, such as attacking the strongholds would have produced. From close intimacy and friendship with the Rajah, Sir James Brooke, I am in a position to assert that a more truly humane man never lived. The greater portion of his life was devoted to trying to ameliorate the condition of the poor and simple Dyaks, whom he loved, and by whom he was beloved, but with the piratical communities, who were a curse to Borneo, he had no sympathy. I never knew him to commit any one act approaching to cruelty, and he stayed the hands of the native allies from shedding blood when they had much to avenge. Mr. Gladstone is powerful ; let him also be just and withdraw expressions which taint the memory of the dead and the character of the living."

To the above letter Mr. Gladstone has replied as follows :—

When Mr. Baillie Cochrane put to me in the House of Commons a question, framed with excellent judgment, I assured him that in my view the whole responsibility of these proceedings had been assumed by the Government, and more especially by the Parliament, at home ; and I added that Sir James Brooke enjoyed, to my knowledge, the respect and confidence of many excellent persons. When Lord Grey made a lengthened statement of the case from his point of view, I was contented with a few words, describing my own recollection, in reply. Had Admiral Farquhar confined himself to giving his version of the facts, I should have remained silent. Nor have I taken any public notice of the letter of a Bishop who describes me, in print on this occasion, as a reckless calumniator. But Admiral Farquhar calls upon me to withdraw the expressions I have used. Gladly would I do so upon cause shown. Most reluctant am I to enter largely into the case, for many reasons, of which the labour and inconvenience it will entail upon me are the smallest. But I cannot consent to stand before the world as a man who makes an accusation and then declines either to substantiate or to withdraw it. So soon, therefore, as I may be able, after returning to town in the beginning of June, I intend to re-examine and state publicly the whole case, which may possibly exceed the limits of any letter you could admit to your columns. I shall not fail to abandon my former conclusion if I find it untenable. But I am bound to say that, so far as I can judge from a partial review, this is not likely to be the result of the stringent challenge I have received:

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S REPORT.

In anticipation of the half-yearly meeting to be held on the 5th June, the directors beg to submit their report for the six months of the present financial year, which commenced on the 1st October last. As the proprietors are aware, this meeting is held for the purpose of receiving this report, and also when the operations of the period admit of it, for declaring an interim dividend in anticipation of the results of the year's working, the accounts of which are submitted in December.

THE FLEET.

The table prefixed to this report contains the usual particulars of the fleet.

Since the last report was issued, the Columbian has been sold. This vessel had been twice bought into the company's service, having been disposed of by the company in 1864, and re-purchased in 1866 at a time of great urgency. She had in the meantime been re-constructed, improved, and supplied with new machinery, but so rapid and extensive have been the changes in the company's work during the past few years that ships of the Columbian's stamp are no longer equal to it, and would not repay the cost of alterations for that purpose.

The directors have, for a similar reason, been compelled to lay up several other vessels, some of which were built comparatively a few years ago, and which were then well adapted for carrying on the business of the company. The proprietors do not need to be reminded that the Suez Canal completely altered the conditions of the company's carrying trade (upon which they depend for four-fifths of their revenue), and thus rendered obsolete a considerable portion of the fleet. Such vessels as the directors could clearly see their way to modernise sufficiently to meet the standard of the present day they have dealt with in that manner; but other ships, from the fact of being constructed with very fine lines, expressly for the mail service, are incapable of being converted into thoroughly efficient steamers of the type now required. It is the best policy, therefore, to dispose of such vessels as opportunity offers.

The Australia, which at the date of the last report was receiving new boilers, and an extensive overhaul, has completed a very satisfactory voyage to Calcutta. This vessel was the first steamer built by the company with engines on the latest high and low pressure principle, but in the boilers recently supplied to her the steam pressure has bee n greatly increased with marked additional economy.

The Hindostan, which has been receiving new machinery and other improvements under the hands of Messrs. Day and Co., is expected to be ready to recommence work next month. The directors recently invited tenders from a number of eminent firms for the construction of a new steamer of upwards of 4,000 tons, and the lowest offer—that of Messrs. Caird and Co.—was accepted. The present condition of the iron trade has enabled the directors to make this contract on favourable terms. This vessel, to be named the Kaiser-i-Hindi (the title assumed by the Queen as Empress of India), will be the largest and fastest steamer as yet built for the company, and will be fitted with every improvement to adapt her for her future work. The directors are happy to add that during the past six months the services of the company have been carried on with the utmost regularity, and without a mishap of any kind worth noticing either to ships or machinery.

INSURANCE—LONDON AND SOUTHAMPTON.

Following the example of last year, the directors have ceased to effect any outside insurance on the fleet between London and Southampton for the summer months, reserving their decision as regards the winter insurance till further on. The proprietors will therefore note that this, in common with the other sea risks, is at present insured by the company as their own underwriters.

ITALIAN MAIL CONTRACT.

The contract with the Italian Government for the service between Venice, Ancona, and Brindisi, which is worked in connection with the English Mail Service between Brindisi and Alexandria, was secured for a period of six years, expiring in February next. The directors for some time past have been endeavouring to secure the extension of this contract, the payment for which is 500,000 lire, Italian currency, or about £20,000 sterling, for a further period of two years from 1878, so as to bring it into harmony in point of duration with the English contract. The efforts of the company's representatives, supported by the influence and goodwill of the Venetian community, have at length been successful in securing this object, and an enactment has just passed the Italian Parliament enabling the Government to renew this contract for a further period of two years from February, 1878, on the conditions at present existing. As the Italian people are vigorously and successfully endeavouring to foster their own mercantile marine, they entertain a very natural jealousy of any pecuniary arrangements in favour of a foreign flag. The fact of this contract being obtained will therefore be gratifying to proprietors as an evidence of the appreciation felt in Italy of the company's services in connection with the trade of Venice.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN HENRY.

The importance of Bombay as the company's principal station in the East requires that the appointment of superintendent there should always be held by an officer of proved ability, experience and integrity. These qualifications were possessed in a rare degree by Captain George Fitzgerald Henry, who, moreover, combined with them an amount of personal tact and public spirit which rendered him not only an excellent and popular manager in the company's service, but a most valuable citizen in the community among whom he lived. Captain Henry lost his life suddenly by being thrown from the carriage in which he was driving to the company's dockyard at Mazagon, on the 23rd February last, and the directors take this opportunity of recording their deep sorrow at this event, and their sense of the loss of an invaluable officer, who had spent thirty years in the service of the company.

DEBENTURES.

Since the last report was issued the directors have paid off further debentures, amounting to £70,500. This reduces the original debenture debt of £800,000 to £565,000. As the financial arrangements of the company at present stand, the directors hope to pay off a further amount of debentures during the year, without being immediately obliged to replace the same by debenture stock which they hold authority to issue.

OPERATIONS OF THE HALF-YEAR—DIVIDEND.

During the period now under review the competition which the company's vessels have to contend against has certainly not been slackened, and in some quarters it has even been increased. Nor, as proprietors are no doubt fully aware, has there been any steady revival of business; on the contrary, the apprehensions excited by the warlike situation of Europe have tended to impose caution and restriction in almost every branch of trade. Nevertheless, there have been occasional glimpses of improvement in one direction or another, and the greater capacity of the company's fleet has always told when such opportunities have occurred,—so that for the first time for three years the earnings show an advance on those of the corresponding period of the previous year. The demand for silver in the East at the same time accounts for the greater part of the increase, but, as this is always a fluctuating and uncertain source of revenue, the directors do not feel warranted in assuming that, in the very peculiar condition of European politics and their bearing on trade in general, the increase in revenue will be borne out by the whole year's working.

The directors are glad to say that the working expenses of the company show a decrease, in some measure owing to the fact that certain ships, which were not profitable, have been laid up. The directors now beg to recommend the payment of a dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, for the six months ended 31st March last. The warrants for this dividend will be payable on and after the 25th proximo.

MISSIONARIES AND MORALS IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I notice that you take exception to some remarks having been made by one of the speakers at the recent meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Society upon the moral conduct of the foreign residents in China, as being a hindrance to the spread of Christianity in that country. At the same time you do not deny that there are some grounds for complaint, and you admit that it is to be regretted that Sabbath-breaking in China is to be deplored. I have no more desire than you evince to be unduly severe upon residents in the Far East. I can make many excuses for their shortcomings, and regret that the absence of much that civilises and refines at home forms a temptation to a lax way of life, which is assuredly inadequately described as merely Sabbath-breaking. In order, however, to look upon other people's acts with charity we need not ignore plain facts, and I cannot see that those Missionaries are to be blamed who speak plainly on such subjects. I would appeal to any reasonable and sober-minded person at home whether there is not very much that requires correcting in the way of life in China. Of late years matters have improved, and I only trust that with the abandonment of much of the old luxury and extravagance, we shall find some of the want of self-restraint and the recklessness which have gained so unenviable a reputation for China residents abandoned likewise. There has been improvement in this direction, and I pray that it may continue; but in the meantime I can hardly consider it would be right, even if it were politic, as you urge it might be, for Missionaries to shut their mouths to things upon which they cannot shut their eyes or their ears. In conclusion, Sir, permit me to say that your remark that "Missionaries hold so much aloof that they are unable to put into force the very salutary influence (upon the European residents) which it would otherwise be in their power to exert" is scarcely warranted by at least the ordinary run of facts. Certainly so far as my experience goes it is the communities in the East who hold aloof from the Missionaries more than the Missionaries from them. The quiet way of life which Missionaries have of necessity to adopt as compared with others is little to the taste of the large majority of people, and Missionaries, however well educated, or however well informed, are seldom looked upon by the self-satisfied residents in China as gentlemen who have a right to be treated at least on an equality. If this habit be done away with, I do not think that as a rule Missionaries in China will be found indisposed to mix with the foreign communities; and I fully agree with you that their doing so could not fail to be beneficial.—Your obedient servant,

T.

A YACHTING VOYAGE ROUND THE WORLD.

Mr. Thomas Brassey, M.P., has published a very interesting account of his voyage in the yacht Sunbeam, which shows that he has made good use of opportunities for making "notes." The voyage is certainly the most complete thing ever accomplished in yachting experience. Mr. Brassey says:—

The expedition is in some respects unprecedented; a circumnavigation of 35,400 miles has never before been made in the short period of forty-six weeks, from which must be deducted 112 days of well-earned repose in harbour. We had, it is true, the advantage of steam, without which such a performance would have been an impossibility; but we travelled 20,517 miles under sail alone, and the consumption of coal has not exceeded 350 tons. The Sunbeam sailed from Cowes on the 6th of July, called at Torbay, Madeira, Teneriffe, and the Cape Verds, crossed the Line on the 8th of August, and, carrying a favourable breeze in the south-east trades, without even a momentary lull, a distance of 2,500 miles, arrived at Rio Janeiro on the 17th of August. Following the coasts of South America, we visited Montevideo, Buenos Acres, and Ensenada, steamed through the Straits of Magellan and Smyth's Channel, and reached Valparaiso on the 21st of October. While on the coast of Patagonia it was our privilege to rescue a crew of fifteen hands from the barque Monk's Haven, laden with an inflammable cargo of smelting coals, which had been on fire six days, when we most providentially descried her signals of distress.

On the 30th October we commenced our long and lonely voyage of 12,330 miles across the Pacific. We touched at Bow Island in the Low Archipelago, Maitea and Tahiti in the Society Islands, and Hawaii and Ohau in the Sandwich group. On the 21st January we sighted Assumption in the Ladrones, and on the 29th arrived at Yokohama. While in Japan we were present at the opening of the railway from Osaka to Kioto by the Mikado, and subsequently cruised in the Inland Sea in severe wintry weather. At Simonoseki we found the people much agitated by the recent outbreak of the Satsuma clan. On the 19th February we bade a reluctant farewell to Japan, and, following the most direct route to England, visited in succession Hong Kong, Canton, Macao, Singapore, Johore, Malacca, Penang, Galle, Colombo, Aden, Alexandria, Malta, Gibraltar, and Lisbon.

Having given the principal dates, the story of the voyage will be most rapidly completed by entering our successive passages in a tabular statement:—

Having sketched the voyage in outline, the following details may not be devoid of interest to readers with nautical tastes.

Every yachtsman should be a lover of sailing. In the cruise of the Sunbeam, although expedition was an essential consideration, steam has been used almost exclusively in calm or in narrow waters, or when, as it has often happened, we have sailed at sunset after a hard day's work on board, intending to make an offing during the night and set sails in the morning. Of the total distance of 15,000 knots under steam, 12,000 were traversed under those special circumstances which seemed to justify even a yachtsman in availing himself of the unromantic but invaluable engine. The best run under steam alone was 230 knots, and the most successful continuous performance was on the passage from Penang to Galle, in the week ending the 15th of April, when the Sunbeam steamed1, 451 knots, with a daily consumption of 4¼ tons of coal. The best runs under sail from noon were 298 and 299 knots respectively, The first was on the passage from Honolulu to Yokohama, sailing along the 16th paralled of north latitude, and between 163deg. and 168deg. 15min. east. The second was in the Formosa Channel.

The highest speed ever attained under sail was 15 knots in a squall in the North Pacific.

On 28 days the distance under sail alone has exceeded, and often considerably exceeded, 200 knots.

The best consecutive runs under sail only were:—

I. Week ending 13th of August, South Atlantic. In the south-east trades, wind abeam, force 5—1,456 knots.

II. Week ending 19th November, South Pacific, south-east trades, wind aft, force 5—1,360 knots.

III. Four days, 15th to 18th of January, North Pacific, north-east trades, wind on the quarter, force 5 to 9—1,027 knots. The average speed in this case was 10·7 knots an hour.

The following were the average speeds of the longer passages:—

	Days at sea.	Total distance. Miles.	Distance under steam. Miles.	Daily average. Miles.
1. Cape Verd to Rio	18	3,336	689	185
2. Valparaiso and Yokohama	72	12,338	2,108	171
3. Simonoseki to Aden	37	6,931	4,577	187

The vessel which has carried us so rapidly and safely round the globe claims a brief description. She was designed by Mr. St. Clare Byrne, of Liverpool, and may be technically defined as a composite three-masted topsailyard screw schooner. The engines, by Messrs. Laird, are of 70 nominal or 350 indicated horse-power, and developed a speed of 10·13 knots on the measured mile. The bunkers contain eigkty tons of coal. The average daily consumption is four tons, and the speed eight knots in fine weather. The principal dimensions of the hull are:—Length for tonnage, 157ft.; beam, extreme 27ft. 6in.; displacement tonnage, 531 tons; area of midship section, 202 square feet. With an addition of 20ft. to the length, and more engine power, the Sunbeam presents a type which might be found efficient for naval services in distant waters, where good sailing qualities are essential, and large ships are not required. On looking back, and contrasting the anticipated difficulties with the actual experiences of the voyage, the ease and certainty with which every passage has been made are truly surprising. Our track has been for the most part within the Tropics. The storms off the Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn have been avoided in the inland passages of the Straits of Magellan and the Suez Canal. We have encountered no continuous stormy weather, except during the four days preceding our arrival at Yokohama. We have suffered discomfort from heat and detention in calms, but storms have disturbed us seldom, and they have not lasted long.

Our experience of gales include a north-east gale off Cape Finisterre, on the outward voyage; a northerly gale between Rio and the River Plate, a westerly gale off the east coast of Patagonia, short but severe gales on each of the four days preceding our arrival at Yokohama, a severe gale from the north-west in the Inland Sea, a north-east gale in the Formosa Channel, a northerly gale in the Straits of Jubal, a westerly gale off Port Said, and an easterly gale on the south coast of Candia. On the passage homewards from Gibraltar we met strong northerly winds on the coast of Portugal, and a north-east gale off Cape Finisterre.

The navigation has presented few difficulties. All the coasts that we have visited have been surveyed. Lighthouses are now as numerous and efficient on the coasts of China and Japan as on the shores of Europe. Such is the perfection of the modern chronometer that lunar observations, the only difficult work in ocean navigation, are no longer necessary; and the wind charts published by the Admiralty supply to the amateur navigator accumulated information and valuable hints for every stage of his voyage. How infinitely easy is the task of the modern circumnavigator compared with the hazardous explorations of Magelhaens and Captain Cook, when the chronometer was an instrument of rude and untrustworthy quality, when there were no charts, and the roaring of the breakers in the dead of night was the mariner's first warning that a coral reef was near! Our comprehensive and varied cruise has strengthend my former convictions that the disasters due to negligence bear a large proportion to the number of inevitable losses. Every coast is dangerous to the careless commander; but there are no frequented seas where, with the exercise of caution and reasonable skill, the dangers cannot be avoided. These remarks do not, of course, apply to cases of disaster from stress of weather. In fogs there must be delay, though not necessarily danger. I am bound to commend the efficiency of our Consular Service in the remotest outposts of civilisation which we have visited; and evidences of good colonial administration are abundantly manifested at Hong Kong, Singapore, Penang, Ceylon, and Aden, in the prosperity and contentment of the people.

HAMBURG, MAY 29.

We are in full Spring now, trees and flowers are in full blossom, and the approaching hot season is already making itself perceptible; the wealthy classes take to their country seats or are preparing for the baths; the City Theatre on Thurday next will give its last performance before the vacation, and the city will soon be in that dead state which signifies the summer.

In the upper Baltic circumstances are still very dull; at St. Petersburg fearful masses of ice have come down from the great Ladoga lake, and the newly-opened shipping has again been closed by barriers of ice that have accumulated in the river. At Cronstadt vessels can arrive, but are unable to get their cargoes, which have to be brought down by barges from the capital, to which the road now is blocked up by ice. The losses incurred by shipping through demurrage are very considerable. By a report received here to-day the Merchants Union at St. Petersburg has issued a publication announcing that the official opening of the shipping at St. Petersburg has not yet taken place, a fact of great importance upon the made contracts for the delivery of cargoes to the arriving vessels. The northern part of the Gulf of Bothnia also is reported full of ice, and shipping will reopen there unusually late.

In room of the deceased senator Dr. Gossler, Dr. Sieveking has been selected as a member of our executive power. Although such a selection is regarded as the greatest honour one can obtain here at Hamburg, still it sometimes involves very considerable losses to the selected, who is not further allowed to follow his former practice and occupation. Dr. Sieveking, although rather a young man, hitherto was very much employed as an advocate, and had an income certainly three times larger than the salary of a senator.

Rear-Admiral Batsch yesterday at Wilhelmshaven hoisted his pendant on board of the ironclad Deutschland. The squadron under command of this very active and experienced officer consists of the ironclads Deutschland, Kaiser, Preussen and Friedrich Carl, and the despatch boat Falke; it was to leave to-day for up Straits, for a cruise in the Mediterranean. The German corvette Victoria on the 27th of March left Gibraltar for the eastern Mediterranean; the Gazelle (corvette) and the two gunboats Comet and Pommerania will join the squadron after its arrival in the Mediterranean, and the whole fleet then will be on the alert to take care of the interest as well of the German as the Russian subjects on Turkish territory, the Russians in Turkey, as you will remember, at present being under the protection of Germany.

Prince Bismark's unexpected return to Berlin has been followed by a number of conferences with the Emperor and the Russian Ambassador at Berlin, and, although the topics taken into consideration on this occasion are not made known, the public opinion will not be very wrong in believing questions of great political importance have been decided. On Thursday evening the Imperial Chancellor went to Kissingen, Bavaria, accompanied by his family, to drink the waters there.

The Emperor sent delegates to Vienna in order to discuss with the Austrian and Hungarian authorities the conditions of a new commercial treaty between the two empires; but the Austrian Ministers demanding such stipulations which could not be granted by a free trading Government, our delegates have been called back to Berlin. In consequence of this circumstance, Count Andrassy has made several concessions, and now our delegates are ordered to return to the Austrian metropolis on the 5th and 6th of next month for a new conference of probably better result.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

In spite of the Whitsuntide holidays forming the first part of the past week, transactions in some articles have been of considerable extent as with the gradually approaching warm season a good consumption demand sets in for all northern ports.

COFFEE.—Business during the first days of the past week has been a quiet one; afterwards it became very buoyant, because buyers tried to seize all cheap lots, and values went higher, in consequence of the higher prices paid in the Maatschappy auction, held on Thursday, at Rotterdam. STOCKS AND SHARES.

In consequence of the approaching settlement and the political disturbances in France transactions have been of no importance during the past week, but the tendency has in general been a firm one, although it must be taken in mind that the settlement has had the most influence, as for the higher quotations of to-day in comparison with last Tuesday.

SHIPPING.

During the first week of the past fortnight the trade on the river side was unusually lively, and arrivals as well as departures were very numerous; of late, though, they have taken off again. Of arrivals from the Far East we can name the Hesperia, s.s., Johannsen, from China, vid Singapore and Penang; Melpomene, Molsen, from Rangoon; Conrad Hinrich, Schueler, from Papeite; Eastern Empire, Ferguson, from Malden Island; Parana, Lane, from Hong Kong; Prinz Albert, Hoepfner, from Levuka; Fanoe, Norby, and Feiga, Chistiansen, both from Hong Kong. Of departures only two are to be reported, namely, the Casilda, Johnsen, for Apia; and Meteor, Dinokelberg, for Hong Kong. Of vessels on the berth are to be named Hesperia, s s., for the usual route to Penang, Singapore, &c.; Louise and Georgine Gosau, for Singapore and Penang; Cordelia, Williams, for Batavia; Walter Siegfried, Stolp, for Manila; Marco Polo, Jaeger, Rhuddlan Castle, Richards, and Niagara, Wischhusen, for Hong Kong; Adolph, Hupfer, for Shanghai; and Johann Wieghorst, Heyanga, for Japan; Fritz Reuter, Peyn, for Rockhampton (Australia); and Humboldt, Busch, for Brisbane.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, MAY 30.

The papers are filled up with particulars about the forthcoming elections for Members of the Second Chamber of the States General. It looks as if we are about to have once more the old parties, the old cries, the old measures, the old leaders, the old tactics, and, with a few exceptions, the old men. On every side it is assured that the new Parliament will be very much like its predecessor. Only, if I am correct in my estimates, I should like to say that the Liberals will become a more, a very decided majority in the new Parliament, and it may be that this majority of the House will be united on behalf of a clear and definite programme, and will be compelled to adhere together so long as the Lower Class Instruction question remains undecided. Without joining in all the abuse that has been levelled at the Premier I dare to say that the Heemskerk regime will soon be done with. The spectacle of a Ministry maintained in office by adroitness of tactics—of a minority ruling because the majority could never summon up courage to assert its supremacy, of a party sacrificing the one principle after the other, tradition after tradition, to retain power—this is a state of things which cannot any longer be endured. At all events, the present era of unworthy compromise will come to an end with approaching appeal to the country; and for that, if for no other cause, the majority can look cheerfully towards the immediate future.

The Members of the First Chamber met for the despatch of business. They have voted several Bills that were approved by the Second Chamber.

I regret that I have to state that her Majesty, our most beloved Queen, has been attacked by a serious illness, which causes earnest fears for her life. The tenor of the latest telegrams were, however, somewhat better, and so much is certain that his Majesty, who resides on his seat "het Loo," has not yet returned to the Hague; he will even start to-morrow to Harlingen in order to attend the festivals to inaugurate the new harbour works.

According to the Handelsblad, within a few days several officers of our army will be pensioned, whilst in the same time a promotion will take place.

The issue of the new loan in behalf of the Netherlands-India Gas Company has been crowned with a complete success. An amount of five millions was subscribed, whilst only 1,200,000 guilders were wanted.

On the 25th of this month a meeting was held by the shareholders of the Java Steam Shipping Company. The results of the last booking year seemed to be satisfactory. One of the steamers, the Borneo, that could not give any more profits, was sold. The treaty which was concluded with the Company Nederland proved to be satisfactory. A dividend was declared of 2½ per cent.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The market for Colonial Produce was very calm; the transactions by private tender and public sales have given a satisfactory result.

COFFEE.—On the last sale of the Dutch Trading Company most of the lots offered were sold above the brokers' valuation, viz., the white sorts at 1½c. to 2½c., the yellowish 1c. to 1½c., greenish ½c. to 1½c. The article looks very healthy, and the general opinion is that prices will go up.

RAW SUGAR.—The trade is very limited, though full prices are still paid. The offers are very trifling. The very low prices of the beetroot sugar mark the attention actually.

TOBACCO (JAVA).—A very limited business was done here. Only some couple of hundred bags changed hands, at prices that did not transpire. The stock includes 19,556 bs. Java, 7,294 bs. Sumatra, 3,400 bs. Manila and 3,000 bs. East India.

COTTON looks dull; prices are much declining.

SPICES.—Some demand prevailed for Nutmegs and Mace; even large quantities were bought for export. Cloves without demand. Pepper somewhat firmer, in consequence of a demand for export.

RICE meets with a good demand. 4,952 bs. Kandanghauer and 4,805 bs. Indramayoe were sold at firm prices, the particulars of which did, however, not transpire.

DRUGS.—On the 1st of June the Trading Company will sell large quantities of articles under this head.

RATTANS dull; only 70 piculs ex Conrad were sold.

JAVA INDIGO.—About 70 chests were sold at unaltered prices.

TIN looks enormously dull. Of Banca nothing was sold, and of Billiton some trifling lots at f.41⅜.

HIDES met with a lively demand; about 15,000 ps. East India were sold by private tender.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 63 11-16; do. Three per Cent., 76; do. Four per Cent., 100 1-16; Dutch Trading Company, 106; Netherlands-India Trading Bank, 125; do. The Bourse was calm and the transactions were very limited. The trade looked, however, healthier. The Money Market was well provided, but somewhat dearer.

Monetary and Commercial.

In our last number we noted the departure of the steamers Loudoun Castle and Gleneagles from Woosung, on the 25th ult., and since then advices have been received of the Glenartney and Tartar passing Woosung on the 28th and 30th ulto. respectively, and the Deucalion leaving Foochow on the 23rd, at which latter place, as noted below, the market opened much earlier than was anticipated. There are thus over 12,000,000 lbs. of the new season's teas afloat, in steamers, which will arrive here all within a week of one another, and will be a very severe test of the strength of this market. It is evident that there has been a rush of the old kind at the opening; but it is satisfactory to note that by the last accounts there was a decided lull, as, indeed, might well be expected after the large purchases made, amounting as they do to the settlement in a week of four times the consumption here. Importers generally express disappointment at the amount purchased, and the prices paid; but it may be hoped that the lull reported will continue. The probability, however, is that upon any material fall in the prices in China a large number of buyers, excluded by their limits from operating at the opening, will rush in, and further large supplies be sent forward. There is no doubt that the opening rates have been discountenanced on this side, and that orders to continue operations at anything like present prices will not be sent forward.

The Foochow Market opened with a brisk tone, and telegrams dated the 30th ult. state that settlements to the amount of about 40,000 chests, including Paklings, had been made. The opening prices were on an average Tls. 3 below those of last year. The early opening of the market at Foochow has no doubt taken buyers in the North by surprise, and has probably been, to some extent, the cause of the lull which has taken place.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London last week (five days, Whit-Monday being excluded) was 2,972,723 lbs., of which 1,827,830 lbs. was for home consumption, 557,235 lbs. was removed coastwise, 462,956 lbs. was exported, 121,710 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 2,992 lbs. was for ships' stores, while during the same period the amount received as duty was £45,696. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week:—Coffee, 673,231 lbs.; cocoa, 68,866 lbs.; tobacco, 348,254 lbs.; cigars, 12,714 lbs.; wine, 139,744 gallons; brandy, 25,878 gallons; and rum, 27,735 gallons.

The reports of the likelihood of a short crop of silk both on the Continent and in China are confirmed by the latest accounts. From Milan telegrams have been received stating that the weather continues unsettled, and that complaints increase respecting the fourth stage of the worms. The latest Shanghai telegrams report that the crop of Hangchows, as well as that of Hainings, is likely only to be half of the average.

In the Produce Markets extreme quietude has been the prevailing feature. As is usual during the "Derby week," public sales have been almost entirely suspended, and the course of business generally has been greatly interrupted. Coffee has become dull, owing to heavy supplies, and has receded in value. Sugar continues dull, and there have been no transactions in East Indian descriptions. Rice is unsaleable, except upon easier terms, which sellers decline to accept. The supply of Cinnamon at the quarterly sales went off at an advance for low and medium kinds, but a slight decline for fine quality. Tin is again lower, Straits being quoted £69 to £69 10s., Banca £72 10s., Billiton £70 per ton. The Dutch sale has gone off at an average of 42½ guilders.

The following are the latest quotations of Banking and other Companies connected with the Far East:—Agra Bank, 10¾ to 11¼; Chartered Bank of India, 18½ to 19½; Chartered Mercantile Bank, 26 to 27; Comptoir D'Escompte, f.645; Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, 29 to 31; Oriental Bank, 43 to 44; P. and O. Company, 38 to 40; Messageries Maritimes, f.617½; Suez Canal, f.636¼; Japan Loan 9 per cent., 105 to 108; ditto, 7 per cent., 103 to 105; China Loan, 103 to 105 (buyers at 103).

A correspondent writes as follows on the subject of China Loans:—

I observe with pleasure that you have called attention in your article upon Mr. Hart's Circular concerning the Chinese loans to what is undoubtedly the most important point in connection with them, but one which is very likely to be overlooked at home, where we have nothing at all parellel to the divided authority in the Government as represented on the one hand by the Peking officials, and, on the other, by the Provincial authorities. As you point out, we cannot assume as a matter of course that any loan in regard to which the local authorities have been the immediate negotiators has the sanction of the Imperial Government; and it is very desirable that some steps should be taken to make it clear in all cases, whether a loan set on foot in China is one made on the authority only of a local official or one for which the Peking Government hold themselves responsible. The divided authority existing in China extends to matters of finance as well as to other affairs. It is perhaps one of the most troublesome lements with which we have to deal; and is at the bottom of much of the difficulty connected with transit dues, lekin taxes, &c.

With reference to the notice in our last of the suspension of Messrs. van Oordt and Co., of Yokohama and London, a circular has been issued by Messrs. Lawrance, Plews and Co., that a statement of affairs will shortly be submitted to the creditors.

The directors of Reuter's Telegram Company report that the net profits for the year ending the 31st December last, after payment of current charges, and deducting rebate on unexpired subscriptions, amount to £3,820, including £28 brought forward from the last account. The liquidation consequent on the dissolution of the joint-purse agreement referred to in the last report has rendered it necessary to provide for losses amounting to £6,887. The moiety of this amount falling to the company's share the directors have charged to the reserve fund, on account of its exceptional character. An interim dividend of 2½ per cent. was paid in October last, and the directors now declare a further dividend of 4s. per share, equal to 2½ per cent., free of income-tax, making a total distribution of 5 per cent. for the year, and leaving £122 to be carried forward. The directors regret that the adoption of the word-tariff by the Petersburg Telegraph Convention has adversely affected the profits derived from the transmission of private telegrams. They have confidence, however, that the measures in progress to augment the revenue from other sources will have favourable results in the future.

At the approaching meeting of the Suez Canal Company a dividend of f.3. 55½c. will be recommended, making, with the usual interest, f.28. 55½c. for the year, as compared with f.26. 88c. in 1875.

The Governor and Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company announce that the result of the company's business for the year ending 31st May will not justify their recommending a dividend at the approaching meeting. Their report will be issued along with the annual accounts as soon as the latter are passed by the company's auditor.

Since the allotment of the India Council bills at a further decline the price of Bar Silver has fallen to 53⅝d., and that of Mexican Dollars to 54½d. per oz.

The P. and O. Company's steamer Nepaul, which was despatched from Southampton yesterday, has on board specie to the amount of £249,730, including £200 in gold for Galle, and in silver, £14,900 for Penang, £7,350 for Singapore, £37,700 for Hong Kong, and £48,800 for Shanghai.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—We have to report a very dull and inanimate market during the past week, and there is little prospect of any improvement as long as weekly public sales supply current requirements at very low rates, and telegrams from China assure the trade of a very full supply of new season's Teas from Hankow and Foochow at the beginning of July. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings are firm, the supply being small; common to good common are fairly saleable at the low current quotations; fair to medium and fine are without alteration. Pak Lin kinds are unchanged. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common sell slowly at very low rates; fair to medium have been forced off at low prices, merchants wishing to close invoices; good to fine are now in small supply and without inquiry. New-make Congous: Several parcels of new season's have been forced off at auction without reserve, resulting in a decline of 1d. to 1½d. per lb. in the value of common to fair quality, common new season's selling at 9½d. to 10¾d., and fair to good at 11½d. to 1s. 2½d. In Oolongs and Souchongs business has been small at previous rates. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers have been realised at auction without reserve at low rates, common selling at 10½d. per lb., and fair to good at 11d. to 1s. 1d. per lb. Orange Pekoes are difficult of sale at about former prices. Green Teas.—Transactions have been unimportant, and prices tend in favour of buyers. The public sales have comprised 16,034 packages, nearly the whole of which were printed and sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

	1877. lbs.	1876. lbs.
Coastwise...	688,617	636,346
	3,509,234	3,138,366

Mr. D. D. Lewin's Market Résumé says:—Our market keeps very quiet, and throughout the past month it has worn an inanimate appearance; privately, business continues much restricted; public sales also have been on a more limited scale. It is hardly possible that any life or animation will now be manifested until the arrival of the New Crop Tea, which may be expected in London about the 5th proximo. It is satisfactory to know that buyers at Hankow are operating this season more cautiously.

SILK.

Messrs. Hogg, Walker, and Co.'s Circular says:—During the past month only a small business has been done in Raw and Thrown Silk, and the deliveries of the former are again disappointing; prices, however, show some improvement on the depressed rates ruling a fortnight or three weeks ago, and latterly there have not been wanting indications of an improved demand. Telegrams from China estimate the new season's crop at 55,000 bales, and report opening prices in the interior 22s. to 22s. 6d. for Blue Elephant class. Advices from the Continent are, as usual, of a conflicting nature, but it is generally admitted that the crop will not exceed two-thirds of an average one. From Canton we hear the first crop will produce about 1,500 bales of an inferior quality to last year, and that prices of Market No. 4, which opened at 12s., have since advanced to 13s. 6d. The deliveries for the month are 2,118 bales, against 2,302 bales last month, and 4,172 bales in May, 1876.

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Circular says:—The position of Silk is scarcely less unsatisfactory than at the date of our last Circular on the 1st May. The deliveries are very small—we fear beyond any mere influence of holidays—marking continued partial working of mills and looms. During the month there have been daily reports of something more than usual doubts and uncertainties as to European crop, and in the middle of the month telegraphic reports of comparatively small estimates of supply from China, backed by orders to purchase in this market, of no great extent probably, still marking faith in the estimates. The effect of these reports was somewhat counteracted by the political move in France, but they were sufficient to raise the drooping courage of holders and to cause the withdrawal of sundry small parcels which were pressing upon the market. The business since done, as compared with some few sales of Tsatlels, China and Japan Silk that were made in the earlier days of the month, has been at an improvement in several cases of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per lb. Large purchases are also reported of manufactured goods, which, although it is said that they are at very low prices, must be trenching heavily upon stocks at the present reduced scale of production, and thus afford prospects of better things. The periodical public sales are fixed to commence on the 20th instant.

HIDES.—The sales again presented a liberal supply of China, for which an animated export demand existed, and, at current rates, which were equal on the average to those of last sale, the catalogues might have been cleared; the bought in portion was held above market value. ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

The tone of the market has been stronger, and producers have felt warranted in asking more money. The effect is still to check business, as neither in Yarns nor Goods do the majority of buyers seem inclined to advance their limits. There have been offers for considerable quantities at the late low prices, but without result, though finally there is more disposition to pay a slight advance, and some transactions have been carried through. Altogether the market has gained strength.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE GLASGOW SHIPWRIGHTS' STRIKE.—There is not the slightest indication of a termination of the struggle between the Clyde shipbuilders and their employers. The ranks of those on strike have been swelled by 1,300, making fully 8,000 now idle. The effects are beginning to tell on the shopkeeping community in the various districts, money being very scarce. The Executive of the Blacksmiths' Association of Scotland have agreed to allow their members who have been locked out strike allowance. Nearly 100 ships are lying unfinished in the river for want of shipwrights.

THE P. and O. Company's steamer Hindostan, which has recently had new engines and boilers, at the yard of Messrs. Summers and Day, Southampton, took her trial trip on the 28th ult. Everything worked satisfactorily, the average speed attained being fourteen knots. She leaves Southampton with the usual mails on the 7th inst.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

THE Rev. T. RICHARD, of Chefoo, whose communications have been recently referred to in the columns of The Times, writes as follows: "People of all ages die of actual starvation by thousands. This is no exaggeration. The famine extends over a district which includes at least 5,000 villages, and in these, taken together, I am certainly within the mark in saying that 500 die daily. Perhaps 1,000 may be within it. A few days ago I traversed the worst part. It is most heartrending. Can anything be done immediately at home? Friends in Chefoo have sent me $500. Shanghai and other places I have not heard from yet. The first steamer of the Spring is expected north to-day. Perhaps $1,000 more will be made up. Funds will save lives on to the end of May. It will be only charity after that. If you can do anything telegraph." Under date March 5 Mr. Richard says:—"I draw another £50 to-day, making in all £250. If I die before the year is out let my property here make up the deficiency, so long as I have anything to mortgage. I cannot abide the sight of people dying about me without giving them relief. Thousands upon thousands have perished already. Houses are pulled down in every village to sell the timber and thatch in order to get food. Those who can get husks and dry leaves ordinarily used for fuel are considered well off. Most of the poor young girls have been sold. Old men, middle aged, young men, and children die daily of sheer starvation, and others freeze. The dead cannot get a burial; they are too many, and none can afford the expense, so they are cast daily into large pits. Terrible."

The Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society have, by telegraph, advised Mr. Richard to draw £250 at once, and authorised the payment of a further sum of £250 if urgently needed.

CONTRIBUTIONS in aid of the Famine Relief Fund will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, Joseph Tritton, Esq., 19, Castle-street, Holborn, London, E.C., or by the bankers of the Society, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, Twells, and Co., 54, Lombard-street.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. T. COOPER,

In his celebrated TRAVELS IN CHINA, published in 1871, says:—

"I had with me in my travels a quantity of "Holloway's Ointment. I gave some to the people, "and nothing could exceed their gratitude: and, in "consequence—milk, fowls, butter, and horse-feed "poured in upon us, until at last a teaspoonful of "Ointment was worth a fowl and any quantity of "peas, and the demand became so great that I was "obliged to lock up the small remaining stock."

This fine OINTMENT is invaluable in the cure of BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, OLD SORES, wounds, ulcers, gout, rheumatism, and all skin diseases.

Summary of News from the Far East.

Affairs with reference to the opening of the new ports in China appear to be progressing quietly and satisfactorily. Letters from Wuhu, dated the 16th April, stated that a proclamation had been posted expressing strong satisfaction at the advent of foreigners to the port. Up to that time, however, not a single foreign merchant had ventured upon opening an establishment there. The United States steamer Monocacy has been up to Ichang, where the Commander and the United States Consul were received courteously by the officials, who offered their congratulations, and appeared to be actuated by very friendly feelings. Another satisfactory evidence of some tendency to advance has been given at Shanghai. For some time past there has been considerable speculation there with reference to the action likely to be taken by the Chinese authorities regarding the Woosung Railway. The engagements of the foreign employés were about to expire, and it was feared that at their expiration the railway itself might have been allowed to fall into disuse. The agreements have, however, been renewed for eighteen months, from which it is clear that the Chinese officials, in whose hands the control of the railway now is, are willing that it should continue open. This is the more satisfactory, as it does not appear that anything in the form of pressure has been resorted to to induce them to take this step, which has in fact been entirely of their own motion. The prospectus of the Chinese Insurance Company, which has been for some time past spoken of, has been issued; and a translation of the prospectus of the China Steam Navigation Company is published. Both documents are interesting, and afford a curious insight into the ideas of the Chinese both with respect to special business concerned and the nature and object of joint, stock association. A report had gained some currency to the effect that the starving Chinese had threatened to murder one of the Missionary gentlemen who had proceeded into the interior in order to aid them; but it was apparently a mere unconfirmed rumour when the mail left. The distress is still very appalling, and efforts both in China and in neighbouring places to aid the sufferers continued to be made with commendable energy. The "mourning" for the late Emperor is approaching its conclusion. A decree in the Peking Gazette of March 29 remarks that the customary three years have nearly elapsed; and that the time will soon arrive when the ceremonials of rejoicing should be entered on. But, the present Emperor being still of tender years, there are forms which it is impossible to carry into effect; and several of these will accordingly be dispensed with, while others will be observed in conformity with precedent.

In Hong Kong, H.E. Mr. Hennessy, the new Governor, has been installed. The cotton dealers' strike was said to be subsiding, but it was not at an end when the mail left. The case of Lembke v. the Oriental Bank is to be appealed to the Privy Council. Another armed attack has been made on Captain Sand's slip.

From the Straits Settlements, the Philippine Islands, and Java our Budget of news is but meagre. Cholera, occasioned by the drought and consequent scarcity of water, continues prevalent at Singapore. Two native seamen have been accidentally poisoned on board the steamer Edinburgh. A Commission has been appointed to arrange for the representation of the Straits Settlements at the Paris Exhibition. Captain A. R. Ord has been appointed to act as Postmaster-General. A balloon ascent has been successfully carried out at Batavia by an American aeronaut. Trade at Batavia was very dull. The schooner Willard G. Patton has been destroyed by fire. From Manila it is announced that brigandage has become rife in Luzon. The tobacco crop in some of the provinces was likely to be somewhat deficient, owing to drought.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The Daily News Correspondent writes under date of April 9th that the excitement with reference to the tail-cutting had nearly subsided, the firing of multitudes of crackers having proved efficacious as usual in driving away both sleep and public alarm. It was reported that the Empress Dowager expressly gave orders to relax the prohibition against the firing of crackers and petards, which had been in force for the last two years as part of the "national mourning;" H.M. observing that the prevalence of evil influences might be attributed to the long continued abstinence from this practice; and H.M.'s wisdom has been amply justified by the result.

There is a memorial in the Peking Gazette from the General commanding in the province of Kwangsi, that would afford a Meadows Taylor material for a novel. Born to poverty, on the seaboard, he borrowed a few Tls., in 1851, with a view to a little trading in the interior; but, instead, he got caught by the rebels, and was robbed of everything. Escaping after a fortnight's detention, he volunteered into the nearest Imperial force; and after fighting in many provinces, has reached his present position. But what was his astonishment, on receiving a copy of the official record of the suppression of the Taiping Rebellion, to find himself described as a rebel leader who had surrendered with his followers. He indignantly protests against such a disgrace being brought upon the spotless reputation of his ancestry, and, knowing that the printed record cannot be changed, suggests that the blunder be rectified by the falsification of a character in his name.—The "Properties," however, forbid compliance with his request, and he is told to rest and be thankful for the rewards he has earned. The memorialist has long been regarded with affection and honoured with distinguished rewards; the real facts are on record elsewhere; but "The archives of the rebellion were issued with the approval of the late Emperor, and it is out of the question that any alteration of the text should be hazarded."

TIENTSIN.

The North China Herald correspondent writes as follows, under date April 14:—

"A chapter of accidents," "it never rains but it pours," and other trite sayings, if we know any, of similar import, chase each other through one's mind, when one hears a series of accidents, or disasters, all at once, or occurring about the same time. Probably something like this passed through the minds of most of us on Tuesday last as the news of three unfortunate occurrences became known.

While training on the race course, preparatory to the spring races, the griffin which Mr. W. C. C. Anderson had just mounted, "bucked," lifting him some distance in the air, and sprung from under him. The result of the fall was a broken leg—a "clean" fracture however. Fortunately for the unfortunate rider, Dr. Frazer was on the ground, and the leg was at once set, and is doing well.

The Yung-ching in going down the river on her last trip collided with a junk, but I have been unable to learn any particulars. Will the facts become known and damage be paid in cases demanding it, by the steamers of this Company?

The other disaster is the total loss of the Serpent on the Shallatine Islands, with all her cargo, which consisted of ice. She had but just left Tientsin for Nagasaki. Shortly after clearing the bar, a dense fog settled down. The crew were coming up from breakfast to tack ship, the captain thinking they must be nearing the banks. A short time previous, the lead had shown ten fathoms. A slight scraping, and then, with the current and a stiff breeze blowing, she was hard aground. As her pumps bring up sand and shells, there is little doubt of her bottom being stove in. She is considered to be a total wreck. A tug-boat went out to save anything that was salvable. This reminds one anew of the lighthouse promised so many years ago. Is no one responsible for this?

There have been one or two hot days experienced of late, with changeable weather. A good deal of typhus and throat complaints prevail amongst the Chinese. The Hoppo of Canton and suite were to leave in the Pautah on the 15th. The Hoppo chartered her for $5,000. He sent word to Captain Patterson that he had heard six P.M. was a favourable time to start, and asked him to move the vessel a short distance on the way. To oblige him, she was dropped down about her own length.

CHEFOO.

The following extracts from a letter from Mr. Nevius describe the measures which he is taking for the relief of the sufferers in the district in which he is operating:—

"I have already enrolled over 20,000 names, from about seventy villages, and applications for aid from other villages are coming in so fast that it is with difficulty we can attend to them. They are so urgent that I cannot refuse them so long as I have hope of more funds. With the additional grant just received I shall increase my list to 50,000. To supply them the money on hand will last twenty-five days. Please let me know as soon as possible about what I may expect in the future, that I may know how to form my plans. I infer from Mr. Richard's letter that he has use for all the money he has on hand, in the vicinity of Ching-chin-foo, and that I am to look for further supplies to special grants sent to me personally.

"The tales of suffering which I hear every day are almost more than I can bear. Yesterday, coming back from a tour about thirty li from here, I met with two families on the road who had but just deserted their homes in the morning. Their only plan was to travel east, sell two girls they had with them, and then try to support life by begging. They said—'If we cannot beg enough to eat, we may as well starve abroad as at home.' When I promised them our daily allowance of 10 cash each, and to send men to the village to enrol the names of those who are left, they were delighted, and immediately returned home. There is a great deal of sickness in this region."

The Celestial Empire has the following:—A report reaches us from Chefoo that some of the starving Chinese in the interior have, in desperation, we suppose, turned upon the missionaries and attempted to murder one of them. We sincerely hope the rumour is a mistaken one. Business is getting a little more lively here now, writes a correspondent at that port. The weather is delightful, even rather too hot in the sun. The Taoutai's new yamen is finished, and a very handsome building it is. The United States Minister and Mrs. Seward passed up on the 13th en route for Peking, and the gunboat Lapwing, Captain Sir William Wiseman, arrived on the same day from Nagasaki, bound for Tientsin.

ICHANG.

A correspondent of the North China Daily News writes:—

On Thursday, the 15th March, the U.S.S. Monocacy, Commander Fyffe, left Hankow, having on board General Shepard, United States Consul for Hankow, Kiukiang, and Ichang, accompanied by Nelson E. Bryant, and F. H. B. Jenkins, acting as Interpreter, for the purpose of opening the port.

Nothing of importance occurred until the northern end of Sunday Island was reached, where only eight feet of water could be found; anchored and communicated with H.B.M. gunboat Kestrel, which was on shore about two miles further up the river. They advised a trial of the channel on the other side of the island, which was done, but without finding sufficient water to cross. After waiting eight days, the Monocacy returned to the old chrnnel, and got over on the 28th ult., and arrived at the Sha-Ssze on the next day, coaled and proceeded to Ichang, arriving on Sunday, April 1, just in time to see the Custom-house opened, which took place at 11.30 that day.

Monday, 2nd.—The General paid an official visit to the Taoutai, inside the city. On the following day, the Taoutai, Prefect, and Hsien returned the visit on board the Monocacy. On the 5th, General Shepard, accompanied by Messrs. Bryant, Jenkins, Commander Fyffe, and nine officers of the Monocacy landed and proceeded to the house prepared by the Taoutai for them, in front of which a flag-staff had been erected. After receiving the congratulations of the Taoutai and local officials, General Shepard presented Nelson E. Bryant to them, as acting U.S. Consular Agent for that port; all then proceeded to the flag-staff and the flag was hoisted, the amateur band of the Monocacy playing the "Star Spangled Banner," and a salute was fired from the steamer. The officials then went on board and partook of refreshments. Everything went off quietly.

General Shepard, accompanied by Mr. Jenkins, left Ichang on the 6th April, in a native boat, escorted by a Chinese gunboat, arriving in Hankow on the 14th.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 22nd April; the P. and O. mail from London March 2 was received on the 15th April.

The present mail brings very little news of more than local importance from the above port, the matter attracting most attention being apparently the departure of the steamers with the new season's teas. The Daily News, referring to this subject, says that the "tea race" this year promised to be the quickest and most keenly contested one ever known. The two favourites of the winning line of steamers for the last three years—Glenartney and Glenearn—had both received improvements to increase their speed; and they proved very successful on the passage out. A great deal, too, was expected from the new steamers Loudoun Castle and Gleneagles, something better than anything done before.

The Customs Gazette for the last quarter of 1876 had been issued. The import of Shirtings during the quarter was more than double that during the corresponding term of 1875, and that of T-cloths 120,000 pieces greater. There was a great decrease in Long Ells and Lustres, but no material variation in other kinds of Woollens. The revenue was Tls. 90,000 greater than in 1875.

The foreign employés on the Shanghai and Woosung Railway have commenced the term of their second period of engagement of eighteen months. It was, it appears, at one time thought uncertain whether, at the expiration of their first term of eighteen months, some, or even all of them, would not be sent home. The fact of the second term being commenced without any change is considered to speak favourably for the permanency of the line, and the probable extension of railway enterprise in China.

Volunteering continues to keep up, notwithstanding the temporary lull which had set in. At a muster of the forces which is noticed between eighty and ninety men attended, and the movements were said to be well gone through, though a little practice was decidedly wanted.

The statement which gained currency (doubtless from having been set on foot by the Chinese), to the effect that the wheelbarrow and ginricksha-men, who, as recently mentioned, had struck, had been taken by surprise in regard to the increase in the licensing fee, is pronounced to be unfounded. The last minutes of the Municipal Council set forth that due warning had been given to them.

From the North China Herald we take the following items of general news.—

We regret to hear of the loss of the British barque Serpent, on the Shalutein bank, near Taku. The Serpent left Taku on Friday, the 6th April, with a cargo of ice for Nagasaki. The same evening a heavy gale come on from the E.N.E., and at 3 A.M. on Sunday she struck on the bank about twelve miles from the Taku outer achorage. As she was bumping very heavily and making a good deal of water, the crew abandoned her and arrived safely at Taku in the boats. Captain Abel went back in the tug Pathfinder to the wreck, but had not returned when the Sin Nanzing left. It is feared she will become a total wreck. The Serpent was owned by Mr. C. F. Adams, of Nagasaki.

The Court-martial held on board H.M.S. Audacious, with reference to the stranding of H.M.S. Lapwing, opened on the 31st March, and was concluded on the 5th April. The Court was composed of the following officers:—Captain Buller, of the Modeste (President), Colomb, and Douglas, Acting-Commander Castle, and Lieutenant Garbett. At the termination of the inquiry the Court severely reprimanded Commander Wiseman and the Navigating Lieutenant, and reprimanded the gunner, whose watch it was at the time of the disaster.

So much interest has been taken in the proceedings of the crows on the P. and O. flagstaff, that it is worth while noting that the lower nest was blown away during the recent gale. They had immense trouble to fix it in the first instance, and its fate was predicted as inevitable. The curious thing is why they should have selected such an inconvenient spot. They made desperate efforts to build in the same place last year, but could not then succeed in establishing a foundation. Can crows be believers in Fung-shuey?

A rather singular accident as occurred at the Japan Mail Wharf. Shortly after the Hiroshima Maru had moored, a steam launch belonging to Messrs. Farnham and Co. was made fast to the outer paddle-wheel. When the luggage of two lady passengers had been transferred to the launch, the paddle-wheel partly revolved, swamping the launch and precipitating a large portion of the luggage to the bottom of the river. The engine was set in motion in ignorance of the launch being where it was, and a gentleman on the gangway seemed not to have presence of mind to cut the connecting rope. Fortunately, nobody was in the launch, which has since been raised, but a portion of the luggage, including, we hear, some valuable jewellery, was swept away.

The above-named paper has received a copy of the prospectus of the new insurance company, the "On Tai," started entirely under Chinese auspices. After giving in the usual Chinese style the object and institution of insurances, it proceeds to state:—

It has been ascertained that these offices (those started by foreigners) have been making great profits since their formation, and more are being established gradually. But goods to and from the interior of China are increasing daily, and wealthy men of our country are not wanting; nevertheless there has not been as yet an insurance company (among the Chinese themselves). This want not only causes the profits to be scattered abroad—a circumstance much to be regretted—but renders goods from the interior which have to depend on the foreigners' insurance to be deprived of the facilities of insurance (lit. to be driven to the corner). Therefore in the 12th Moon of the last year, the Chinese Merchants' Steam Navigation Company at Shanghai, gathered together a number of merchants to subscribe a capital and establish an insurance office. The primary object was to insure the company's own steamers and goods, but after operating for barely a month, outside applicants for insurance came pouring in like the water of a stream, so that frequently, from the limited extent of the capital, reinsurances had to be made in foreign offices. This does not fail to give rise to sighings for the dropped pearls. Consequently, during the seventh moon of the current year, another office was added, called the Yan Woh Insurance Company, thinking thereby that by the increase of one more office it might prevent profits from being dropped on the roadside, little knowing, however, that there were still more risks than could be taken, and there is still an overflow of business. We (the promoters) seeing this state of things, raise within our minds a feeling of emulation, and are therefore desirous of making an additional good undertaking. We propose to rise with the advance of the times, and to follow in the wake of the excellent footsteps of former projectors. But in a thing where profits conserve how can it be appropriated to oneself? Moreover, the capital (in this concern) ought to be large, therefore it should, more especially, be shared in by the public. It is now proposed to establish in Hong Kong, with agencies in all the Treaty ports, the On Tai Insurance Company, for the sole purpose of insuring vessels and inland goods for shipment abroad, and of goods to and from the different ports in China.

The Shanghai Courier has published a translation of the prospectus, issued at the time of the formation of the China Merchants' Steamer Company. It states:—

The amount of Government grain from each province is again approaching the statutory amount, and Ningpo and Shanghai junks are already insufficient for its transportation. It is certain to increase in amount in future, while the number of junks diminishes: and things are coming to a pretty pass. If grain has to be transported to Peking from Kiang-su, An-hui, Hunan, and Hupeh, it should be done successfully, and how can that be accomplished if the quick and handy steamer is rejected, and we build, buy, and hire Shanghai and Ningpo junks? The High authorities of these provinces have memorialised the Throne for the establishment of a Steam Navigation Company, which should have for its primary object the transport of Government grain from Chekiang and Kiangsu, and starting from that basis extend its views to higher aims, so as to prevent the outside foreign merchant taking away our trade, and supply the deficiencies of our Shanghai junks. The plan was a truly comprehensive one, providing for every possible contingency. . . .

Our experience in business shows us that we can fight foreign merchants successfully in three ways:—

1st. Our steamers have the rice-transport. Foreign steamers are only carriers of goods.

2nd. The expenses of our offices, of our godowns, of our steamers, of our lighterage, and of our coolie hire, will all be less than those incurred by foreigners.

3rd. Our own people, in shipping our country's produce, will have more confidence and find much more profit and convenience in us than in foreign Steamship Companies.

With these advantages we shall be able to fight foreign merchants. What have we to be afraid of?

We have heard fears that foreign merchants' capital being exceedingly great, they will probably lower freights in order to harass us. Your Directors, Mr. Tong King-sing, and the others, have also directed their attention to this, and the following is their opinion. If foreigners, who come thousands of miles in search of profit, are content in their competition with us to throw away the profits they make without fear of the consequences, this will be an advantage to our merchants. Why should we hinder them? We have but few steamers, our opponents many; our cargoes are large, theirs are small; from our Government rice-transport alone we make as much in three months as suffices for the expenses of the rest of the year, and even supposing foreign merchants to monopolise the whole of the general carrying trade, and receive the whole of the freights paid thereon, let us fight it out.

The hearing of the charge of larceny preferred by the China Navigation Company against William Henry Shaw was resumed on the 14th April before R. A. Mowat, Esq. It was explained that, since the case was last before the Court, the accused had had access to all the books to be used in evidence against him. No additional evidence was given; and the depositions having been read over and signed, the accused was formally committed to take his trial before a jury.

The weather, which had been stormy and uncertain, was improving, and it was hoped that the change had taken place early enough to prevent injury to the country.

A somewhat serious assault has been made upon Mr. Grimner, manager of the Temperance-hall, as he was passing through a Chinese crowd. It appears to have been quite unprovoked. The instigators of the attack were brought up before the French Mixed Court and punished.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 28th April; the P. and O mail from London March 16 arrived out on the 22nd April.

H. E. Pope Hennessy, the new Governor of the Colony, was installed in office on the 23rd inst. His inaugural address has been well received. The Daily Press, in commenting upon it, says it was "brief but to the purpose, manly, but neither egotistical nor pompous." He promises that the main object of his policy will be to protect the large commercial interests of the colony.

In the appeal case of Lembke v. the Oriental Bank, the Judges were divided in their opinion, Mr. Justice Snowden considering that the original judgment should be reversed and be for defendants, and the Chief Justice that it should stand. Under these circumstances, the Chief Justice exercised his powers under the local ordinance of giving a double vote, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff; but notice of appeal to the Privy Council has been given.

The Daily Press says that combination among the Hong Kong and Canton cotton dealers on the chopped dollar question, though not finally broken up, has been much weakened, and they would, it is believed, be glad to come to any terms, save the old ones, with the foreign merchants, being very short of cotton and anxious to obtain a supply. It is, therefore, the more to be regretted that a small quantity has been sold to them on their terms. The foreign hongs are now holding out for a principle rather than the avoidance of the loss which would accrue from the acceptance of the terms dictated by the Canton Cotton Guild, and it is a principle well worth contending for. It must be remembered that they are fighting the battle not for themselves alone, but for all branches of trade. If they were to lose, other branches of trade would then have to face the same difficulty, with all the disadvantages arising from the defeat of the cotton merchants. If the Canton Cotton Guild is compelled to succumb to the determination of the foreign hongs not to yield on the point, native dealers in other goods will be discouraged from making any attempt to force broken silver upon the merchants in payment. It is, consqeuently, the obvious duty—both from interest and on principle—of all foreign merchants engaged in the cotton and yarn trade to hold out resolutely against the combination of the native dealers, and so teach them, once for all, that any attempt at coercion will always be resisted and resented.

At the annual general meeting of the seatholders in St. John's Cathedral, the question of lighting the building was discussed, and it was agreed to make further inquiries as to the probable cost and best style of lighting.

A number of attachés of the Hoppo of Canton arrived in the Colony to meet him on his return by one of the C. M. S. N. Co.'s. steamers from Shanghai.

Another desperate attempt to rob Captain Sand's slip has been made. The police secured one of the robbers, but not until he had nearly bitten off one of the sergeant's fingers.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

—o—

MANILA.

The subjoined items of intelligence are translated by the Straits Times from Manila newspapers:—

Brigandage has of late become so rife in the island of Luzon that those guilty of it are to be tried exclusively by military tribunals in thirteen provinces of that island. The Diario of the 14th April, in noticing this fact, states that brigandage is an old evil in those provinces, and that it is a hydra, which can only be destroyed by radical means. Military tribunals have hitherto proved to be the most effective means of checking its prevalence, but to root out the evil thoroughly further measures must be taken, and hence the Diario advises that all vagrants and bad characters, suspected on good grounds of complicity with brigands, should be deported to the thinly-peopled new settlements in the southern portion of the Philippines.

In the provinces of Cagayan and Ilocos Norte the tobacco crop this year is not so abundant as in previous years, owing to want of rain. At Zamboanga a great drought was prevailing by last accounts. Many head of cattle had died there in consequence.

The Manila Official Gazette notifies the discovery of a shoal between Saigon and Hong Kong, by the steamer Zamboanga, in lat. 15 degs. 2 min. 50 sec. N., and 110 degs. 40 min. 48 sec. E. from Greenwich.

In the province of Zambales a man has died owing to a fish slipping into his throat, he having put it into his mouth for the purpose of killing it.

On April 9, 3,691 mils. of cigars were sold by action at Manila, on behalf of the Treasury, for $24,793.25, including $2,915.85 premiums.

JAVA.

—o—

BATAVIA.

From Atchin the latest information is, that on 16th April the Dutch troops attacked Lohong. The enemy resisted, but were defeated with heavy loss. Seven stockades were taken by the Dutch. The enemy then hoisted a white flag, and all the Chiefs, with the exception of Tunku Nya Oetoe, went on board the Dutch man-of-war Bromo, tendered their submission, and promised to deliver up the plunderers of the Chinese vessel, the seizure of whom was the principal reason of the expedition. The state of health at Atchin is reported fair, and the weather is hot and dry. The immigration of free Chinese is increasing.

The Batavia Handelsblad of April 21 says:—Trade at present is unusually dull; the high prices of rice are the cause of it; a couple of failures amongst Chinese dealers have, however, been the consequence; if European traders go to work with prudence and await the harvest without putting pressure upon the Chinese merchants during the coming month, no catastrophe will take place in the opinion of experts. The small-pox is prevalent here, and the authorities have requested the inhabitants to place white flags before houses where cases of this disease appear.

Mr. Rufus Gibbon Wells, the American æronaut, made a successful ascent in company with Mr. Servais, a coffee-house keeper at Batavia, on the 27th April. The æronauts, together with the balloon, reached the earth in safety about sunset, in a field about ten pauls from Batavia. The Java Bode states that never before at that city had such crowds been seen assembled together as on that occasion. Mr. Wells intends to make a second and third ascent there. The filling of the balloon with gas cost 270 guilders.

A fire has occurred on board the North American three masted schooner Willard G. Patton, J. Connor Swanton, from Hong Kong to the English Channel, and laden with sugar. The fire increased so rapidly that extinguishing it was impossible, so that the whole of the crew was soon obliged to abandon the vessel which shortly afterwards sunk. No portion of the cargo has been saved.

The Java Bode says:—Netherlands India will take part on a grand scale in the approaching Exhibition at Paris. Drawings of the Tanjong Priok harbour works will be exhibited, and probably models of the same will be prepared and sent to Paris.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 6th May; the French mail from London April 6 was received on the 5th May. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

The heat, drought, and consequent scarcity of water continue, and, in spite of official reports and denials, rumours of cholera being fatally rife among the natives are numerous. We are informed that in the Malay village on Guthrie's land next to Tanjong Pagar the Malays are dying off like flies, and the tenant of Parsee Lodge has been obliged to leave, cholera being too close to be pleasant. There is little or no water to be got in the village, and what there is is exceedingly bad. The deaths are not reported by the natives, on account of the trouble it would get them into. There are no medicines at the police station, we are informed, and if this be the case, it shows neglect somewhere. Chlorodyne has been given by a resident in the neighbourhood, and has saved several lives. It is furthermore stated that if the wells about and near the village were dug deeper, a good and plentiful supply of water would be found.

A distressing fatal accident has occurred on board the Telegraph Company's steamer Edinburgh while the vessel was opposite Malacca, on her way to this port. Two native sailors, having complained of illness, were ordered Epsom salts by the chief officer, and a native boy was despatched to the store to obtain the salts. He brought, however, instead, a bottle of chloral hydrate, which was given to the men, and the mistake was not discovered until five minutes afterwards. Both men died shortly afterwards. An inquest was held on their bodies, and, after hearing the evidence, a verdict of "Accidental poisoning" was returned.

H.M.S. Juno, Captain Wilcox, has left for Hong Kong, and will be replaced here by H.M.S. Charybdis, Captain T. E. Smith, which was stationed here during the greater part of 1875, and which has since been in China, principally at Shanghai, where the officers and crew seem to have been very popular. The Charybdis is now in Hong Kong awaiting the troopship Tamar with reliefs, and is to be re-commissioned for the China station, when she will come down here.

The following notifications appear in the Gazette, all dated the 3rd May:—

His Excellency the Administrator has been pleased to appoint the following gentlemen (with power to add to their number) to be a Commission for the purpose of making arrangements for the representation of the Straits Settlements at the forthcoming Paris Exhibition; and for the collection of articles in Singapore, Malacca and the Native States for that purpose;—Hon. CONSULAR REPORT UPON THE TRADE OF SAIGON.

A Blue-book has been issued containing the subjoined Report by Consul Tremlett on the Trade, Commerce, and Navigation of Saigon for the year 1876:—

This colony (Cochin China) has for several years become of less and less value to European merchants, and the change to their disadvantage during the twelve months under review has been more marked than formerly. Chinese have been gradually obtaining possession of the export trade until, as present statistics show, they have shipped during 1876 nine-tenths of the entire rice crop, and the whole of all other articles of produce; the reason may be found in their ability to purchase from the natives, with whom Europeans cannot come directly in contact, at slightly cheaper prices, but principally in the fact that their inexpensive establishments enable them to reduce their charges and commissions proportionately. The import trade has long been entirely in their hands.

From the following statement it will be seen that 317 vessels of all nationalities, and aggregating 234,299 tons register, loaded at this port, of which 215 vessels of 158,151 tons were British; again, about two-thirds of the tonnage employed, and the predominance of British steam tonnage has been as noticeable as in previous years.

The production of the staple of the colony shows again an increase upon any previous year, and reached the large quantity of 5,700,000 piculs, equal to 340,000 tons. Prices have fluctuated somewhat, but the average value may be placed at $1.38 per picul of 133⅓ pounds English; as usual, the greater part of the crop has been taken by China. The following table of the exports of rice will show destinations, actual quantity, and value.

Pepper, Sugar, Cotton, and Coffee have been produced to about the same extent as during the previous year. The trade in hides, horns, and gamboge has been upon a very limited scale.

Manchester goods continue to supply the entire native population, and larger quantities than ever have met a fair market here. Coals: The Government contract amounted to 5,000 tons Australian, and was taken at f.54.88, equal to about 39s. 6d. per ton; importations privately were inconsiderable. The opium and spirit farms remain upon the same terms previously advised.

The port of Quinhon was opened to foreign commerce on the 1st November last, under the conditions stipulated in the treaty of 15th March, 1874. The Government rate for Treasury payments has been reduced from f.5.55 to f.5.35 per dollar. Hospital charges have undergone some alteration, and officers are now received at f.9, and seamen at f.7 per diem. Cost of burial from hospital is f.20. Postal rates to Europe and America have been very much reduced, being now 40c. per 15 grammes, while the rate to Singapore, Hong Kong, and Chinese ports remains at 48c. The prompt measures taken in apprehending the pirates engaged in the Pelican affair, and their subsequent speedy execution, has apparently rid the country of an organised gang that bade fair to cause considerable trouble. An insurrection, headed by the brother of the King of Cambodia, broke out in that country during the early days of June, but was totally suppressed by the end of July. A new cathedral is to be erected, at a cost of f.800,000.

THE GREENWICH OBSERVATORY.

On the 2nd inst. a numerous company assembled in the grounds of the Royal Observatory at Greenwich, on the occasion of the Board of Visitors attending to receive the annual report of the Astronomer Royal, Sir George B. Airy. In this report, which entered into details as to the buildings and apparatus, it was mentioned that the astronomical instruments used for the Transit of Venus had been all returned from the Exhibition, and that those which had been borrowed from private contributors had been repaired, where necessary, and returned. Of those belonging to the Government, one of the photoheliographs is in daily use at the Observatory, another at the Cape Observatory, a third at the engineer establishment at Chatham, and a fourth at the South Kensington Museum. The last is accompanied with equatorial transit, altazimuth, clocks, micrometer, &c., with their appropriate huts and chymical rooms, forming a complete representation of a first-class establishment for observation. Photographs of the sun had been taken on 140 days, of which 239 have been preserved, the photographs showing a complete absence of spots on 57 days, and on 29 of these there are neither spots nor faculæ. The magnetical and meteorological instruments comprise all which are necessary for the fundamental eye-observations and the continuous self-formed register of the three following phenomena:—The three magnetic elements and earth currents, barometric pressure, force and speed of wind, rain, temperatures of air (at different elevations), and evaporation, ozone, and solar radiation, with maximum and minimum thermometers at the Observatory and in the waters of the Thames at Poplar, and thermometers deep sunk in the earth. Besides these, which are adapted for reading every day, there are the dip instrument, and atmospheric electrometers, &c., to be observed occasionally. The observation on the pluviometer, mounted in the Royalist, at Poplar (the ship to which the Thame thermometers are attached), at the elevation of 17ft. above the river, appears to show that the amount of rain collected there is the same as that on the ground level at the Royal Observatory in the months of June, July, and August, but less than in all other months of the year, the aggregate for the year being nearly the same as that of the rain collected on the roof of the octagon room at the Observatory. The computation of the photographic records of the barometers from 1854 to 1873 has so far advanced that it is asserted positively there is no trace of lunar tide in the atmosphere, but that there is a strongly-marked semidiurnal tide, accompanied with a smaller diurnal tide. Observations of small planets are sent every quarter to the Paris Observatory and other observations occasionally to the Royal Astronomical Society. Daily meteorological results are also supplied to M. Le Verrier, to the War Department at Washington, to the Registrar-General, and to the Meteorological-office, and are made more quickly accessible to the public by newspapers and by affiche on the Observatory walls. After stating that there are 191 chronometers under care at the Observatory, the report states that the automatic drop of the Greenwich time ball has failed only on seven days, when the ball was not raised, on account of high wind, and on three days from accident. The Deal time-ball failed on six days from high wind, and on fifteen days from error in the telegraph connection; and on six days the assistance of the attendant was required, on account of the feebleness of the current, to work the relay by which the dropping current is created.

COAL-LADEN SHIPS.

Mr. B. F. Cobb, of the Globe Marine Insurance Company, has put together some very suggestive figures relative to the loss of ships through spontaneous combustion of coals. A number of vessels are every year posted at Lloyd's as missing—i.e., lost with all hands; and it appears to have been suggested that a considerable proportion of these ships are coal-laden. There can be no doubt that no insignificant number of coal-laden ships do disappear mysteriously at sea and are never more heard of. The plain inference is that these ships take fire in mid ocean and that the crews perish miserably either in the vessel, as those rescued by Mr. Brassey might but for him have done, or in their boats. The importance of putting an end to dangers of this kind does not concern the loss of life merely, though that is great, but also the economy of our national trade. On both points it will be best to quote] Mr. Cobb's own words.—"In 1874 the missing coal-laden vessels were eleven vessels of a tonnage of over 7,000 tons. In 1875 the number had advanced to twenty-eight vessels of upwards of 15,000 tons. In 1876 there were twenty-one coal ships missing, of a tonnage of over 10,500 tons. For these three years we have a total tonnage of 33,000 tons register. Some of these vessels were steamers, which would carry engineers, stokers, &c., such as the Ionia, 1,758 tons, Shields to Aden; the Thornaby, 1,000 tons, Cardiff to Bombay; while some of the sailing vessels were known to have a few passengers on board. It therefore is only a moderate calculation to reckon the number of lives at 3½ per 100 tons, which gives for the three years a total of 1,155 lives lost through the spontaneous combustion of coal. Of course, it is possible some of them may have been otherwise destroyed, as we have only the melancholy fact that there is nothing known as to their exact fates. The tonnage of the missing coal-laden vessels of the last three years I have shown, in round figures, at 30,000 tons register, and we may take this as representing 37,000 tons of coal. In addition to these, there were during the last four years 37,712 tons of shipping and 47,873 tons of coals burnt from spontaneous combustion, 47,873 tons of shipping and 58,866 tons of coal 'on fire.' Including the missing ships, the loss of property may be taken in round figures at £1,250,000 sterling, represented by 70,000 tons of shipping and 107,000 tons of coal."

CAPITAL EMPLOYED IN THE COTTON TRADE OF LANCASHIRE.

Researches directed to ascertain the amount of capital engaged in any trade are always welcome, and Mr. Richard Seyd has already rendered valuable service in this direction. The following paragraph gives the general results of his late inquiry concerning the cotton trade of Lancashire:—

Mr. Richard Seyd, F.S.S., has compiled an estimate of the financial resources of the cotton-spinning and manufacturing trade of Lancashire, including Dukinfield, Glossop, Hyde, Marple, Mottram, New Mills, and Stockport, in Cheshire. From his figures we learn that in 1870 the total imports of cotton amounted to 1,339 mill. lbs., and in 1876 to 1,556 mill. lbs., the values of which were 53 mill. £, and 50 mill. £ respectively. The total exports in the same year were 238 mill. lbs. and 258 mill. lbs. The excess of imports, which in 1870 was 1,101 mill. lbs., rose in 1874 to 1,307 mill. lbs. Although the amount was much greater in 1874 than in 1870, the value of the excess was considerably less, the figures standing at 43 mill. £ in 1870, and at 42 mill. £ in 1874.

Mr. Seyd states that in "the spinning and manufacturing of this enormous amount of raw material there are about 1,900 firms engaged in the district above alluded to, including about 270 joint-stock companies under the Limited Liability Act. The nominal capital of these companies (many of which do not issue any report) may be estimated at about £15,000,000, of which it may fairly be taken that one-half (say £7,500,000) is paid up. The capital of private firms and individuals (numbering say about 1,600) can be placed at about £50,000,000, based on such figures as are obtainable, giving an average of about £30,000 for each firm.

Besides the limited liability companies, with their paid-up capital of £7,500,000, there are firms, each estimated to possess resources as under:—

6	firms exceeding	£1,000,000	each
12	„	500,000	„
26	„	200,000	„
50	„	100,000	„
72	„	75,000	„
101	„	50,000	„
106	„	30,000	„
155	„	20,000	„
258	„	10,000	„
280	„	5,000	„
187	„	2,000	„

These figures give £57,500,000 as the total capital employed, viz., £50,000,000 by private firms, and £7,500,000 by limited companies, nearly all the shares in which are held by the operatives employed in, or living near to them. This very large amount of £7,500,000 of paid-up capital (carrying a liability for as much more), equal to a considerable portion of the whole of the private capital in the same trade, is a most remarkable phenomenon. Many of these limited company mills have, as a matter of hard fact, paid dividends of from ten to thirty per cent. per annum, and the shares in them are largely bought and sold at high prices. It would be a public service if some one, having accurate local and technical experience, would follow up Mr. Seyd's figures by a careful history of the progress and administration of these limited company mills.

COURT OF APPEAL.—THE LISBON TRAMWAYS CASE.

The case of "Twycross versus Grant" has been heard upon appeal from the Common Pleas Division, before the Lord Chief Justice, the Lord Chief Baron, Lord Justice Bramwell, and Lord Justice Brett. It was the appeal of the defendants in the action by a shareholder in the Lisbon Tramway Company against Mr. Grant, the projector, and Messrs. Clark and Punchard, the contractors, for putting forth a prospectus of the company not mentioning two contracts of the contractors with Mr. Grant and the Duke of Saldanha to pay each of them a large sum of money—to the Duke for the concession, and to Mr. Grant for his services in getting up the company and raising the capital, &c. The line was made, but worked at a loss, and in 1874 the plaintiff got a winding-up order, and in the course of the proceedings discovered these contracts, and then brought this action. The action is founded on Sec. 38 of the Companies' Act of 1867, which requires that every prospectus inviting persons to subscribe for shares shall specify the dates and names of the parties to any contract entered into by the company or the promoters, directors, or trustees before the issue of the prospectus, whether subject to adoption by the directors or otherwise, and any prospectus not specifying the same shall be deemed fraudulent on the part of the promoters and directors knowingly issuing the same, as regards any person taking shares in the company on the faith of such prospectus, unless he shall have had notice of such contract. The plaintiff in this case swore at the trial, and the jury so found, that he took the shares on the faith of the prospectus, and that he would not have taken them if the contracts in question had been disclosed, and that the contracts were material to be known and were such as ought to have been disclosed, and the jury also found that the prospectus was knowingly issued by the defendants and that they intentionally omitted to mention the contracts, though they did so under tha bonâ fide belief that they were not contracts which required to be disclosed. On these findings Lord Coleridge, having directed the jury that they could give the plaintiff all the damages caused by the fraud, and that these might be the whole amount he had paid for his shares, they gave him a verdict for £700, on which Lord Coleridge and two other Judges of the Division gave judgment in his favour, from which judgment the defendants appealed.

Their lordships were divided in opinion, and consequently delivered their decisions separately, Lord Justice Bramwell and the Lord Chief Baron giving judgment for the defendants, or for a new trial; the Lord Chief Justice and Lord Justice Brett took an opposite view, the result being that the judgment for the plaintiff stands and the appeal is dismissed. Notice of appeal to the House of Lords has been given on behalf of the defendant.

TORPEDO WARFARE.

An interesting article upon the value of torpedoes as weapons of war appears in The Times. In the course of the article the subjoined observations occur:—Until the internecine struggle between the Northern and Southern States of America the value of this modern weapon of destruction was absolutely unknown. During the Crimean war in 1854 torpedoes were employed by the Russians in the Baltic against the British Fleet, but with no effect. The Austrians also in 1859 organised a system of torpedo defence at the time of the threatened attack upon Venice by the French. The armistice that followed led to the removal of the mines before their destructive power was ascertained. With the exception, therefore, of the employment of the torpedo by the Confederate States of America in the Civil War of 1862-4 it has remained in abeyance in actual warfare until the present Russo-Turkish War, and everything that may throw light upon its destructive effects, that may tell us of the possible effects of the torpedo on a naval force, of whatever kind, is eagerly seized upon. For many years the attention of Governments has been directed towards the perfect development of this engine of defence and attack, and a very great advance has been made upon the more primitive system employed in the American campaign. But it must not be forgotten that the destructive effects of the torpedo when employed against ships in that war first arrested the attention of Europe. Naval officers from the various Powers came over to England to study the system at that time developed by Holmes and Maury. The seed then sown has now fructified into an elaborate science, as will doubtless be exemplified in the mode of defence and attack by torpedoes carried out in the present war. One, therefore, of the most important naval problems now to be solved is, how are our ironclads and ships to be protected against the insidious attack of this submarine monster. The comparative cheapness of the torpedoes permits of large numbers being employed for the defence of shallow waters and harbour and river approaches; and as they may be rapidly laid, a defence by means of ground torpedoes can be organised in a few hours. One single ground torpedo in 1864 defended the James river for thirteen months, and sufficed to frustrate the intended advances of the Federal fleet. When the vast sums expended by this country annually upon her ironclads and gunboats are considered, it is most unsatisfactory to think that at any moment contact with one of these missiles might send any one of our ships to the bottom, and it has become very necessary that effective means should be devised to enable our ships to withstand or avoid the attack. Torpedo warfare consists of two systems—shallow water mines laid down for defence upon the ground in depths varying from three to forty fathoms, and the torpedo launch and locomotive mine for deep-sea attack. It is comparatively easy with modern appliances to avoid injury by contact with ground defence torpedoes, but not so with the deep sea locomotive mine. The latter is generally planned so as to be launched by skilled engineers under cover of darkness, and, without some special means of detecting its approach, may prove destructive to the most powerful monitor yet afloat. Many engineers and men of science have devoted all their energies to determine some effective means of disclosing the manœuvres of the attack and preventing it being effective. The recent suggestion of employing a flexible wire rope netting, surrounding the submerged portion of the vessel's hull, as a shield to ward off the attack by recoil, can only be regarded as a cumbersome appendage likely to interfere with the speed of the vessel, and at best only a partial defence. Increased velocity in the locomotive mine may render any such precautions unavailing. It becomes, therefore, only a recurrence of the struggle for supremacy that has so long existed between the penetrating powers of rifled guns against the penetrability of armour-clad ships. The employment of a flotilla of gunboats to surround the ironclad, another suggestion, would be found in actual warfare to be an expensive encumbrance, impeding the fighting capacity of the ship, rather than a safeguard. When it is established that no gun torpedo can be effectively launched to insure impact within moderate shot range, and that no torpedo launch can act with effect except it absolutely approaches the vessel within striking distance, neither can any torpedo be affixed or placed near a ship except the forlorn hope actually approach the vessel.

The most valuable means of defence, and the one to which special attention should be directed, is that of illumination. Light of sufficient power to disclose any object attempting to enter a cordon of illumination round a ship, the ship itself remaining in darkness, is at once the simplest and most effective precaution that can be devised against night attack. The employment of the electric light or of the ordinary modes for this purpose is impossible. Yet if a sufficient and persistent illumination can be maintained at a given distance from a ship no torpedo launch or boat would venture to approach it. The launch would be doomed for destruction, being a mark out for the gunner, and if it can be prevented from approaching within the range necessary for the launching and effective impact of the Whitehead or other similar torpedo those missiles would become comparatively valueless. Within the last few weeks a very important advance has been made towards solving this problem of illumination at sea by an adaptation of what is known as the Holmes' distress signal, in the form of a shot, for illuminating purposes, to be fired from mortars at ranges varying from 500 to 2,500 yards. These signals possess the remarkable property of emitting a very powerful white light the moment they come into contact with the water, and when once ignited are absolutely inextinguishable by either wind or water, and burn with a persistency that is almost incredible, thirty or forty minutes being an average duration. The shot containing this light is constructed so as to be buoyant upon the water, and, at the same time, with sufficient rigidity of form to withstand the concussion of the powder. Upon striking the water at the required range, the shot, floating up to the surface, immediately bursts into a brilliant flame, with great illuminating power. Some half-dozens of these shots fired from an ironclad or gunboat would effectually surround her with an impassable cordon of light at any required range, and by such a device, while the vessel herself would remain in darkness, the enemy's movements of attack would become plainly discernible, and any attempt to break through the illuminated zone of light be at once detected, however dark the night.

THE HOME FOR ASIATICS.—The Home for Asiatics, at Limehouse, held its twentieth annual meeting last week, at the Institution, the Marquis of Cholmondeley, the president, in the chair. This institution was established in 1857 for the purpose of providing shelter, protection, food, and clothing for destitute Asiatics of all nationalities. Since its foundation it has afforded refuge to 6,232 natives of Asia; 1,450 were destitute cases. Inmates have deposited for security £15,090 in money and £6,400 in watches and trinkets. Twelve thousand Bibles and 90,000 Testaments have been distributed among them. The report, which was read by Captain W. D. Chapman, shows that during the past year the Home has sheltered 314 Asiatics, of whom 110 were destitute; 137 of the inmates were natives of India, 65 coming from China, and 99 from East Africa, Arabia, and Turkey. Of those received during the past year into the Home 292 came in English ships. The Society's missionary reports having paid 100 visits to thirty-seven large steamers and ships, when he addressed in all 1,677 men and distributed 853 copies of the Scriptures. The most extensive field of labour was among the ships of the P. and O. Company and those of the British India Company. The year's receipts amounted to £2,189, and the expenditure was £2,128, carrying forward a balance of £61.

FAILURE IN THE SILK TRADE.—At the Court of Bankruptcy on the 6th inst. the case of Messrs. Pursell, Howard, and Daniels, who are silkmen, of Great Winchester-street-buildings, and of Macclesfield, came before Mr. Registrar Murray. The debtors have petitioned for the liquidation of their affairs; and the failure is one of some magnitude in the silk trade. The debts amounted to about £53,000, but many of the creditors were secured, leaving an unsecured balance of about £13,000. An application being supported by creditors for £40,000, the Registrar appointed Mr. Mesnard, of Old Jewry-chambers, to the office of receiver and manager.

DR. PAUL GOLDSHIMIDT died at Galle on the 7th ult. He had been appointed by the Ceylon Government to collect and edit the rock inscriptions and to report on the ruined temples and cities of the island. During the two years and a half that he was thus engaged on the archæological survey he had collected a vast mass of materials for the elucidation of the ancient history of Ceylon, some of the results of which have from time to time been published.

THE Prince of Wales held a levée at St. James's Palace on Thursday, at which General Grant was presented. The presentations, which numbered 400, also included Sir Thomas Sidgreaves, Chief Justice, and Dr. Hampshire, Colonial Surgeon of the Straits Settlements, and Major-General Sir Harry Ord.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The Envoys have visited Westminster Abbey, being shown round the building by Dean Stanley. It was explained to them that it was the burial place of the English Kings, celebrated statesmen and literary-men, similar in this respect to the "Hwang-Ling," and "Chên-Ling" in China—the former the burial places of Emperors, and the latter of literary celebrities. They were struck by the fact of the oldest part of the building being 800 years of age, and of the English Parliament having as much as 600 years ago met in the building. The First Minister, Kuo, was present at the State dinner given by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs on the 2nd June; and he afterwards attended the reception of the Marquis of Hertford, the Lord Chamberlain. On the 5th inst. the Envoys visited the American Minister and met General Grant; on the 6th they were present at the Duchess of Argyll's garden party, and on the 7th they were present, as is required by official etiquette, at the levée held on behalf of Her Majesty by the Prince of Wales.

THE MESSAGERIES MARITIMES COMPANY.

The report of the above Company, presented to the meeting of Shareholders on the 29th May last, gives the details of the working of the steamers during the year 1876. The gross value of the fleet on the 31st December 1875, was f.108,566,334.14, and, deducting therefrom the amount for vessels disused and written off (amortissement) of f.42,922,535.22, the net value was f.65,643,778.92. The increase in the value of the fleet on Dec. 31, 1876, as compared with the same date in 1875, was f.521,807.24. The Parana, which has been built at Ciotat, and destined to work on the bi-monthly service between Brazil and La Plata, made its first voyage on the 20th September last year. With regard to the Seyne, which was constructed by the "Societe des Forges et Chantiers de la Mediterranée," some years back, the report states that the company obtained possession of the vessel in virtue of an adjudication at Horore in the month of March 1876. This vessel has been overhauled and repaired, so as to become perfectly suited to the requirements of the company. She made her first voyage in September last. The details of the voyages made by the Company's steamers show that the speed now attained exceeds the good results in 1875. The Brazil boats have reached the annual mean of 11·84 knots per hour; those of the China line 11.25 knots, and those of the Mediterranean 11 knots. Last year the general average of speed for the whole of the vessels of the Company was 11·50 knots; this year it is 11·68 knots. An improvement to the extent of 4½ per cent. in the traffic on the Indo-China line is noticed in 1876 as compared with the previous year. The products of all the services for that year show a trifling falling off of 1·84 per cent. as compared with the year preceding, but they are practically on a par with it, when the journeys accomplished respectively are taken into account. The revenue of the Indo-China line, however, shows a falling off of 4¼ per cent. The reduction of receipts for passengers has been a little more than 6 per cent., principally on the main line and on the branch to Japan. The reduction on freights has been 3½ per cent., chiefly on the main line and the branch to Calcutta. The branches to Japan, Batavia, and Mauritius have on the other hand, sensibly progressed. The fact which is most striking on considering the traffic of this large Indo-Chinese line is that in 1876 the fall in returns has coincided with an augmentation of the conveyance, as it is shown that the number of passengers had increased during that year 4½ per cent., and the quantity of goods 8¼ per cent. in comparison with the previous year. The commercial crisis which still weighs on these regions has worked in with a multiplicity of circumstances to bring about a fall in the rates of freight, of which the Company's steamers, in common with all shipping, have felt the consequences. The report shows that the reserves for assurance were on the 31st December, 1876, f.5,404,147.29, and at the end of 1875 they were f.5,44,109.39, thus showing a small excess of f.16.962.10. The expense of 1876 compared with the previous year, show a falling off of f.1,340,856.93, which is counterbalanced, however, by an almost corresponding falling off in receipts (part of which results from the withdrawal of f.476,833 of the Government subsidy). The directors in consequence propose the distribution of a dividend of f.35 per share. This is the same amount as was declared in 1876, and the report frankly admits that perhaps it may not be considered too favourable under the circumstances in which it is presented. The events which have recently troubled the East of the Mediterranean make it very difficult to form any estimate of the results of the current term of business. The Danube and the north of the Black Sea are at present closed to the Company's steamers, and it is impossible to ignore that the war will affect the receipts from this portion of the Company's service. Account must however be taken of the commercial operations which war generally brings with it, and in this connection it is pointed out that the greatest part of the wants of consumption do not disappear with the complications which war engenders, and it is natural that trade should seek in regions left outside their influence those products which the countries occupied by the armies cannot as under normal conditions furnish. It may thus be hoped that, thanks to the variety and diffusion of the Company's services, compensation will be found elsewhere for the difficulties which affect the trade with Constantinople.

The working account for 1876 is as follows:—

Receipts of all kinds	f.50,037,702.28
Expenditure including depreciation and Insurance ...	44,284,961.25
Excess	f.5,752,741.03
Deduct Interest on Bonds	1,330,186.25
Leaves Balance of profit	f.4,422,554.78
Of this 5 per cent. is to go to Reserve, say	f.221,127.73
A dividend of f.35 per share (of which f.15 has been already paid in December last) is	4,200,000.00
Leaving Balance to account of 1877	1,427,05
	f.4,422,554.78

THE CASE OF THE AGRA BANK V. MACCALL.

The award of Mr. J. Thos. Kingdon Kingdon, Q.C., who was appointed Arbitrator in the above case, was issued on the 5th inst. After setting forth the authority of the arbitrator, and other technical facts, the document runs as follows:—

"Whereas it was admitted before me on the said reference that no imputation rests upon the defendant's character for honesty in the service of the plaintiffs, and it was agreed that I should certify this fact in my award, which I certify accordingly, and I also certify my concurrence therein; now I the said arbitrator, having so taken upon me the said reference as aforesaid, and having heard, received and considered the allegations and evidence made, given and produced before me, by and on behalf of the said parties respectively; do make and publish this my award, in writing, of and concerning the matters so referred to me as aforesaid in manner in following: that is to say, I find and award the several issues joined in the said action do stand, but that the claim in the declaration be reduced to the sum of £10,133 12s. 6d., for which last mentioned sum I award and order that the verdict entered for the plaintiffs do stand; and I further award and order that the defendant shall and do pay to the plaintiffs or to their attorney, Mr. John Morris, on demand, the plaintiff's costs of the said reference to be taxed by the proper officer of the Court, and shall and do bear and pay his own costs of the said reference; and lastly, I award and order that the defendant shall and do pay the costs of this my award, and that if the plaintiffs shall pay the last mentioned costs on taking up this award, then that the defendant shall and do pay the plaintiffs or to their attorney, Mr. John Morris, on demand, the sum which the plaintiffs shall have so paid on account of the said last mentioned costs as last aforesaid. No matters in difference between the said parties other than the matters in difference in the said action were brought before me by or on behalf of either of the said parties respectively; in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 5th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1877. Signed "T. K. KINGDON.

THE JAPAN INSURRECTION.

The Pall Mall Gazette of the 8th inst., referring to the above subject, says there is no doubt that Japan is now passing through a very serious crisis in its history. The insurrection has attained formidable proportions, and the resources of the central Government are sorely taxed. At present the revolt has been confined to the island of Kiushiu. This is a most important matter, both because it enables the Government to concentrate all its strength in that locality, and because it tends to show that the real causes which have led to the movement are not general. We previously pointed out that the Samourai class in Japan amount to a large proportion of the population of the country, and if common grounds of complaint were to lead to a general rising of this class, the results might be most serious. If, on the other hand, the feeling of active hostility to the present régime is local, the Government will in all prabability soon obtain again the upper hand. Some even go so far as to assert that the grievances of the Samourai class, even in the Kagoshima Ken, had but little to do with the revolt, and that it is to be attributed almost entirely to personal rivalry and animosity directed against certain members of the present Ministry—notably against Okubo, Minister of the Home Department; Okuma, Minister of Finance, and Ito, Minister of Public Works. There is no doubt that feudal notions are only partially extinguished in Japan, and that those who were but lately armed retainers are still ready to follow the wishes of their chiefs even if these lead them to overt acts of rebellion.

There are two great leaders in the Satsuma clan—Saigo Takamori and Shimadzu Saburo. The latter has remained loyal to the Government, or at least neutral; the former is the head of the revolt. Saigo was most prominent in the restoration of the power of the Mikado. He possesses undoubted courage, great talent, and a prestige earned by unvaried success. For some time after the restoration he was one of the chief supporters of the central Government. His advice was almost law. He held the post of Commander-in-chief of the Mikado's forces. His position in Japan may be compared to that occupied among us by the old Duke of Wellington. But lately his popularity, except among his own clan, has been somwhat on the wane. When a mission to Corea was proposed he wished to be named Ambassador; but, after great hesitation, it was decided that it was not prudent to send him. Later, Kuroda and Enouyé were named joint envoys. After their successful return the rivalry between Saigo and Kuroda continued to increase; but still it was considered impossible that Saigo could ever seriously attack the Government he may be said to have created. It was known that some of the Satsuma malcontents had applied to him to assist them, but he is reported to have said that 'they might kill him if the country would be benefited, but that while alive he would never assist in a rebellion.' What caused his ultimate defection is still a matter of surmise. The best-credited report is that he believed a plot to assassinate him was organised by Kawagi, the head of the Government police; that he proposed to proceed to Kioto with an armed force to demand redress from the Mikado, and that this being resisted, he defied the national army. Be this as it may, he has now entirely thrown off the mask, and, though still pretending that his loyalty to the Mikado is unshaken, he commands the large insurrectiontary force, estimated at about 20,000 men.

This insurrection, serious as it is for Japan, is also affecting in a very injurious way the trade between that country and England. Imports have dwindled down to an insignificant amount, and no confidence is felt in the future. It is to be hoped that this state of things will prove to be merely temporary, and that the demand for our manufactures from one of our most promising customers is not likely to fall off permanently. But there are signs that English popularity is not increasing in that country, and that, justly or unjustly, most of the grievances are attributed to us. If it is necessary to reduce the pensions of the Samourai, the reason assigned is that treaties prevent the Government from raising the funds it requires by Customs duties, as in other countries. The Japanese papers point out that while the Customs in England produce over £20,000,000, or more than one-fourth of its revenue, those in Japan amount to only about £350,000, or less than one-thirtieth of its receipts. It is, however, probable that if a free revision of the commercial treaties were permitted to Japan, the fiscal advantage would be comparatively small; but the refusal by foreign countries to permit it to act in this matter as it thinks best is a continual sore. When rice reaches an unheard-of price, foreigners, and particularly the English, are blamed, and foreign trade is said to be ruining the people. Much of all this may be owing to false notions, based on merely a smattering of commercial knowledge; but our object should be to leave unsettled no real grounds of grievance, or in the long run we shall find we have been checking what we really want to promote—namely, an increase of our trade and proper confidence in our relations.

THE VOYAGE OF THE IMMORTALITE.

The subjoined is an account of the voyage of the Immortalité, one of the vessels of the Detached Squadron, which returned home lately from the Far East:—

The Immortalité was commissioned at Portsmouth on the 14th of October, 1872, by Capt. Algernon M. L. Lyons, and on the 8th of December arrived at Portland, the rendezvous of Admiral Campbell's squadron. A few days later, the squadron, which consisted of the Narcissus (flagship), Immortalité, Aurora, Endymion, and Doris, anchored at Plymouth. After a short stay, the Immortalité was despatched to the Irish Channel in search of a derelict, the Margaret Pollock, which Captain Lyons succeeded in finding. Owing, however, to a continuance of heavy gales, he was unable to keep in company with her, and as his ship had started a serious leak it was deemed advisable to return to port, and she accordingly put back to Portsmouth on the 6th of January, 1873. The necessary repairs took more than a month to complete. In the meantime Admiral Campbell left with the other ships of the squadron for Madeira and the West Indies, the Immortalité joining company with them at Barbadoes on the 11th of March. The squadron then proceeded to Trinidad, thence to Jamaica, touching at several ports in the Windward Islands and at St. Domingo, and onward to Halifax, where orders reached them to proceed to Gibraltar, which port they reached on August 8, 1873. The squadron was then employed for some months on the coast of Spain in consequence of certain difficulties arising out of the Civil War in that country, and more particularly on account of the Intransigentes, who, having possessed themselves of several Spanish men-of-war, were behaving in a somewhat novel and irregular manner. The squadron cruised about from port to port, sometimes singly and sometimes in company, the officers taking the opportunity offered by their stay at Malaga to visit Granada, Seville, and Cordova. On the 17th of November the Immortalité was detatched on a cruise to the coast of Morocco, as the bearer of the usual congratulations to the new Emperor on his accession to the Throne; and having first called at Tangier to embark the Moorish Minister, Seyd Mahomed Bargash, family, and suite, she proceeded to Rubut, where the Emperor was residing with a large following of motley, but picturesque troops. Capt. Lyons and some of his officers were presented to the Emperor. After this incident the squadron was ordered to Malta, and after refitting, cruised on the station until June, when it returned to Gibraltar, having visited Corfu, Athens, Symrna, Candia, Palermo, Sardinia, and other places. The Doris was then ordered to Halifax, but the remainder of the ships returned to England, where they were paid down and new captains and several officers appointed, Rear-Admiral Randolph being placed in command. On the 20th of September, 1874, the squadron, which now consisted of the Narcissus, Immortalité, Topaze, Newcastle, Raleigh, and Doris, the Immortalité being commanded by Capt. Hume, again left England, and after touching at various places, arrived at the Cape of Good Hope on the 3rd of April, 1875, where they remained a month to refit. The vessels returned to Gibraltar by St. Helena, Ascension, and St. Vincent, and shortly afterwards received orders to repair to Bombay to await the arrival of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Rear-Admiral Rowley Lambert, C.B., being at the same time appointed to the command. The squadron arrived at Bombay on the 6th of September, after a tedious passage of 91 days, and one week at the Cape, which was not more than sufficient for the performance of all necessary duties. Everybody in the squadron had opportunities of visiting famous places, seeing wonderful sights, and receiving Indian hospitality. After a considerable stay at Bombay the squadron visited Colombo, Trincomalee, and Calcutta, and then returned to Bombay. The orders were out, and the ships were to have sailed in a week for the Suez Canal, when, owing to Chinese troubles, a telegram arrived in time to arrest their return and to despatch four ships—the Narcissus, Immortalité, Topaze, and Newcastle—to Singapore and Hong Kong, where they arrived on the 7th of April, 1876. The squadron remained in Chinese waters during the negotiations between the two Governments, and visited Shanghai, Amoy, Japan, Chefoo, and Talien. When at Chefoo Admiral Lambert hoisted his flag on board the Immortalité and proceeded to the Taku Forts, at the mouth of the Peiho River. Here the Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Ryder, and Staff, accompanied by Sir Thomas Wade and Admiral Lambert and Staff, proceeded up the river in the Vigilant and Mosquito to Tentsin, and thence to Peking. Several officers of the Immortalité also visited Peking and the Great Wall of China. Affairs having by this time been satisfactorily settled by diplomatic means, the squadron returned to Hong Kong in November, 1876, and having refitted, proceeded home via the Mauritius, Cape of Good Hope, St. Helena, Ascension, and St. Vincent, arriving at Plymouth on the 11th ult. In the first year of her commission the Immortalité sailed over 12,309 miles, and was 109 days at sea; in the second, 10,309, miles, and 106 days; in the third, 32,423 miles, and 228 days; in the fourth 14,491 miles, and 134 days; and in the fifth 16,824 miles, and 120 days. During the whole commission, therefore, she had sailed over 86,356 miles, and been 697 days at sea, and 975 days in harbour, including 175 days fitting out, docking for repairs on her return from the Irish Channel, paying down and fitting out the second time at Portsmouth. In the five years she was 111 times in port, and visited 76 different ports, of which 69 were foreign and colonial. The following are the names of the officers who have served in the Immortalité the whole of her commission, from October, 1872:—Commander Alan B. Thomas, Lieut. of Marines T. K. Byam, Chaplain the Rev. A. Nicholls, B.A., Paymaster W. Warburton; Sub-Lieuts. J. W. Litle and Montgomerie; Surgeons C. G. Woodsworth and I. H. Anderson; Engineer, G. F. Greaves; Boatswain, John Mahoney; Acting Sub-Lieut. Haswell. and Navigating Sub Lieut. Scott. Fleet Surg. J. C. Ingles served from the 4th of February, 1873. The Immortalite will be paid off into the Fourth Division of the Steam Reserve, and, as her hull is sadly out of repair, she will not probably be again called upon for service at sea.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The subjoined Official Despatch from the Earl of Derby to Lord Lyons, dated 16th ult., has been published:—M. De Lesseps called upon me at the Foreign-office on the 10th instant, having, as he stated, come expressly from Paris to lay before Her Majesty's Government a project for regulating the passage of ships of war through the Suez Canal. I received him, in company with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and he handed to me a draft project. After some conversation, I told him that the question of the position of the Suez Canal under present circumstances was a difficult and delicate one, and that I could not then say more than that the project which he had been good enough to submit to me should have full consideration. Her Majesty's Government have since carefully considered the project, and have come to the conclusion that the scheme proposed in it for the neutralisation of the Canal by an International Convention is open to so many objections of a political and practical character that they could not undertake to recommend it for the acceptance of the Porte and the Powers. Her Majesty's Government are, at the same time, deeply sensible of the importance to Great Britain and other neutral Powers of preventing the Canal being injured or blocked up by either of the belligerents in the present war, and your Excellency is at liberty to inform M. de Lesseps that Her Majesty's Government has intimated to the Russian Ambassador that an attempt to blockade, or otherwise to interfere with the Canal or its approaches, would be regarded by Her Majesty's Government as a menace to India, and as a grave injury to the commerce of the world. I added that, on both those grounds any such step, which Her Majesty's Government hope and fully believe there is no intention on the part of either belligerent to take, would be incompatible with the maintenance by Her Majesty's Government of an attitude of passive neutrality. Her Majesty's Government will cause the Porte and the Khedive to be made acquainted with the intimation thus conveyed to the Russian Government, and Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople and Agent in Egypt will be instructed to state that Her Majesty's Government will expect that the Porte and the Khedive will on their side abstain from impeding the navigation of the Canal, or adopting any measures likely to injure the Canal or its approaches, and that Her Majesty's Government are firmly determined not to permit the Canal to be made the scene of any combat or other warlike operations. In stating this to M. de Lesseps, your Excellency will explain that Her Majesty's Government have thus taken the initiative in regard to the protection of the Canal on account of the pressing necessity, as regards British interests, of maintaining the security of the Canal, and they do not doubt that if the Canal were to be seriously menaced, the French and other Governments would adopt a similar course.

Subjoined is the "International Agreement" referred to above, submitted by M. de Lesseps:—"Since the opening of the Suez Canal, in 1869, complete liberty of transit through the Canal and the ports connected with it has been respected as well for ships of war as for vessels of commerce, and since the Franco-German War this has been done even by belligerent Powers. The Governments are now agreed to preserve the same liberty to every ship, whether of war or of commerce, under every flag and without any exception—it being understood that ships of war are subject to the necessary territorial provisions to prevent vessels in transit landing troops or munitions of war on Egyptian soil."

Naval and Military.

A telegram has been received at the Admiralty announcing that Vice-Admiral Ryder was at Yokohama on the 4th of June; he will leave for Hakodadi and the Russian Settlements on the 20th.

The Channel Squadron, consisting of the Minotaur, 17, armour-plated ship, bearing the flag of Vice Admiral Sir Frederick Beauchamp P. Seymour, K.C.B., commanding the squadron; Thunderer, 4, double screw armour-plated turret ship; Achilles, 16, armour-plated ship; Lord Warden, 18, armour-plated ship; Black Prince, 28, armour-plated ship, bearing the flag of Rear Admiral W. M. Dowell, C.B., second in command; Defence, 16, armour-plated ship; Resistance, 16, armour-plated ship; and Valiant, has left Plymouth on the annual cruise, which will only extend at present round the British and Irish coasts.

Brevet Major W. R. Lascelles, Rifle Brigade, whose term of employment as Deputy Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General at Portsmouth will shortly expire, has been appointed Aide-de-Camp to Lieutenant-General Sir John Garvock, G.C.B., who will assume command of the Southern District on July 1. Major Lascelles served with distinction in the China War of 1860, receiving the medal and two clasps, and also in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny.

The following telegram has been received at the Admiralty from the Commander-in-Chief on the Pacific station, dated June 1, at Iquique:—"Rebel turret-ship Huascar committed piratical acts against British subjects. Shah and Amethyst engaged her off Ylo on the 29th. She escaped after dark, but so damaged as to surrender to Peruvian squadron." The Huascar was a ship of the Peruvian navy. No information as to how she got into rebel hands, or of a revolution having broken out again, has been received.

There has been a somewhat serious outbreak on the part of a section of the crew of the Alexandra, now with the Mediterranean fleet. Great discontent is said to prevail on board, owing to excessive drill and severity of punishment. The watch, which had been kept hard at work on deck about the sails on a Sunday, were ordered in the afternoon to get up ashes from the stokehole. The men also affirm that the captain ordered all the private provisions of their messes to be thrown overboard. They all refused to bring up the ashes, and the watch were made prisoners, but not till after the sights of the guns had been thrown overboard, and some of the live stock of the officers. Four of the ringleaders have been sentenced to forty-two days' imprisonment, and have been sent home. There has been considerable exaggeration in the reports of the occurrence, which has been sensationally described as a "mutiny." The facts are as above stated, the outbreak being confined to the watch in which it originated.

A series of torpedo experiments, intended to show the application of torpedoes to defensive purposes, has been given by Captain Arthur and the officers of the Naval Torpedo School, in Porchester Creek, Portsmouth Harbour. First, a steam pinnace, electrically steered, dropped a countermine, exploded by means of a slow fuse, which experiment was to illustrate the ease with which an enemy's mines could be destroyed, a countermine containing 500 lbs. of gunpowder being calculated to explode all torpedoes within a radius of 120 yards. Then a hand charge in a cask was exploded, the disc, composed of guncotton, weighing eight ounces. It is thrown at a vessel, and fired by a process similar to that of a pistol. Another experiment was with wet gun-cotton in a net. A charge of 15 lbs. was hauled away by the aid of ropes and fired with a detonator, the explosion sending up a tremendous volume of water to a considerable height. Afterwards a drifting countermine was dropped and exploded, the charge being 300 lbs. of gunpowder. This countermine has to be taken by wind and tide into an enemy's torpedoes. It was dropped from two barrels used for floating powder. The fall of the countermine was indicated by a slight explosion, and the destruction it would work amongst mines was demonstrated by the height to which a large mass of water was driven by its firing. With 2½ lb. of guncotton a chain cable of nearly 2 in. in thickness was subsequently broken—this experiment being an exemplification of the destructive power of this explosive material. It is computed that more than 100 lb. of gunpowder would not have effected the same result. The next experiment was with two outriggers with charges of 100 lb. of gunpower. They were fired from beneath a rifle-proof steel shield. The explosion was terrific, although each torpedo was fired separately. The power of the charge might be increased to 33 lb. of guncotton, which would destroy any ship with which it came in contact. Four mines of 300 lb. each, with circuit closers, were fired in succession by the striking against them of a steam launch, the bumping influence affecting their mechanical arrangements so as to complete the electric circuit. The experiments, which were regarded throughout as most successful, concluded with the simultaneous explosion of a line of 12 countermines.

The Queen has approved of the following appointments as Field-Marshals:—General Sir William Rowan, G.C.B., Colonel of the 52nd Regiment; General Sir Charles Yorke, G.C.B., Colonel-Commandant Rifle Brigade and Constable of the Tower of London; and General the Right Hon. Hugh Henry, Lord Strathnairn, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., Colonel of the Royal Horse Guards. Sir William Rowan entered the army in 1803. He served throughout the Peninsular War and at the battle of Waterloo. Sir Charles Yorke, G.C.B., Colonel-Commandant of the Rifle Brigade and Constable of the Tower of London, entered the army in 1807. He also served in the Peninsula and at Waterloo. Lord Strathnairn is the son of the late Sir George Rose, formerly Minister Plenipotentiary at Berlin and Munich. He was born in 1803, and was for many years employed in the diplomatic service, but in 1820 he entered the 19th Regiment, and received successive promotions until he became Lieutenant-Colonel and Equerry to the Duke of Cambridge in 1839. He served with distinction in the Crimean War, and during the suppression of the Indian Mutiny.

The new helmets have been sanctioned by the Commander-in-Chief. The material is of felt, with a brass spike on the top, and a brass plaque in front, consisting of a star surmounted by a crown, with the royal motto surrounding the regimental number. There is a brass scale chin-strap, and a small brass scale chain above the peak, which gives the helmet a light and handsome appearance. There is a neck-piece behind, and the peak is of the Prussian shape. There is also a new forage cap for the calvary, each class—Dragoons, Hussars, and Lancers—having a distinctive badge, which has been approved of after trial. The cavalry will be armed with revolvers.

Deputy Surgeon-General Thomas Moorhead, M.D., recently employed at Hong Kong, died at Tunbridge Wells a few days since, aged fifty-five years. He entered the Medical department of the army in 1845, and had served in the Crimean and Abyssinian campaigns.

The German squadron, under the command of Rear-Admiral Batsch, viz., the Kaiser, 10; flagship Deutschland, 10; Friedrick Carl, 16; and Preussen, 4, left Plymouth Sound on the 6th inst. for the Mediterranean.

Assistant-Paymaster McLean, of the Active, has been tried at Portsmouth, by court-martial, for desertion and appropriating £10 to his own use. He was dismissed the service with disgrace.

A Greenwich Hospital Pension of £50 per annum has been awarded to Major Thomas Waters, Royal Marines, it having fallen vacant by the death of Colonel J. K. Willson.

The launch of the Japanese corvette, building by the Milford Haven Shipbuilding Company, is fixed for the 12th inst.

LONDON: MONDAY, JUNE 11, 1877.

IN another column we publish an important despatch with regard to the Suez Canal. It will be seen that M. DE LESSEPS proposed to Lord DERBY a "project" for the neutralisation to be adopted by the European Governments in concert, but that Her MAJESTY'S Government have declined to adopt that project, and have informed M. DE LESSEPS of the intimation made by them to the Russian Ambassador that any attempt to blockade or otherwise to interfere with the Canal or its approaches would be regarded by them as a menace to India. It is satisfactory to note that the course pursued by Lord DERBY was approved by the shareholders at the meeting in Paris.

WE publish in another column the award made by the Arbitrator in the case of the AGRA BANK V. MACCALL, which has been so long under consideration. It will be seen that, although when the case was referred, all imputations against the defendant personally were withdrawn, judgment has been given against him. We trust, however, now that the Bank have—for their own benefit, and that of other banks—vindicated the principle of the necessity of strict adherence to instructions, the matter will be allowed to rest, and that the defendant may not be pressed for the sum which has been awarded, amounting to over £10,000.

WE learn with pleasure that the statements which were some time back made, to the effect that the idea of establishing an India and Colonial Museum would have to be abandoned in consequence of a want of support in official quarters, were premature, if not altogether unfounded. Mr. GRANT DUFF will shortly bring the matter to the notice of the House of Commons.

WE are glad to notice that the Government is quite on the alert as to the possibility of difficulties in the Far East, growing out of the present war. It will be seen by a telegram under our Naval and Military Intelligence that Admiral RYDER was to leave Yokohama for Hakodadi and the Russian Settlements on the 20th inst.

MR. DAVID JENKINS, M.P., has given notice of a motion in the House of Commons with reference to the high rate for pilotage levied by the Suez Canal Company, which he holds to be contrary to the spirit of the International Convention of 1873.

PROGRESS IN SIAM.

SIAM is a kingdom which, as most of our readers are aware, has not realised all those golden dreams of commercial successes that were formed in ignorance of the real nature and wants of its people when the country was first opened by Sir JOHN BOWRING'S treaty more than twenty years ago. Labour is dear and bad, partly owing to the former existence of slavery, and the trade has for many reasons drifted into Chinese hands. Still it is satisfactory to know, as we do now by long experience, that there is in Siam a growing demand for English wares, a supply of rice and other staples which makes the export trade more than pay for the imports, and, above all, a steady desire on the part of those who rule to develop their resources and progress in civilisation. Let us add that the Siamese are a kindly, intelligent people, constant in their friendliness to Great Britain, and so little given to crimes of violence that European life is perhaps safer in Bangkok than it is in London. We are glad to have been able lately to make public in our columns the useful and energetic steps which the King of SIAM is taking to promote the welfare of his dominions. The repression of the robbers who haunt the jungles along the remote trade-routes notoriously taxes the energies of our own officials in Burmah, but the latter are now seconded in that difficult duty far more ably than was once the rule, and very stern measures, indeed, have recently been taken by the Siamese provincial authorities to make an example of the dacoits. Roads constructed with judgment and economy tend in the highest degree to raise the value of land, to develop agriculture, encourage trade, and augment the revenues. Nothing can, therefore, be wiser than the scheme which is now on foot at Bangkok for bringing Korat, by means of a tramway, into quick and easy communication with the capital. The Korat provinces are among the richest and best parts of Siam, yet the chiefs reach those districts by an elephant track, and commodities are conveyed between Korat and the river bank by paniers on oxen. A little blasting-powder and engineering skill will work wonders in this direction. The construction of telegraphs, too, so as to bring Bangkok into direct and immediate connection with Europe, and with all the great emporiums of trade in her immediate vicinity, would be an achievement the benefits of which it is impossible to over-estimate. What, for instance, can be of more prime necessity than for a State to defend the wealth of its subjects (the wealth of the citizens, for example, is the true safeguard against famine), and in a kingdom such as Siam, where the staple export trade is, from the nature of things, a most speculative one, telegraphic intelligence of the fluctuations in the foreign rice markets of the ports which are over-stocked with rice, and of the places where a scarcity is apprehended, would be of immeasurable consequence?

The protection of property and life from fire is another matter of which we are glad to observe that the King of SIAM is not losing sight; and, indeed, look which way we will, there are signs that the Monarch and his Ministers are setting earnestly to work to effect improvements. In an Asiatic country progress can rarely hope to be rapid; solidity and the certainty that the undertaking set in hand are such as will bear fruit should be the main considerations. Hurried changes rouse disaffection, and make matters worse than before. A good sound metallic currency, abundance of the circulating medium, and smaller change in plenty, are things vital to commerce, and we rejoice therefore to learn that the Siamese have already put their currency on a sound convenient basis they have hitherto had the wisdom also to avoid foreign or internal debts, and we hope that they will long continue to follow this policy, effecting improvements with what speed they may, but steering clear of public liabilities incurred for works which perhaps prove unremunerative. Adventurers from abroad, whose sole object is personal plunder, will no doubt flock to Bangkok, but we recommend the Siamese to turn a deaf ear to all their shallow glowing representations. The experience of an intelligent native ruler is commonly the safest guide to what is really for the good of the people. The temptation to issue paper-money should also be resisted. Bank-notes are as useful as they are profitable in a society where commercial credit stands high, and where the institutions have been so thoroughly organised as to afford reasonable protection against fraud. But in Siam the issue of bank-notes would expose the Government to the wiles of Chinese forgers, and damage the reputation of the country by the consequential financial entanglements. The development of the mines, we understand, has the attention of the Government, and is only a question of time. Some good engineers have been engaged to assist in the matter. We heartily approve the course which the Siamese authorities are pursuing, and we wish them all the success which their efforts merit; but in taking leave of them for the present let us offer them one friendly suggestion—It is this: let the incidence of taxation be inquired into, and let the sources of public revenue be readjusted. Nothing so strangles commercial enterprise, and, by consequence, reduces the exchequer receipts, as a clumsy, oppressive fiscal system.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S MEETING.

THE proceedings at the half-yearly meeting of the P. and O. Company, which took place on the 5th inst., did not present anything especially new, but are satisfactory as showing that the directors are steadily persevering in the policy which they have for some time past proposed to themselves, and which has met with the approval of the shareholders, and of those of the general public who feel an interest in the prosperity and success of this important institution. While preserving due economy in the working of the company's business, the directors are at the same time careful to maintain the high standard of their vessels both for carrying cargo and for the accommodation of passengers; and are steadily moving with the times—unfortunately by no means easy ones—and replacing such vessels as are no longer suitable to the altered state of trade by such as have all the advantages which have been introduced by modern naval architecture. The sale of the Columbian, and the order given to Messrs. CAIRD and Co. for the Kaiser i-Hind, a magnificent vessel of 4,200 tons, formed the main features in the matters discussed in the Chairman's speech, and to judge from the particulars given, the Company may certainly be congratulated upon the prospect of an accession to their fleet of which they will have just reason to be proud. As regards the working of the Company and its financial position, the explanations of the various matters set forth in the report were in every way encouraging. As the Chairman observed, the dividend was satisfactory, considering the continued great stagnation of trade which has had to be faced. As much as £70,500 of the debentures had been paid off since the last report, and the directors hoped to be able to pay off a further sum without being called upon to replace it by the debenture stock, which, however, they have authority to issue, should it appear desirable to do so. The efforts which have been made to place the Company upon such a basis as will enable it to meet the altered state of affairs in the present day are thus steadily succeeding; and there can now no longer be any doubt in the minds of the most sceptical that it will be able to hold its own and maintain its old prestige, notwithstanding the persistent and insidious efforts which are made by the issue of pamphlets and the like discreditable tactics to damage its reputation. It might have been thought that the exemployé of the Company who has so long indulged in this amiable amusement would by this time have seen the folly of persevering in what it has become only too evident everybody either at the meeting or away from it regards as miserable and contemptible attempts to do injury. It may, however, not be unreasonable now to hope that for the future this gentleman will show as much discretion out of doors as he did in the room, where, though temperately and courteously challenged by one of the shareholders to explain what possible reasons he might have for the issue of his last brochure, he had the commendable prudence to refrain from doing so.

OPIUM AND TOBACCO.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I fully concur in the regret which you express that Dr. Ayres, the Colonial Surgeon of Hong Kong, should have made so ill-considered and ill-advised a statement as that "the use of Opium in moderation is no more harmful than tobacco." My own experience and the experience of all who have had an opportunity of judging goes diametrically against any such opinion, and I can confidently appeal to the numerous readers of your paper both at home and in China to confirm this statement. I am not at all prepared to say that opium-smoking is as injurious as has been represented by some of its more energetic opponents; but most unquestionably it is far more so than tobacco; and even those who do not endorse all that is said as to the extreme injuriousness of the drug must regret that so exaggerated a statement has been made on the other side. Dr. Ayres seems to be a homœopathist, at least on this subject, and on the principle of "similia similibus curantur," seems to think that he can correct one exaggeration by himself making another.—Yours faithfully,

London, June 6, 1877. IN MEDIO TUTISSIMUS.

MISSIONARIES AND MORALS IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Your correspondent "T.," who is evidently either a Missionary gentleman himself or so friendly to that class that he may be fairly looked upon as their advocate, takes exception to the remarks which you made as to the inadvisability of missionaries seizing such opportunities as they have for coming before the public, in order to fire shafts at their countrymen in the East. I cannot but admit—and I do so with great pleasure—that your correspondent treats the subject in a thoroughly fair and reasonable spirit; but at the same time I think he goes farther than common sense or justice will warrant in his defence of the intemperate harangues which are occasionally made from the platform at Exeter Hall, and other similar places. I would be the last to wish to see any pressure brought to bear upon Missionaries or any other people to prevent them from frankly stating their views and opinions upon all subjects; but my objection to the speeches that are frequently made by them is that they are exaggerated in themselves, and are addressed to people unacquainted with the circumstances to which they relate—in a word, that they are both objectively and subjectively wide of the strict truth. People at home, judging from the nature of the society in which they live, are unable to appreciate the necessary shortcomings of places far away, and, unlike your correspondent, make no allowance whatever for "the absence of much that civilises and refines" those here, while they also overlook the great publicity which the acts of private persons of necessity attain in small places, and which in China brings into unpleasant prominence much that is fortunately hidden from, at all events, the general view here. Your correspondent "T." appeals to any reasonable and sober-minded person at home whether "there is not very much that requires correcting in the way of life in China"—and in return I would also appeal to the said sober-minded persons whether (with far less excuse) there is not very much that requires correcting in the way of life at home. If allowance be made for the different circumstances attaching to each place, I suspect the truth is, we find things very much the same in them both, and it is neither wise nor charitable to indulge in strong invective, and to hold residents in the East up to reprobation with regard to actions which, however deeply they are to be deplored, differ rather in form than in substance from what unfortunately we find in all parts of the world. In speaking of such matters to audiences who know nothing of the surrounding circumstances, justice demands that those circumstances should be explained; but, in lieu of doing this, Missionaries too often make sensational speeches which, addressed to hearers unable to supply what is omitted from their own knowledge, have the effect of representing matters far worse as than they really are. This habit I should like to see corrected; and I am confident that by doing so Missionaries will find they will greatly increase their influence in combating the evils upon which they are in the habit of enlarging, and which I need scarcely say I deplore as heartily as they do. Exaggeration and deviation from truth, even in the best cause, have never worked any real good, and I cannot but think that Christian influence would have been much more felt in China but for the unfortunate habit of overstating the facts, to which you have drawn attention.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

London, May 30, 1877. OLD CHINA.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS ASSOCIATION.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I observe that you call attention to the split which has occurred among the members of the Straits Association, and as I have some acquaintance with what has taken place I may perhaps be able to throw a little light on the subject. Some of the members assume that they are the true conservatives of the Association, resisting attempted modifications of its original character; and secondly, they seem to regard the interests of the Colony as in the hands of the non-official members of Councils, and to be desirous of leaving them there. Now, as to the first point; the history of the Straits Settlements Association is a sufficient answer. Anyone who recalls the activity which charactised it, some years since, when grievances were new and keenly felt, will know that almost every step taken was taken at home, and was not suggested, much less dictated from abroad. The criticism of colonial expenditure, the protest in favour of economy, the successful warfare waged on behalf of the independence of the judges, which wrung from Lord Granville a speech in the House of Lords, all these points, and many more, were the result of thought and action by the Association in London. The members of it have always claimed to be representatives and not mere delegates, the position to which it is now proposed to relegate them. As to the second contention, gentlemen who urge that the non-official members of Council are a sufficient representation of the general interests, must shut their eyes to facts and to the tradition of the Colonial-office. In the eyes of the Secretary of State for the Colonies there is but one medium of communication between him and the colonists—I speak, of course, of Crown Colonies that—medium is the Governor, and to imagine that any adequate return is got from the services of the non-official members is contrary to the experience of every Crown Colony. Even if it were the case, the increasing difficulty of finding the best men in a colony, ready and able to give up their time to the work of legislation should make it evident that it is wise for the colony to utilise help wherever it is offered. Unless I misread the signs of the times, the Straits Settlements will need help soon enough, and to attempt at this moment, to paralyse the exertions of the Association is a mistaken, however sincere a policy. It is time, at all events, that this policy were put before the public in the Straits, and their opinion taken upon it; time also, I think, that the majority of the Association here should go on with any measure decided on, even if a small but influential minority dissent; for as I have said, with all respect to those composing the minority, the grounds of their dissent are untenable.—Yours faithfully,

SALES TO ARRIVE IN JAPAN.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—In an article under the above heading in a recent issue of your journal there are remarks regarding our Japan firm and Mr. Willcox which are so manifestly calculated to create a false impression that we beg you to give space in your columns for the counter views we desire to express. Few of your readers who are acquainted with the import trade in Japan will deny that the "custom" or understanding exists that if there is, as you say, only a trivial difference in value, goods sold to arrive, not equalling the sales, samples are taken delivery of at a fair valuation for such difference. The difference in question was 25c. per piece, or 2·84 per cent. on the sales price. Mr. Willcox did not offer this allowance because he thought it a just one, but simply because "the market had fallen 90c. to $1.00 per piece, and the defendant would not come to terms." This is in evidence, and yet you assume that the allowance of 25c. was made solely on account of the inferiority of quality, and call it "a large difference." To any expert in Velvets it is well known to be impossible to get 300 pcs. finished exactly alike in shade of colour, cutting, &c., and certainly a difference of only 2.84 per cent. (even if admitted to be a fair valuation) is not "a large one." Your remarks on the "Opposite Case," where a Japanese sells silk or tea, are, we submit, entirely contrary to the experience of the Trade. Few parcels of either article are delivered up to sample, and "rejections" of the whole, or part, or "allowances" are the rule and not the exception. As the interest of a client were involved, Mr. Willcox was advised not to accept the decision of the Japanese Court, but to hold the bargain money of $150 subject to the decision of the only Court whose decisions are binding on him, viz., the English Court. The result is known, and few will doubt that the law, as well as justice, was as fairly administered in the English as in the Japanese Court. As we understand it, a similar point is involved in a case in the Silk Trade here, shortly to be argued in the London Courts. Pending decision in that case it would be presumptuous to argue which of the Courts in Japan has given a correct verdict.—We are, &c.,

THE CHINA MERCHANTS' REPORT.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—No doubt, as you observe, the China Merchants' Steam Company's Report is an important document in its way; but I scarcely think, if the facts set forth in it are even to be fully relied upon, that it can be taken as giving any very flourishing picture of the state of affairs. Time will show what the Company can do when they get to the matter of repairs and renewal of the fleet. If all that we know of the Chinese can be taken as a guide in this matter, it is here where the shoe is certain to be first found pinching. The Chinese, shrewd men though they are, seldom allow sufficient for the inroads of time, and are most unwilling to expend money to repair them. The likelihood is that the Chinese shareholders in the Company and the native officials who now support it will begin to get a little impatient when funds are wanted, as they undoubtedly will be, for this purpose.

I cannot also but regret the rather childishly anti-foreign tone of the report. It is scarcely wise, even when one's ground is unmistakably strong, to invoke opposition needlessly; it is clearly foolish to do so when one's ground is at best of a doubtful character.—Your obedient servant,

HOO-LOONG.

London, June 4, 1877.

Literature, Science, &c.

The war-note recently sounded in political circles has found an echo even in the peaceful realms of Literature. The chief activity in the publishing trade has been in what are called "War Maps," and beyond these there is hardly a noticeable book either in preparation or for sale. The "Bible and the Koran," "The History of the Ottoman Empire," "Travels in Russia," "The Slavonic Provinces of Turkey in Europe," and one or two more books, more or less referring to the present struggle, seem to be those chiefly interesting to the public just now. Poets, of late years unusually prolific, are not to be restrained; Mr. Austin Dobson issues, through Messrs. King, a new and very welcome volume of his neatly finished and scholarly verse—verse, the structure of which ought to be studied; Mr. Aubrey de Vere sends out the first volume of his poems, and the very singular, and in some cases most original, poems of Matthew Arnold are issued in a new edition of two volumes. Lovers of modern art are promised a treat by Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin, who will shortly publish "The Royal Academy Album," consisting of a series of photographs of some of the works in this year's Academy. Mr. Gladstone's speeches on the Eastern question will be issued in a popular form.

The Academy notices that the tenth number of Mélusine contains two long and interesting original communications. The one is an article, occupying ten columns, by M. H. de Charency, on a number of American legends in which a subterranean origin is attributed to the human race. The other is a reply by M. Loys Brueyre to a letter which M. Emmanuel Cosquin contributed to the seventh number of Mélusine on the origin of Popular Tales. Commenting upon the story of the two hunchbacks and the fairies, generally connected in the West of Europe with a song in which the days of the week are named, M. Cosquin compared it with the similar story in Mr. Mitford's Tales of Old Japan about two wen-marked guests at a fairy gathering, and then proceeded to argue in favour of the Asiatic origin of European folk-tales. M. Brueyre disputes the correctness of M. Cosquin's views, believing that the Japanese tale has been borrowed from Europe. But, since the publication of Mr. Mitford's book, Mr. C. W. Goodwin has communicated to the Asiatic Society of Japan (in a paper read on March 17, 1875) a complete version of the Japanese tale in question, taken from a Japanese work entitled Stories Omitted from the Uji Collection, of which Mr. Goodwin says:—"This book was first printed in 1664, but is supposed to have been written in the thirteenth century, the author being unknown." Several other European variants of the story are given in the present number of Mélusine.

Tropical Agriculture. By P. L. SIMMONDS. London: E and F. N. Spon and Co., Charing Cross.—This valuable work of reference upon the products of tropical climates, which we noticed some time back as being about to appear, has now been issued. The work is excellently compiled and printed, and, as already noticed, will form a reliable standard book both for general reading and for reference.

Mr. Henry Dyer, C.E.M., A.B., &c., of the Imperial College of Engineering in Japan, has issued the Calendar for the Session of 1877. The length of the course for the students is six years. The curriculum is divided into three parts—(1) The general and scientific course, taught during the first and second years; (2) the technical course, taught during the third and fourth years; (3) the practical course, taught during the fifth and sixth years. As far as possible, the students are taught by lectures, and no special text-books are adopted, the object being to prevent mere book-cramming. In the engineering library there is a selection of engineering tools, and in the drawing office the teaching is of a thoroughly practical character from the commencement of the course. Each department has a special lecture room attached to it, so that the professors divide the time between these and the designing room. The museum building, which contains a large collection of models, &c., was originally erected for the college. The whole of the Public Works Department is open to the students, and the engineering works of Akabane are directly connected with the college, and under the management of Mr. Dyer. At present they comprise fitting, pattern, and machine shops, and foundry, and give employment to about 320 workmen, exclusive of the students. Large erecting and boiler shops are now being built, and it is intended to extend the works considerably. From the foregoing it will be seen that the students have much better opportunities for practical education than those in many European technical colleges.

The Geographical Magazine for the present month contains among other interesting matter, an excellent map designed to assist in following out the military operations now being carried on in Asia. It will be of considerable use in conveying a general idea of the country, though it is admitted that it possesses but few claims to accuracy, as, of the countries delineated, only a small portion has been made known to us through the surveys of Russian officers and of other Europeans, some of whom were in the Turkish service. Allowance has also to be made for the short time available for its production. A glance at the numerous altitudes indicated will convey some idea of the difficulties which the country must offer to the movements of troops.

The Picturesque Tourist. London: Hamilton, Adams, and Co.—This little book, which is published at the moderate price of a shilling, is one of the most pleasing and useful hand-books which has for some time been issued. As its title, "A Handy Guide-book Round the World," indicates, it is designed to give information to those who purpose to make the tour of the globe by any of the well known routes, and is of course equally valuable to those who wish to travel only part of the distance—as, for instance, to or from China or Japan, or the intermediate countries, by either the Pacific or the Overland route. The work has evidently been compiled with great care, and, as an instance of its accuracy, we may note that the new ports of Woohoo, Wenchow and Ichang, to be opened under the Chefoo Convention, are mentioned in the summary of places to be visited in China.

The illustrations and maps are well executed, and the book may be read with pleasure and advantage for general information, as well as by intending travellers.

The Friend of China (organ of the Anti-Opium Society) for June notices the various reviews of the address which was issued some time back to the Chinese people. It appears that for the most part the professions of a desire to put down the traffic are looked upon with suspicion, if not discredited altogether. Many of the Chinese writers put but little bridle on their invective; and some of the criticisms give small encouragement to those who hope to benefit China by moral movements. One of the critics says.

In Europe Russia is the largest country. The profit derived from opium takes the lead in Europe. Can Russia for a single day cease to think of India? If opium is not prohibited, Russia will certainly get India. If India is lost, England's power will be in danger. The English are clever enough, and have devised this complete scheme, whereby to dissipate the jealousy of all the kingdoms and stay the designs of Russia. This is capital diplomacy, and in addition gets the credit of a high morality in China. Capital, capital. If this project works, England will flourish!"

Upon this the Friend of China writes as follows :—

The strength of the conviction that our address is not sincere appears from the absurd reasonings of which the above is a specimen. Anything seems more credible than that the English nation should hate injustice and pity Chinese suffering. This utter inability to believe that England can be moved by any regard for China's welfare may be partly accounted for by the total indifference of the Chinese to the concerns of outside nations; but unhappily it is fortified by the history of the opium trade. Without this dark stain upon our national character the Chinese would have with difficulty given us credit for a real care for their interests as well as our own. While this stain remains, it would be ridiculous for us to complain that they think us a nation inaccessible to other than selfish motives.

The above statement is undoubtedly conceived in a fair spirit; but we think an error is made in considering that the Chinese are incapable of believing in anything being done by England for the benefit of China. The natives there are shrewd reasoners, and doubtless perceive that the first step necessary is to move the Governments of both countries to act; and that until this is done any attempts in other directions must be useless.

The number for June of Street Life in London, by J. Thomson, F.R.G.S. (formerly of China), published by Samson Low, and Co., contains illustrations of "The Dramatic Shoe-Black," "Tickets, the Card Dealer," and an "Old Clothes' Shop in St. Giles's." They are all characteristic of London life, and the story of Jacobus Parker, the shoe-black, is a touching history of long-continued misfortune and of manly resignation to the inevitable.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the Institution of Civil Engineers on May 29 Mr. G. R. Stephenson, President, in the chair, a paper was read "On an Economical Method of Manufacturing Charcoal for Gunpowder," by Mr. G. Haycraft.—At the Quekett Microscopical, on May 25, H. Lee, Esq., President in the chair, a paper, "On Improvements in the Ordinary Condenser," by Mr. W. K. Bridgeman, was read. It described the result of his investigations as to the best form of diaphragm to secure equal illumination of the binocular fields of view; he also exhibited specimens of a new tint of glass for use as a ground under strong glare of light. A paper was also read, "On the Process of Staining Vegetable Tissues," by Mr. W. H. Gilburt, in which he minutely described the best methods of bleaching and double staining, and gave the results of his experience in the preparation and mounting of specimens so treated.—At the Physical, on May 26, Prof. G. C. Foster, President, in the chair, Lieut.-Col. Campbell explained and exhibited a double slit which he has employed fo measuring the distances between the lines in the spectrum, and finds of great service in cases where the illumination is so slight as to preclude the possibility of using the ordinary micrometer.

THE LATE RAJAH BROOKE.

The following notice of the late Sir James Brooke appears in the "Life of Harriet Martineau," Vol. III., p. 346, and is of interest in connection with the late assertions of Mr. Gladstone :—

Sir James Brooke devoted his life and fortune to the service of the natives of the Eastern Archipelago, and was made a prince by them, because he had fostered their industry, stimulated their commerce, counselled their foreign policy, protected them from piracy, and ruled them in their own native customs and ideas, using these meanwhile as a basis for reforms, and resisting all efforts of the Dutch, English, French, or Belgians to settle in the country in great bodies, or to make it a European Colony. A man so high-minded and devoted, a man of such practical genius and utter disinterestedness, a born ruler, was sure to be maligned and calumniated; and it was while he was striving under this load of calumny to obtain such recognition by his native country as might best enable him to serve his adopted one, that Harriet Martineau consulted with his counsel, Mr. Templer, studied his case, received him at her home, and wrote that able article in the "Westminster Review" which, showing her thorough understanding and strong grasp of the whole matter, made him desire her action as a legislator for the Eastern Archipelago. But her various other duties precluded such an effort.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

The half-yearly general meeting of the Shareholders in the P. and O. Company took place at their offices in Leadenhall-street on the 5th inst; Mr. Fane de Salis in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the report, said he would offer a few remarks on the past half-year's operations, and would commence by adverting to the subject which interested them most closely—viz., the position of their fleet. He was happy to be able to report that it continued in a high state of efficiency, and that through its agency the postal service confided to them by the Government—the most extended service the world had yet known had during the half-year been carried out with punctuality, to the satisfaction of the Post-office and the public. No breakdown in machinery or other mishaps had occurred, and under Providence the working of the half-year had been marked by an entire immunity from maritime casualty, which, having regard to the large amount of freight and passengers carried, as well as the vast expanse of ocean traversed by their ships—upwards of a million of miles—while it reflected credit on the excellent system of ship equipment inaugurated by their executive officers, pointed to the discipline of their ships and proved the professional skill and vigilance of their commanders and officers. It would be noted from the report that they had ordered a new large steamship which had been named the Kaisar I Hind, after the title assumed by Her Majesty in that part of her Empire with which they were so closely connected. Strictly speaking, they might have deferred ordering any new ship for the present; but it had ever been the policy of the company—a policy to which its past success was in great part due—to be always rather in advance than behind the possible requirements of the important public service they had undertaken. Acting on this view, and influenced also by the low price of iron, they had decided on reinforcing the fleet by ordering the Kaisar. Several firms of eminence tendered for her construction, and the task of building her was ultimately allotted to the well-known house of Caird and Co. Fitted with the most recent improvements in steam machinery, she would be the largest ship ever yet owned by the company. Her dimensions would be as follows:—She would be 400ft. long, with 42ft. beam. She would measure 4,200 tons, and berth 200 passengers. Her engines would possess 700-horse power, and she was to have a guaranteed speed of 15 knots, equal to nearly 18 miles, an hour on the measured mile; and she would take high rank amongst the steam-ships of the mercantile marine of England. One of the main objects of the directors in designing this vessel had been to secure for her a quality in which many of their ships were to some extent deficient, namely, the largest possible carrying capacity; and she would accordingly carry 3,000 tons of cargo, besides coal sufficient to propel her for fifteen days at her ordinary speed. In every sense of the word she was a ship built for the purposes of commerce and peace; but there were other purposes which in case of need she would subserve. Admirably adapted from the strength of her decks to support the heavy armament which the Chief Constructor of the Navy, in his recently-published paper, recommended for large merchant steamers—namely, two 64-pounder guns forward and the same number aft, she would belong to a class of ships available alike for the defence of our harbours and coasts, or the protection of our commerce on the ocean. Armed as Mr. Burnaby recommended, she would rank among the ships destined to put down the Alabamas and Sumters of future naval wars. No privateer would either approach or escape her, and though quite unequal to contend with an ironclad, from the weight of her guns conjoined to her high speed, an unarmoured frigate would find that she was an adversary not altogether to be contemned. Whether their ships would ever be required by the Government for any other than postal service was not a subject they had met to discuss. He would, however, observe that their fleet comprised not one but many ships of the class of the Kaisar; it constituted no inconsiderable portion of the National Auxiliary Naval Reserve; it was also maintained without cost of any kind to the public, and under the terms of their contract it was available to the Government at an hour's notice—a fact which in times of peace people were apt to forget. The Admiralty had but to touch the wires when, from every port in the East where England had an arsenal, from Malta, from Bombay, from Calcutta and Hong Kong, from Melbourne and Sydney, their ships, whether armed or as transports, would at the shortest date issue to place themselves under the orders of Her Majesty's navy. The services rendered by their fleet to the public in times past were matter of history. In the Crimean War, in the Indian Mutiny, and in the Abyssinian Expedition their ships had rendered efficient aid to the State, and if their services were again required they would again be promptly tendered in support of the honour of the Crown and the country. (Hear, hear.) After adverting to the sale of the Columbian and the refit of the Hindostan, which vessel on her recent trial trip had averaged nearly fourteen knots, the Chairman said he had to congratulate them on the late extension of their postal contract with the Italian Government, for which they were much indebted to the exertions of Mr. Sutherland, one of the managing directors, who had made a journey to Italy for the express purpose of arranging this matter. On the part of the board he wished to take this opportunity of stating publicly how highly they appreciated the friendly feelings recently expressed towards this company in the Parliament of Italy, and more particularly how grateful they felt for the generous support accorded to them by the city of Venice. Whether their connection with that historic port—the cradle of the commerce of mediæval Europe—was destined to be long or to be short, they would ever retain the liveliest recollection of the warm and friendly reception accorded to their flag by the Queen of the Adriatic; they would also ever esteem it a high honour to have been permitted to be among the first to reopen for her her ancient communications with the East, and thus to assist with their ships in restoring her to the high position she occupied of old in the commerce of the world. (Hear, hear.) The accounts for the year would be laid before the proprietors as customary at the annual meeting next December; in the interim, he might state that the receipts showed some improvement over those of last year. The Indian exchanges had been less adverse, and they had carried a considerable amount of specie. He wished he could say they had received for it the same freight which used to be paid in the old pre-Canal, the halcyon, days of the company, for then they would be able to offer them a larger dividend than that recommended by the report. That dividend was no sufficient return on capital invested in steam shipping; nevertheless, under the circumstances of the case it was viewed as satisfactory by the directors, and it would be satisfactory to them when they remembered the stagnation which had affected every branch of the trade, and which still pressed with special severity on the shipping interest. Having regard also to the active competition they had to meet, as well as to the difficulties they had to contend with arising out of the opening of the Canal, as men of business they would see that no large dividends could for the present be expected. He could assure them the most rigid economy was being enforced in all departments. Those reserves also which were absolutely necessary to maintain the fleet in its present high state of efficiency and the company in a sound financial position had the anxious attention of the board. Since they last met £70,500 of the debenture or floating debt had been paid off, and he hoped the greater part of it would be liquidated prior to the expiry of their present contract, to be reissued, if the extension of the company's operations required it, in the shape of debenture stock under the powers contained in their last charter; a mode of raising capital which the directors considered better adapted to the circumstances of a shipping association than that of borrowing on terminable debentures. After passing a high eulogium on the memory of Captain Henry, the company's superintendent at Bombay, who had been cut off by an accident in the prime of his intellectual life, the chairman expressed his readiness to reply to the inquiries of any proprietor, and concluded by moving the adoption of the report.

Mr. THORNTON, C.B., seconded the motion.

Dr. BEATTIE said that two circulars concerning the Company's business had again been issued. The one was signed by "A Holder of 150 Shares," and the other was from Captain Bain, who he found was the registered proprietor of exactly one £20 share in the Company. He could see, and everyone could see, the mischief which such circulars were calculated to work; and, as Captain Bain was present, he would ask him to state what his object was in issuing at some expense to himself pamphlets for the benefit of other people, who did not thank him for so doing. Among other things he stated that the Company's vessels could not take the mails at the required speed. This was an entirely unfounded statement. The mails viâ Brindisi were always within the time, and the vessels could go at greater speed if, upon grounds of economy of fuel, it were not considered advisable to refrain from doing so. He could not see what Captain Bain imagined would be the result of his pamphlets. Did he think that the shareholders would in consequence call upon the directors to resign, or that those gentlemen would retire of their own motion? (Laughter.) He must, however, have some object, and he had better state to the meeting what it was.

Mr. HOVEDER made some objection to the vessel now building being included in the company's fleet; but the CHAIRMAN in reply pointed out that it was noted as being in course of construction.

Mr. JONES congratulated the shareholders on the report, and said he felt confident that the dividend had been fairly earned. He inquired, with reference to the new steamer under construction, whether the directors had thought of the possible advisability of having the shaft made of "compressed steel," which was less liable to injury than other.—The CHAIRMAN said that it was impossible with the large interests which the company had at stake for them to make experiments. If they commenced doing so they might soon easily expend over £50,000 a year in that manner. He could assure the speaker that Messrs. Caird were as anxious for their own reputation as for the company's benefit that all the improvements possible should be introduced into the new vessel.

After a cordial vote of thanks to the chairman, directors and staff of the company, the meeting terminated.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JUNE 5.

The summer has now come in full earnest, and rather sooner than was anticipated. Since last Sunday we have had really oppressive heat, the thermometer showing 25 degrees R. in the shade, and to-day it is still higher. At the same time a drying up easterly wind has set in, and a shower of rain would be most welcome. On the whole, the weather of late has been very favourable to the growing crops as well as to the orchards, and the harvest may still turn out at least a middling one, notwithstanding the cold weather of March and April.

The statistics of emigration from Hamburg to transatlantic ports, especially the United States, for the first five months of the present year, have now been published, and they prove that the movement of the German population to the westward is still falling off. The total number of emigrants shipped here during the period mentioned amounts to 8,643, against 11,754 in the corresponding period of last year. During the month of May the number of emigrants was 3,272, of which 2,047 went direct, and 461 via England to New York, and 483 in two sailing ships to English colonies, namely, 228 to Cape Town, and 255 to Australia.

The German Squadron, under command of Rear-Admiral Batsch, left Wilhelmshafen on the 30th of May, but without the despatch boat Falke, in the engines of which just before leaving some defect was found, which will involve a fortnight's delay to that vessel. It is somewhat strange that the Koenig Wilhelm, ironclad, has never been put into service; this formidable vessel, one of the largest ever built, has now been lying idle since 1871. It is thought that there must be something wrong with this frigate, as otherwise, being the fastest of all the German fleet, she certainly would not be thus neglected.

Last Sunday a great rowing-match took place on the river above the City, the distance being 4,500 metres, which was made quickest by a ten-oared gig, in 16 minutes 1 sec. The annual sailing regatta on the river, which is arranged by the "Nordd. Regatta Verein," is to take place on the 17th inst. We are very desirous to see English sportsmen taking part in this match, the more so as there is one yacht here named the Welle, which is so exceptionally fast that she has hitherto never been conquered. On the 3rd inst. a deputation of the Great Farmers' Association of the Prussian Province of Posen left the capital of that Province for London, to confer with the British Parliamentary Committee about the English Cattle Export Laws which are rather of a prohibitive character as regards German dealers. An outbreak of cattle plague has occurred at Petrikan, in Poland, some miles from the Prussian frontier. All precautionary measures observed by the German Government have been taken to prevent the mischief extending.

During the early part of the past week the absence of any important news of the seat of war, as well as the half monthly settlement, exerted an unfavourable influence; but during the last few days a firmer feeling has set in on higher quotations from Frankfort, but lower reports from London afterwards had a depressing influence.

With regret I have to announce the bankruptcy of the firm Edward Jarck and Co., well-known stock and money dealers. The liabilities are said to be over m.600,000.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Our markets have shown rather less buoyancy than during the previous few weeks, and transactions have been limited to regular consumptive purchases. The Money Market has remained, notwithstanding the half monthly settlement, very well supplied.

COFFEE.—The tone of this article has been good, and the enhanced values are firmly maintained, but holders being very much reserved, transactions have not been of importance. Quotation for Java quality m.1.05 to 1.50 per ½ kilo. The total import of coffee in Hamburg during the period from 1st January to 31st May consisted of SUGAR.—The stock being small, transactions have been of no importance; 890 bags yellow and brown Zanzibar sold at m.30½ to 32½, and 160 bags China at m.36. Quotations are:—Manila brown clayed, m.29 to 31; do. unclayed, m.23 to 24½; Mauritius brown, m.22 to 31; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34; Batavia white, m.34½ to 36; do. yellow and grey, m.31½ to 34; do. brown, m.22 to 30½; Siam, Benares and China white, m.32 to 36; Zanzibar brown and yellow, m.28 to 33; China brown and yellow m.23 to 32.

RICE.—I have only to report the arrival of 16,700 bags Rangoon per Melpomene, which had changed owners already afloat.

TEA.—The following first hand parcels have been sold at unchanged rates, viz., 160/4, 2,551/8 boxes Congou, 97/16 boxes Imperial, and 250/16 boxes Gunpowder.

COTTON.—There is a somewhat firmer tendency; besides other parcels of American Provenience, each 100,000 lbs., Tahiti have been sold for delivery.

SPICES.—Nutmegs, prime quality, are quoted m.5.60 to 6; Mace, m.4.70 to 4.90. Of Ginger, Bengal quality has been sold at m.27½ to 28; Cochin m.60 to 81. Cloves are firmer; Zanzibar, m.137 to 138. Pepper in good demand for consumption; Singapore quality, m.37½ to 38; Penang m.35½ to 36; White, m.68 to 76.

SHIPPING.

The East India and China shipping trade is extremely dull; there is hardly any cargo in the market, and freights are nominal. The Cassandra, s.s., Captain Langer, has left for London, to load there for her usual route to Penang, &c., not having been able to obtain a cargo here; the Hesperia, s.s., is to follow on the 25th inst., both steamers belonging to the Deutsche Dampsschiffs Rhederei. Sailing vessels are still worse, and a barque on the berth for Hong Kong, which has been lying here for several months, has hardly any cargo on board. Of arrivals from the Far East only the Conrad Henrich, Schueler, is to be reported, and of departures, besides the above-named Cassandra, s.s., the Marco Polo, Jaeger, and Rhuddlan Castle, Richards, both for Hong Kong. At Bremen two arrivals from the East Indies have taken place, namely, the Maria Rickmers, Heins, from Moulmein, and Anton Gunther, Huhn, from Rangoon. In vessels on the berth no alteration has taken place. Steamers arriving here are to go "dead slow" in the vicinity of Muehlenberg, where a diving-bell is employed in deepening the river and taking away some heavy rocks from the ground.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JUNE 6.

The whole nation is in mourning. On the 3rd inst., at noon, our most beloved Queen died at her country-seat, het Huis ten Bosch. Only two days before her illness assumed such a severe character that the Prince of Orange was summoned from Paris. The King and Prince Alexander were also present, and the Queen died most calmly in the midst of her family. The late Queen's goodness of character was known to all; she was in one word an excellent queen, mother, and wife. Her loss is an irreparable one, both to her family and also to the nation. In accordance with her own wish her body was not embalmed. It is laid in a leaden chest, which will be placed in an outer coffin of mahogany, ornamented with silver. The interment will take place on the 20th inst., at Delft. Up to that date all public amusements are suspended. With great good feeling the Roman Catholic authorities have prohibited the public demonstrations, which were organised on a large scale, in celebration of the Papal jubilee.

The political news is of no importance. We are waiting for the result of the elections, which will take place on the 12th inst. Numerous candidates are brought forward, but, nevertheless, I think that the changes will be very few, and that most of the old members of the Second Chamber will be re-elected. The Minister of the Department of Justice, Mr. Van Lynden, has not gone to Marienbad; the death of the Queen rendering his presence in the Hague necessary.

The Handelsblad in an article regretting the death of Mr. Motley suggests the erection of a statue in commemoration of the late historian. This plan is generally approved.

It is asserted that the Dutch representants at the Paris Sugar Conference have been at last authorised by our Government to sign the protocols of the meetings. They had hitherto declined to do so.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Our markets for Colonial Produces are very dull, and no transactions of importance have taken place, except in Tobacco. The trade looks, however, very healthy.

COFFEE is firm; some business was done at an advance on the last auction prices, but only a few lots of private import changed hands.

TEA.—The sale first-hand business is 576 chests Java Pecco Souchon. Prices remained unaltered.

RAW SUGAR has met with a good demand, but owners decline to operate at the current quotations. One lot Java, No. 17, was sold at f.41. Refined Sugar had a good trade.

TOBACCO.—A large quantity of several marks has changed hands. Fine qualities are very dear. The imports have been very large. The stock includes 18,663 bs. Java, 6,975 bs. Sumatra, 3,400 bs. Manila and 3,000 bs. E. I.

SPICES without any particulars. The trade is very limited, prices firm.

RICE is very quiet, except for cleaned Java and Japan.

JAVA INDIGO has met with a steady demand, but the trade is waiting for the new arrivals per Conrad, viz., 1,200 chests.

The Bourse has looked much healthier. A good demand has prevailed, especially for Russian and Austrian stock. The rate of discount has remained unaltered, and large sums can be obtained at 2½ per cent.

Subjoined are the closing prices of our principal Stocks:—Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 64⅛; do. Three per Cent., 75⅜; do. Monetary and Commercial.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company was held in Paris on the 6th inst. M. de Lesseps's report to the shareholders stated that the net profit of ast year had exceeded 2,000,000f., an amount which would enable the company to pay a dividend of 3f. 55½c. per share. The dividend paid last year had been only 1f. 88c. per share. During the first five months of the current year the number of ships passing through the Canal had increased nearly 9½ per cent. on that of the similar period of 1876. The report further stated that ten votes had been given to the British Government as the proprietor of 176,000 shares. With reference to the situation of the Canal as affected by the war, M. de Lesseps said he had been in England to consider this question with Her Majesty's Ministers, and he had received the following declaration from Lord Derby:—

Any attempt to blockade or hamper by any means whatsoever the Canal or its approaches would be considered by Her Majesty's Government as a menace to India, and as a serious injury to trade in general. From these two considerations, any such act, which Her Majesty's Government hopes and trusts neither of the belligerents will commit, would be incompatible with the maintenance by Her Majesty's Government of an attitude of passive neutrality.

M. de Lesseps said that the attitude and categorical declaration of Great Britain were preferable to the project of an international understanding, which he had proposed to Lord Derby, as the desired understanding was thereby established.

The Eastern Telegraph Company notify that, subject to the final audit, the accounts show a balance available for dividend which will enable the directors at the general meeting on the 21st instant to recommend the declaration of a final dividend of 2s. 6d. per share, making with the previous payments on account a dividend for the year ending 31st March last of 5 per cent. on the ordinary shares, and carrying to the reserve fund a balance of about £35,000. The distribution is the same as in the previous year, but the amount carried to the reserve is larger.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts in May, 1877, were £18,427. The total receipts from 1st January to 31st May were £76,156; in the corresponding months of 1876 £73,994, and in the corresponding months of 1875, £61,728.

An extraordinary meeting of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China will be held on the 16th October, to authorise the directors to apply for a supplemental Charter, or an extension of the existing Charter.

In the Tea market much dissatisfaction has been generally expressed at the large settlements which have been made in China. Telegraphic advices report that up to the 5th inst. 15,000,000 lbs. had left the North, 10,000,000 lbs. Foochow, and 2,000,000 lbs. Canton, thus making a total of 27,000,000 lbs. up to that date. Up to the 10th June last year the total shipments amounted to 26,000,000 lbs. We have, however, to take into account that the market at Foochow opened this year fifteen days earlier than last year, while that at Hankow this year opened six days later, a circumstance which to some extent modifies the unfavourableness of the comparison. At the public sales yesterday the tone of the market still continued dull, but common teas went off slightly over valuation.

In the Silk market very much the same tone as reported by last mail has continued to prevail. The reports concerning the European crops confirm the statements previously made concerning the probability of a deficiency. In France it is hardly expected that there can be a much better result than last year, owing to the smallness of the quantity of seed, and to the trees having suffered from the cold. From Italy the accounts are conflicting, but the weather has been cold and unfavourable. No definite estimates can be ventured upon until the worms have passed the last stage; but a full crop is considered out of the question. Under these circumstances, there has been little disposition to operate, holders continuing indisposed to meet the market in the face of so much tending to the conclusion that the supplies will be short. Deliveries have only been on a very small scale, and until general trade improves, it is hardly possible for the market fully to recover.

The total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended 2nd inst. was 2,930,338 lbs. No comparison can be made with the preceding return, as the present one is for five days only, there having been a holiday in celebration of the Queen's birthday. The amount taken for home consumption was 1,832,918 lbs., while 637,626 lbs. was removed coastwise, 394,396 lbs. was exported, 61,203 lbs. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 4,195 lbs. was for ships' stores. The duty received amounted to £45,823. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn for home consumption during the week:—Coffee, 508,909 lbs.; cocoa, 188,895 lbs.; tobacco, 330,900 lbs.; cigars, 14,105 lbs.; wine, 135,606 gallons; brandy, 28,539 gallons; and rum 26,679 gallons.

In the Produce Markets, although more activity has been displayed than was observable last week, there is a continued absence of speculation, and trade remains unsettled. Coffee has undergone considerable decline, but shows signs of recovery at the close. Sugar has slightly improved, and China has been somewhat largely dealt in both on the spot and afloat. Pepper, Rice, and Tin have declined in value. Other articles are for the most part very quiet, without important alteration in quotations.

An important Bill in its bearing upon questions which have arisen with respect to dock warrants and other documents of title to goods is about to be introduced in the House of Commons by Sir John Lubbock. It is designed to provide against difficulties, of which an illustration has been given in a recent case, arising from persons being allowed to continue in possession of goods, warrants, or other documents of title to goods belonging to some other person, after there has been a revocation from them of the intrustment or agency. In such case the present Bill is intended to provide that the rights of persons purchasing or making advances on such goods or documents in the ordinary course of business shall not, where no notice of the revocation of the entrustment or agency has been given, be prejudiced. Its effect appears to be to place the matter again in precisely the position it occupies at common law, and to remove ambiguities created by the "Factors Acts" at present in force. It does not, as might at first be supposed, introduce any new principle.

The new Indian Four per Cent. Loan, to be raised in India, has been announced. It is for two crores and fifty lacs of rupees (equal to nearly £2,500,000 sterling) in promissory notes, the forms and conditions being the same as those of the notes of the Consolidated Transfer Loan of 1842-3, of which they will form a part. The notes will be payable to order, and will bear interest half-yearly. Interest on each payment will be paid in advance from the date of its receipt to the 31st of January next.

At the Bank of England on the 6th inst. tenders were received for the usual weekly amount (26½ lacs, or £265,000) of India Council Drafts, plus the £11,500 unallotted last week. The entire sum was placed at last week's minimum of 1s. 8 9-16d. per rupee, Calcutta obtaining £237,900, and Bombay £38,600.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular, says :—There is no improvement to notice in our market, which remains exceedingly dull; prices, however, show no material alteration, the public sales going off steadily but slowly at last week's prices. Privately, business is much restricted, though importers are now anxious to quit old stocks in the face of such large shipments advised from China, the first of which may be expected here early next month. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain firm; common to good common sell at previous rates; fair to medium kinds are dull of sale; good to fine are firm, being now in moderate supply. Pak Lin kinds have been sold at public auction at rather lower prices. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common show no improvement, the demand being moderate; fair to medium kinds still realise low prices from the anxiety to quit stocks; good to fine have sold at about former prices at public sale; privately there is but little demand. New-make Congous: further arrivals of new season have been placed on the market, but they do not sell readily, and prices must be quoted in favour of buyers. Oolongs at 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d. per lb. have been saleable, but the finer kinds sell slowly at about previous prices. Common Souchongs have sold at auction from 8¼d. to 8½d. per lb., other kinds showing no change, with a dull demand. Scented Teas.—Business has been small, and prices much as before, both for Canton Capers and Orange Pekoes. Foochow kinds of both are steady, especially the finer kinds of Orange Pekoes. Green Teas.—There is no few feature—the supplies are still in excess, and prices rule very irregularly. Some Japan kinds at auction went at very low prices. The Public Sales have consisted of 17,971 packages, the whole of which have been sold without reserve.

Messrs. Lloyd and Cheshire's Circular says :—Common Black Leaf shows ¼d. to ½d. per lb. rise from the lowest point, but the demand is limited. Fair to medium are difficult to quit, except at very low rates. Good medium to fine sell slowly at fair prices, and fine to finest are not in over supply, although doubtless there is quite sufficient of this class on hand to meet the requirements of the trade, for the time of the year, till the new season's arrive. Kaisow siftings are scarce, and command full rates compared with the prices paid for leafy Teas. Common Red Leaf brings 7½d. to 8d. per lb., fair to good Sayunes and Ankois sell from 9½d. to 11d., showing good value; medium to good Kaisows are rather scarce, and fine to finest are in a small compass. Packlings sell slowly at rather easier rates. New-make Congous: Further arrivals of season 1877-78 have come to hand, the quality, however, is disappointing. Sales have been made at auction from 9½d. to 10½d. for common to fair, and by private contract from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 5d. for medium to good. Souchongs: A few sales have been effected at rather easier rates. Oolongs not having been offered quite so freely have slightly hardened in value. Scented Teas: Canton Capers have been pressed for sale, and prices show a decline on those previously ruling; but even at the reduction the trade do not respond very freely. Orange Pekoes show little alteration in value. Foochow Orange Pekoe is in small supply, and realises full rates. Green Teas: The amount offering, although smaller, is beyond the requirements of the trade, and prices rule very low and irregular. Japan Teas are dull of sale. Twelve public sales were held in May, comprising 67,197 packages, principally "without reserve."

SILK.

Messrs. John Kershaw, Kilburn, and Co.'s Circular says :—The market during May, until towards the end of the month, was in a most unsatisfactory condition; prices dropped, and there was no demand; a few forced sales were made at rates which showed a heavy decline from quotations, but there was no general inquiry. Holders of Silk, as a rule, were firm, and waited reports of the new crops, and when telegrams came from China announcing damage done to the crop, and the probability of a serious deficiency, the downward movement was stopped, and a few sales soon procured a recovery of 1s. to 2s. from the lowest price. This news has since been confirmed, and as the general opinion is that the European crops will also be below an average, we may reckon that we have seen the lowest point touched: deliveries, however, are on a very small scale, and until trade itself is materially better, we must not look for much improvement. Stocks of Silk show a slight increase in total over those of May 1.

Messrs. Arles, Dufour and Co.'s Lyons Circular says :—After our advices of the 5th May unfavourable reports on the European crop changed the tone of our market. Purchases of Silk goods were resumed, but, stocks being heavy, prices obtained were 5 to 15 per cent. under those of May last (when raw materials stood about 15 per cent. lower), thus bearing very heavy losses. Such results did not encourage manufacturers to pay higher prices for Silk; still some purchases were made at unchanged rates; on Tsatlees alone an advance of f.2 to f.4 was obtained. On the 16th many English American and Parisian buyers were on the market; large lots of ready-made goods were bargained for, and orders for next season about to be placed; under such circumstances, the news of the injury to the China crop reached us in the afternoon and caused great sensation; an advance of f.2 to f.3 took place on Tsatlees, and business was only limited by the restricted number of sellers. Unfortunately in the evening the unexpected change of Ministry in France checked all transactions, and even caused orders placed to be withdrawn. Such opposite influences, coupled with contradictory reports on the European crop, kept, during a week, the market in a very undecided state, and scarcely any transactions took place. Afterwards some business was resumed in silk goods and silk at quotations of the beginning of the month. Tsatlees alone maintained their advance, partly owing to some purchases effected on Chinese account. Since a few days transactions have again been checked by Shanghai telegrams announcing an export of 60,000 bales, and by better news on the French crop.

Messrs. B. Richardson and Son's New York Circular dated 19th ult. says :—Since our last we have had a market utterly demoralised, with shrinking in prices. Recent news by cable from London, Lyons, Milan and China, all telling the same story of damaged seed and unfavourable weather, and consequent diminished crops, has for the past few days brought about a better feeling, and at present holders are firmer, decidedly, and in some cases higher in their demands. It is pretty clear that the high prices of the past months in China brought to market all the silk which could be scraped together, even to the extent of stopping some of their native manufactories, and much of the coming season's silk may go to supply the void thus created; this may make the Chinese exacting in their demands when the new season opens. As our prices to-day are below China prices, such a course must have an effect here. Our stocks here are only half of what they were last year at this time, and this includes a good deal of trash,—silk which is foul, coarse and heavily adulterated, so that the stock of really good available silk is smaller than even figures indicate. Consumption is reduced on account of general dulness and unsatisfactory results, and silk weavers have chosen this as a fitting time to "strike."

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Last week closed with a steady market, and with a largely increased business in Liverpool further strength has since been added. Considerable offers were put forward, and wherever the low prices of the previous week were accepted a good business resulted, but further transactions of some extent could not be carried out, owing to the advanced prices demanded. Some fair transactions have been effected at a slight advance, but not many buyers will submit to a moderate increase on the prices lately current.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE CLYDE SHIPWRIGHTS' STRIKE.—A settlement of the lock-out on the Clyde seems further off than ever, as the men in the upper reaches of the river show no disposition to meet the masters in their pacific efforts. The shipwrights at Greenock, numbering 500, who have been agitating for a rise of a penny per hour, have also come out on strike. The men who have been locked out state that they will not return to work till a higher rate is paid, so that matters are becoming very serious.

THE Board of Trade inquiry into the stranding of the steamer City of Venice, of Glasgow, on the North Rock, county Down, on April 17, has been concluded at Belfast. The Court attributed the stranding to an error of judgment, arising from the defective state of the light on board the South Rock lightship, and they returned Captain Barrie his certificate.

THE Glasgow, Partick, and Whiteinch branches of the boilermakers and iron shipbuilders of Great Britain and Ireland have resolved to insist upon an advance of ten per cent. on their wages.

SEVERAL hundred workmen are engaged on the new harbour works at Calais, and the excavation is proceeding rapidly. Large quantities of materials have also arrived.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
(Ex Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other.

REMEDIAL USES AND ACTION.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium.

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

EXTRACTS FROM MEDICAL OPINIONS.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use this preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.

None genuine without the word "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. Sold in Hong Kong and Shanghai by Watson and Co.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

From Japan but little further news of a definite character is brought by this mail; there having apparently been a lull since the re-occupation of Kumamoto. An expedition of 7,000 men was made to Kagoshima; they landed without opposition. It was reported that Itagaki, a former Minister, was about to raise the "Sumari" in Tosa, and march with them to Kioto, and there demand a representative assembly. It was rumoured that a compromise had been arrived at with the rebels on the basis of the retirement of all the present Ministers; but there was not much importance attached to this statement.

The opening of the new Treaty ports in China does not seem to be producing commercial results of importance, and but little anxiety seems to be felt to follow up with any alacrity such advantages as they may offer. This is to be accounted for in part by the disappointment which has ensued upon the opening of branch houses at the new ports in 1860, and probably also in part by the fact that no confidence can be felt until the Convention has been ratified. Messrs. Jardine Matheson and Co., have, however, started business at Wenchow. The Kiukiang native tea merchants have presented a petition against the opening of Hukow, which, they say, will greatly interfere with their trade. They set forth that the proposed new port is only 50 li from Kukiang, and that if it be opened it will undoubtedly draw all the business from that place. The opium merchants have presented a similar petition. It is however shrewdly observed on this subject that the anxiety displayed at Kiukiang to prevent steamers calling at Hukow seems to tell rather in favour of the design. The anxiety to assert the unsuitability of Hukow is quite superfluous; that is a question which will very soon decide itself. If, on the other hand, it proves a convenient place of call—as it seems the Kiukiang people think it will do—the argument that steamers should be debarred from going there, because it will affect the local trade of Kiukiang, is not tenable. Letters from the Bishop of Tsi-nan-foo, and other Roman Missionaries, regarding the famine in Shangtung, have been published, which amply confirm the descriptions already given from other sources of the sufferings of the people. It will be a satisfaction to those who have contributed so liberally, to learn how timely has been the relief afforded. An interesting account is published of the proceedings at the Imperial Torpedo college at Tientsin. Li-Hung-Chang has assisted the Japanese with ammunition to put down the rebellion.

From Hong Kong there is little of special importance. Some further comments are made concerning the official landing of Mr. Pope Hennessy, which appears to have been sadly mismanaged. The Hoppo of Canton paid a visit to H.E. the Governor, but it was of a strictly private character. He brought from 200 to 300 men in his suite.

The principal item of news from the Straits Settlements is the account of a great fire at Singapore on the 3rd of May, which resulted in the utter destruction of the premises occupied by Messrs. Jaimie and Co. and Mr. Emmerson. The fire at Tanjong Pagar had been completely extinguished. The long-continued drought had been mitigated by a fall of rain, and the prevalence of cholera was rapidly decreasing. A Chinese riot, which was suppressed before it had attained serious proportions, has occurred at Chungkat, Province Wellesley. There had been a cessation of military operations in Atchin. The chief of Madjapahit, an Atchinese State on the east coast, has signified his submission to Dutch rule. The remains of General Bixio, who died of cholera in Atchin, have been shipped at Batavia with much ceremony. The dispute between the Siamese and Chinese at Tongkah is still unsettled. The official notification of the opening of Sulu to trade appears in the Straits Settlements Government Gazette.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 25th April, and we have advices via San Francisco fifteen days later, viz., to the 10th May. The French mail from London, March 9, arrived out on the 27th April, and the following P. and O. mail of March 16 was received on the 30th April.

The news from the seat of war as received up to the date of the mail's departure, indicated that since the re-occupation of Kumamoto by the Government troops there has been a lull in the course of events, and the only news of importance from the seat of war which has transpired is the despatch of an expedition of 7,000 men to the town of Kagoshima. No opposition was made to the landing of this force, but since then some fighting has taken place there, although the results of it are unknown. Although this constitutes the entire news of the insurrection itself, an event is reported in the native papers which will have a great effect upon its success. It is said that Itagaki, a former Minister, who has great reputation in his native province—Tosa,—is about to raise the samurai, and march with them to Kioto, to petition the Government for a Representative Assembly. Should this news be true, and it has not yet been contradicted, it would be a crushing blow for the present Administration, as it would be impossible for the Government troops to make head against these fresh assailants. Meantime rumours of dissensions are current both amongst the Ministers and the rebels.

The P.M.S.S. Company's steamer City of Peking, after leaving for Hong Kong on the 24th April, ran ashore on Rubicon Point, a short distance this side of Kanonsaki. The first news was brought by the chief officer of the ship, who was sent up for assistance. On the receipt of the intelligence Mr. Foster, the agent of the company, immediately proceeded to make the necessary arrangements, and at two o'clock the P. and O. s.s. Massilia left with four lighters and 200 coolies for the scene of the disaster. She was accompanied by the tugs belonging to the P.M.S., M.M., and P. and O. Companies, and also took down a quantity of hawsers, &c., with a view of attempting to tow the ship off, and these efforts were so successful that ere high water 800 tons of cargo and 440 tons of water from her forward boilers and water tanks had been discharged. Meanwhile an anchor had been laid out astern, and as high water approached, the hawser was hove taut. Steam was up, and everything ready to turn astern, when on Captain Tanner, who had been engaged forward, proceeding aft to see that all was clear, he found that the hawser was already slack, the strain on it as the tide rose having been sufficient to start the vessel from her bed. The engines were immediately turned astern, with a view of helping in case the vessel should again stick, but owing to the very steep shelving of the bank on which the Peking lay, she gathered way faster than was expected. An attempt was made to haul in the hawser, but this was impossible, and it was at last cut to save fouling the screw. Meanwhile the U.S.S. Alert and the P. and O. s.s. Massilia were laying some four or five lengths astern, with hawsers ready, waiting to attempt to tow the Peking off. Owing to the stern way the latter vessel had on her, and the impossibility of checking her, she unfortunately ran, stern foremost, into the port forward sponson of the Massilia, smashing eight of her guard stanchions, the lamp room and closets and also breaking some of the iron stays between decks. This damage however will be easily repaired. On examination being made it was found that the City of Peking had not sustained the slightest damage, and was not making an inch of water. As soon as daylight appeared she therefore steamed into smooth water, where the work of reshipping her cargo was immediately commenced.

The scheme for the formation of the Yokohama Race Club has been published. It proposes amalgamation with the Racing Association and that its object shall be to provide for the proper governance of the Race Course and for the management of racing generally. All members of the foreign community of Yokohama are eligible to membership of the Jockey Club. The Jockey Club shall, in the first instance, consist of the existing five Committee Members of the Yokohama Race Club and the Yokohama Racing Association jointly. The Committee of ten members as provided for in the preceding Clause shall receive applications for admission to membership to the Jockey Club, for a period of one month after notice of such formation has been publicly given.

The Japan Herald has the following:—The two Fu, Tokio and Osaka, are each to have a Deliberative Assembly hereafter, and the President of the Osaka Assembly is to be Wantanabe, the Governor of Osaka, and the President of the Tokio Assembly is to be Senda, the Vice-Governor of Tokio. These assemblies are to be composed of men selected from all classes of the community on account of their literary ability, the Presidents only being necessarily Government officials. This is a great innovation, as hitherto the assemblies have been composed entirely of Government officials, and it is expected that there will be beneficial results from this change. The assemblies in the various ken, however, will continue to be composed of Government officers as heretofore.

The Echo du Japon reproduces a rumour, "under all reserve," to the effect that a compromise has been arrived at with the rebels, on the basis of the retirement of all the present Ministers, with the exception of Okuma, the Minister of Finance. This news is almost too good to be true, although, with the Echo, we hope that it may be so. There is, we believe, not the slightest doubt that this would at once end the present trouble, for as we have before remarked, the sole object of the present outbreak, so far as is understood by foreigners, is simply to cause a change of ministry, which could be brought about in no other way. The appointment of the younger Saigo to the post of Acting Minister of War would indicate more conciliatory measures, as it is scarcely to be supposed that he would have accepted the promotion were he to be obliged to push matters to an extremity against his brother; but still in spite of this we scarcely think that the present Ministers will retire from their posts and give up the administration of the loaves and fishes for the sake of restoring peace to their country, unless a very strong pressure is placed upon them; at any rate they have thus far given no signs of doing so.

A Tokio Saibansho official, named Hayashi, has just been fined for resorting to torture to extract evidence in a criminal suit. The man stated that he was entirely ignorant that any laws against torture had been promulgated. All the lower officers of the Saibansho have again been specially cautioned about the punishment that awaits them if they ignore the new law, and some of these gentry are not a little indignant at being deprived of what they looked upon as a pleasant relaxation to their arduous duties.

We are informed that 29,789 articles have been received for the Exhibition at Uyéno, being presented by 17,930 persons, and valued at 172,540 yen.

TOKIO.

Since the news of the relief of the siege of Kumamoto and the subsequent retirement of the main body of the rebels to Hiuga greater tranquility in the minds of the people of Tokio is noticeable, and an improved tone of feeling and security reigns among the masses. While this is so, however, no corresponding resuscitation in the business world follows in the wake of these outward signs of returning confidence, but the fact of the belief in the ultimate, and, perhaps, not distant success of the Government forces is itself sufficient grounds for entertaining hopes of an approaching favourable reaction in commercial pursuits. Meanwhile economy is the order of the day, and people of all classes keep a tight hand on their purse strings. The wants of the people are confined within the narrowest possible limits, while pleasures and amusements, involving requisitions on the pocket, are almost universally foregone. Consequently, places of public amusement are neglected, and even the tea houses, which, in Japan, are the very last to suffer, are at present in a languishing condition. The geisha, too, who particularly at this season of the year are usually in great request, are dying of ennui, and their hands are going out of practice for want of demands on their professional calling; like the Jews in captivity, they are obliged to hang up their harps on willow trees, and patiently wait for the troubling of the waters.

A few influential and philanthropic men of Tokio have in contemplation the formation of a Temperance Society for the benefit of their countrymen, after the model of those in existence in Western countries. These men—some of whom have travelled in foreign countries—are of opinion that such an institution is really desirable in Japan; and entertain the belief that it would meet with general support from all classes of the people. Whether they are justified in such a belief is perhaps not to be easily affirmed or denied by foreigners, but it is clear, however, that drunkenness is less prevalent among the Japanese than it is in most other countries, and that its worst forms and effects are seldom perceptible to the same degree as elsewhere. However, everybody must concede that the object that the promoters of this movement have in view is worthy of commendation.

The people of the capital are much rejoiced to hear of the approaching return of his Majesty and Court from Kioto.

HIOGO.

The Hiogo News says:—

Large numbers of wounded continue to arrive here from the South. The Sumida-maru brought four hundred on the 18th and the Kanagawa-maru two hundred and fifty on the 19th, both lots being from Nagasaki. From these arrivals, however, nothing can be gathered as to recent casualties, as most of these sufferers are convalescents.

The actual "war news" amounts to very little, and may be all summed up by saying that the rebels appear to have been pushed a very little further to the eastwards, and that the Government has been concentrating troops in Kumamoto. By far the most interesting news is that about General Kuroda, but whether he voluntarily resigned his command or was deprived of it is as unknown to us as the causes which have led to his retirement.

CHINA.

PEKING.

A correspondent of the North China Herald writes on the 18th April:—We are losing a number of our small community to-day, M. and Madame de Prat and M. de Carcer of the Spanish Legation, and Messrs. de Roquette and Arene of the French Legation, besides Mr. Nicholson of the British Legation, who goes on a visit to Shanghai. Bye-the-bye, I see that in a notice the other day of the arrival of Kwoh and Co. in England, the Revue Diplomatique, which ought to know better, stated the object of his mission to be the delivery of assurances of the continuance of the Treaty of Tientsin! With such false notions in Europe respecting China and the Chinese as we see daily to be current, how is anything to go on satisfactorily here?

The Peking Gazette of the 6th April contains a memorial advising the appointment of a Sub-prefect on the island of Ho Yueh Chow, opposite Tatung, as the real site of trade at that newly opened "place of call." The same paper of the 4th April contains a curious memorial from the Governor-General of Fengtien (Manchuria), regarding the anxiety felt by the Koreans lest the Chinese emigrants who are rapidly settling in the country up to the Korean frontier should overflow into Korea. It is proposed to give the Korean Government power to arrest a Chinese subject found across the border, and to send him a prisoner to Moukden, for execution. "It shall also be lawful for the Koreans to slay any Chinese who may attempt to resist capture at their hands."

TIENTSIN.

A correspondent of the Celestial Empire writes under date of April 19:—

On Saturday (14th April) his Excellency Li Hung-chang spent a long day at the Imperial Torpedo College engaged in holding the first annual examination of the students. His Excellency arrived at 9 A.M., and was received by Mr. Betts and the native officials attached to the College; he then carried out a minute and careful inspection of the new building, taking particular notice of the workshops and fuze-rooms, where the unattached students were busily engaged making electrical fuzes, small torpedoes for experimental work, and other apparatus connected with torpedo warfare. The examination was held in the large lecture-room, eighty feet by forty-five, and comprised English composition, translation, mathematics, and proficiency in telegraphy; after which Mr. Betts gave a lecture on Torpedo Appliance, illustrated by such experiments as could with safety be shown in a room, and translated at his Excellency's request by Mr. Chan Laisun, the wei yuen of the College. The Viceroy then selected various questions from a list of one hundred which had been prepared, and the students answered them by diagrams on the black board, or practical illustrations where possible. At the conclusion of the examination the Viceroy awarded buttons to six of the most successful students and additional prizes of about 100 taels in value. H.E. also took much interest in the erection of the line of telegraphs which is now in course of construction to his yamen, and left the College attended by his numerous retinue about 7 P.M., after a long and fatiguing day's work.

On Wednesday a series of torpedo experiments took place on the river, near the Bridge of Boats, at the junction of the Peiho and the Grand Canal; at which the Viceroy was also present. The chief point of interest was firing torpedoes from spars thirty feet long, run out from an eight-oared boat manned by the students of the College. Charges of 50 lbs. of powder were fired, and made a very fine show, throwing up a large column of water, which owing to the high wind besprinkled the crowds on the river bank in a very liberal manner. The smart style in which the students launched and fired the torpedoes was highly commended by the Viceroy and foreigners present; small charges fired in groups were also shown, but owing to the crowded state of the river none of the charges contained more than 50 or 60 lbs. of powder, as Mr. Betts thought it too dangerous in such a confined space to fire heavier charges.

We hear, says the same paper, that the steamer Haining brings down a large quantity of ammunition placed at the disposal of the Japanese Government by Li Hung-chang, immediately he was informed that the Government of Japan was in want of ammunition in their operations against the rebels. It would thus seem that a growing entente cordiale exists between the two nations.

SOOCHOW.

The correspondent of the Daily News writes:—

During the last two or three weeks the devotees of Buddha have been in a very religious frame of mind, and of course the priests reap the harvest. 'Tis not often, however, that we see their gains coming in so rapidly. In the 2nd moon a Buddhist priest "dreamed a dream." He saw in a dirty pool near the southern wall of the city an old stone image which the rebels had consigned to a watery grave. In his night visions it was told him if a very aged and rich old lady, who was without a son, would build a temple for this rock Busah, all the desires of her heart would be given her. The old lady on being told this gladly agreed on the "exchange," gave the money and is now enjoying the promise. Who this old lady is, only the priests know, but the answer she received to her many prayers to Kwan-yin now at this late day encouraged many, and the news spread.

The image was set up on its pedestal, a straw hut built over it, and it was affirmed this month that it was "efficacious." "Ling keh," i.e., had "virtue to heal." It was proclaimed that the dumb had only to drink of the waters of this pool, and they would speak, the deaf hear, and any disease be immediately cured. As the Chinese have never read the advertisements of patent medicines, these tales obtained an easy credence. Multitudes went to worship, &c., "Gyiu Seu Shuay," "ask for the sien water." As fast as one would "keh-teo," there would be another to take his place. Continually those who were dealing out the water would yell out: "Hurry up and let the others have a showing." Each man brought a teapot or bottle for the water, and as fast as one jar was exhausted the greasy servant would dip up another out of the pool. Have you seen any one who was cured? "Oh! yes, of course; what would all these people be coming here for, then?" But have you seen anyone? "No, but it is so, for they all say so." The only way was to quote their proverb: "What the ear hears is not always true, but what the eye sees."

The money of the first few days was enough to put up a small temple, so they just built it over the straw shed. The water is sold at 64 cash; besides other perquisites they make two candles from each worshipper, as there is no room to burn one-tenth of them. Numbers of scholars in silk and satin go to worship. People in boats from other places also come.

HUKOW.

A correspondent writes as follows with reference to the proposed opening of the above-named port:—

After mature consideration as to the benefit to be derived by making Hukow a port of call, it appears conclusive that it cannot fail to be most detrimental if not absolutely fatal to the commercial interests of Kiukiang. It would also appear that this so-called concession had been obtained without reference to the native and foreign interests centered at Kiukiang, and in opposition to the general opinion prevailing on the subject in 1869, when Consul Swinhoe, the official delegate of the special mission up the Yangtsze, stated "that the landing-place, while perhaps a boon to the river steamer interests, would be the death blow to Kiukiang." Such being the case, and nothing having transpired to alter the condition of affairs, it appears unwise in the extreme to make Hukow a port of call, when it is almost certain to prove fatal to the local native and foreign interests at Kiukiang, and be of no advantage whatever to the steamer companies or merchants generally. It would be interesting to learn what advantage is anticipated from the opening of Hukow, or by whom the step was suggested. The memorialists of 1st May, 1867, merely recommended that the Po yang lake should be open to steam, to enable exports to be brought more expeditiously to Kiukiang, which has always been the regular mart or emporium and port of shipment, as they were fully aware of the loss and injury Kiukiang would sustain by produce being shipped at the lake as proposed in the Chefoo Convention. It should be pointed out that the sterotype argument that "the detention of the tea boats at the lake by adverse winds is a source of annoyance, &c.," is rather imaginary than real; and it does not appear that the persons directly interested, the boatmen and teamen, have ever advocated the constitution of Hukow into a port of shipment or discharge, for the good reason that it is ill-adapted as a rendezvous for boats, there being no shelter and no means of obtaining return cargoes.

Geographically speaking, Hukow may appear to be the natural outlet from Kiangsi; but had it been a suitable place, Kiukiang would not have been selected by the Chinese as their emporium, nor would it have developed into a town of commercial importance, while the "natural outlet" has remained what it always was—a mere garrison town.

As trade is not likely to be benefited in any way whatever, and the local interests of Kiukiang are likely to be seriously affected, it is said that foreign merchants have sent in an official representation against the opening of Hukow; and the native merchants have also held meetings to signify their disapproval of the procedure, and ratify their determination not to ship or land cargo at that port.

It is understood that the delay in opening the port arises from the difficulty in reconciling local interests. In Kiangsi the provincial officials are unwilling that any produce should leave Hukow unless export duty is paid beforehand, so it is possible that a branch Custom-house may be opened there, which is sure to lead to a transfer of a portion of the shipping business from Kiukiang to the lake, and eventually to the opening of hongs, to the ruination of those established at Kiukiang.

Since traders do not desire the opening of Hukow, I fail to see the wisdom of coercing the Chinese to do so, especially as such a course is calculated to ruin the commercial interests centred at Kiukiang.

After the British Government has selected Kiukiang as a settlement, and induced merchants to invest a vast amount of capital in lands and buildings, it seems unfair and impolitic to coerce the Chinese into opening a port against the interests and wishes of all concerned, especially as it has been demonstrated that it is of no benefit to trade in general.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 29th April. The French mail from London March 9 was received on the 24th April, and the following P. and O. mail of 16th March arrived out on the 28th April.

The recent sale of the S.S. Company's steamers to the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company has called forth a paper on the subject of "British Shipping Interests in China," which has been published in the papers, and also sent to the Chamber of Commerce. In commenting upon it the North China Daily News considers that it would be premature to suppose that any political attack on those interests could be seriously contemplated—that would be utterly futile; and however ill-judged the mode of commercial opposition adopted by the great Mandarin promoters of the China Merchants' Steamers Company may be deemed, it is very difficult to limit the right of a Government to subsidise such companies, if it chooses. The doing so in the present instance has undoubtedly been an economic blunder; but it cannot be accused as a political wrong. Of the economic mistake, it is possible that the authors may sooner or later be convinced. All that diplomacy has to do in the meantime is to take care that no undue advantages, contrary to treaty rights, are conceded to the native company; and let the competitors fight it out.

The Municipal Council have determined upon again calling upon the Chinese Authorities to expend some portion of the tonnage dues on the conservancy of the port, and intend to agitate the Porting point question again with this object. It is stated that at present there is ample work for a dredger in this river alone, and the importance of the trade is such as to call for its employment. Plans have been obtained, showing the depth of water opposite the foreshore, and the position of the opium hulks, with reference to such an eventuality as the berthing of steamers at pontoons opposite the Bund. It is believed that, contrary to the general impression, it is a fact that sufficiently deep water is within easier reach opposite "E-wo" than opposite the Club.

Mr. W. Shaw, who was indicted for stealing and embezzling Tls. 5,800 Kukiang currency, the property of his late employer, Mr. Francis, has pleaded guilty before the acting Assistant Judge, Mr. R. N. Mowat, and has been sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment.

From the North China Herald we take the following:—

The United States war-vessel Monocacy has returned from the Riverine ports.

The steamer Conquest, the first foreign trading vessel to Wenchow, has returned. She made a favourable passage to the new port, and was cordially welcomed by the natives. Besides her cargo she landed six foreign passengers, and on her return had Mr. and Mrs. Stott, missionaries, to Ningpo, and about 500 packages of cargo, principally charcoal. Between Wenchow and Ningpo she experienced dense fog, and had to anchor for several hours on three different occasions.

It was mentioned at the time that the report of the barque Agate, respecting the supposed existence of seventeen Europeans on one of the islands adjacent to New Guinea, had been forwarded to Admiral Ryder. We understand the Admiral has sent on the despatch to the Commodore commanding the Australian station, within whose limits the localities indicated lie.—It will be remembered that the statement of the master of the Agate was to the effect that, on the 2nd February last, when the barque was in Dampier Straits, lat. 0.34 S., and long. 130.22 E., she was boarded by natives from Battanta, King William, and other islands; and one of the chiefs stated as well as he could by signs and broken English that, on some of the islands to the northward, there were sixteen white men and one white woman. The Agate could not herself attempt to verify the report, as she had been on a reef and badly injured her hull. No doubt a gunboat will be despatched to search the neighbourhood, when Admiral Ryder's communication is received in Australia.

An extraordinary meeting of the Shanghai Race Club has been held to reconsider the proposals made at the last general meeting respecting the rebuilding of the stables in the Grand Stand Compound, and the means of raising funds for the purpose. It was resolved to proceed with the work, and also the removal of the "red house" to a site close to the back of the grand stand, immediately after the present Spring Meeting, and to raise the necessary funds, estimated at Tls. 6,000, by the issue of debentures of Tls. 100 each, the capital so raised to be redeemable by the annual payment of Tls. 1,000, the interest to be arranged with the persons who applied for the debentures.

The str. Soochow has left on her first voyage to Hankow; Formerly she was known as the Japan, and since she has been under her present management she has been fitted with a hurricane deck, affording accommodation for about 300 native passengers, as well as comfortable quarters for foreigners; her engines and boilers have been overhauled; and in other respects she has been altered and improved for river traffic. She is under the same agency as the Paokong, Tah-yue-fong, and Ping-on; and it is now understood to be a fact that the same combination—the Company has not yet assumed a name—have two steamers now building in England.

We hear that the barque Serpent, which was abandoned on the Shalutine Islands, in the Gulf of Pechili, under circumstances now well-known, has been towed into Taku by the pilots there.

The Celestial Empire gives the following:—

Many distinguished Chinese officials have lately passed through our Settlement. Only a few days ago the Tartar General Wen, of Foochow, and the Hoppo of Canton and families, passed through here, while for the last week the Tartar-General elect of Hangchow has resided among us. The last-named official has been awaiting the arrival of his predecessor, who on the 1st of this Chinese moon left Hangchow on his way to Peking, previous to taking up his new appointment as Tartar-General at Kui-chow in Hunan. This distinguished mandarin, the Marquis He, accompanied by his mother, a lady closely related to one of the Empresses, his wife, the daughter of the well-known Viceroy Jui Lien, who died a few years ago at Canton, and a numerous retinue, arrived here on Wednesday from Hangchow via Soochow. They are being entertained by a foreign firm having large dealings with the official class.

We are informed that Mr. Tong King-sing is going to reside at Tientsin, as head manager of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company.

It is said that the tea-market in the interior is opening at low prices; about 30 per cent. cheaper, indeed, than last year. The market for greens in Sung-yang has opened at 190 to 200 cash per catty of 32 taels' weight, against 200 to 275 a year ago; at Ningchow, too, prices have opened at 120 to 130 cash per catty of 16 taels' weight against 190 to 200 last year. The crop is likely to be very large, and with further depressing news from England the market is likely to go still lower, as many hongs have reduced their limits considerably.

WENCHOW.

A correspondent writes:—

Up to the 11th April the community consisted of the long resident missionaries—Messrs. Stott and Jackson, and the members of the Customs' staff. On the 11th the Mosquito arrived with reinforcements in the shape of Mr. Consul Alabaster. He has seen the officials, I believe, and employed himself in hunting for premises to serve as a Consulate. Not having seen the British ensign floating in the breeze on shore, I take it that to date the search has been unsuccessful. In the city the people seem perfectly indifferent, either to the presence of foreigners or to the fact that steamers are now at liberty to visit the port. They don't seem to want anything, unless it be a small cargo of rice. Native opium is plentiful, and piece goods come overland from Ningpo. Kerosine lamps are used in the principal shops, and matches are cheap. As to tea, a contract might be made for some raw leaf from the Ping-yang district, but the season is now well advanced. No foreign merchant has established to date, nor has a merchant vessel put in an appearance.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 5th May; the French mail from London March 23 arrived out on the 2nd May.

There is not much news of general importance brought from Hong Kong by the present mail. In its absence considerable sensation appears to have been created by a somewhat extraordinary incident which occurred at the Club. It appears that a sergeant of the 28th Regiment entered that establishment, and, presenting a drawn sword at the beasts of two gentlemen successively who were sitting in the verandah, demanded of each "if he were one of them." On the gentlemen replying promptly in the negative, the man, who was mad drunk, walked into the reading-room, demolished the whole of the gas lamps and brackets with his sword and then chased the members about the Club. He ultimately fell down, and on being taken before the magistrate on the following day he was ordered to pay $30 for the damage he had done, and to undergo three months' simple imprisonment.

The Hoppo of Canton, who arrived on 27th March from the North en route to Canton, called on H. E. the Governor, Mr. Pope Hennessy. The visit was strictly a private one. The Hoppo has brought with him some 200 or 300 men in the Pautah, which he had chartered for $5,000. His suite was so large that there was not sufficient accommodation for them in the Hong Kong Hotel, so that the Hoppo had to engage the premises lately occupied by the M.M. Company.

According to the Registrar-General's return of the births and deaths for the quarter ending the 21st March last, it appears there have been 437 births and 971 deaths during that period. Of the births forty-one have occurred among the British and foreign population.

The China Mail gives the following :—

We are glad to hear that a large map of Kwangtung Province is in process of preparation by the Rev. J. G. Loercher, of the Basel Missionary Society, who for some years past has been gathering information with a view to the production of a guide to the whole province which shall be available for the merchant equally with the missionary. One of the last acts of our late Governor, Sir Arthur Kennedy, was a graceful recognition of the unobtrusive labours of the rev. gentleman in the shape of a grant from the Colonial Treasury to enable the publication to be at once proceeded with. It is believed that the map will be engraved in Gotha.

"His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor has directed that the names of the Government Board of Examiners in the Chinese language should be published. The Board consists of—The Hon. C. C. Smith, Chairman; Mr. F. Stewart; Mr. J. Russell; the Rev. E. J. Eitel, Ph. D., Director of Chinese studies; and Mr. Alfred Lister, Secretary. All communications to the Board must be addressed to the Secretary, and, if proceeding from a person in the Government service, must pass through the head of his department." It ought to be noted that to the present Chairman, who has but recently returned, and resumed his seat among the examiners, is mainly due the existence of this useful Board, the quiet but effectual services of which must in due time exercise a most powerful influence over the various departments of our Colonial service.

The small steamer Sea Gull, belonging to Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co., which arrived here on 24th April, from Yokokama, had rather a long run, having had to contend with very heavy weather the whole passage. We understand that she is to be employed at the wreck of the s.s. Japan during the salvage operations this summer.

Among other damages caused by the heavy rain-fall of the 21st April a landslip occurred on the hill-side above Mr. Dorabjee's new bungalow in Robinson-road. About fifteen or twenty tons of earth, together with several large boulders and smaller pieces of stone, came down from a great height, and the noise thus caused startled the whole of the neighbouring residents. A cow-house which is immediately underneath was slightly injured, but no other damage was caused to life or property.

We are glad to learn that Commodore Watson, R.N., senior officer on this naval station, has received a good service pension. This fact we are sure will give general satisfaction to the Commodore's well-wishers in the service, as well as his many friends outside of it.

Navigating Lieutenant Maunsell, H.M.S. Hornet, was tried by Court Martial on the 26th April for drunkenness and dereliction of duty, and the Court decreed that he lose eighteen months' seniority, and be dismissed his ship.

An inquest was held on 23rd April on the body of a marine, named Joseph M'Millans, at the Naval Hospital, by Mr. James Russell, coroner, with Messrs. W. H. F. Darby, P. Rhodes, and William A. F. Schmidt, as jury. From the evidence it appeared that the deceased, who was a marine on board H.M.S. Charybdis, was on sentry duty on board on the night of the 17th April. He was suddenly missed at a short time before 8 P.M., and every search was made for him. He could not be found, and the general opinion was that he must have fallen overboard or gone ashore. Nothing more was heard of him until his body was found floating near H.M.S. Modeste. The jury returned a verdict of "found drowned."

What with the arrival of our new Governor and one or two little occurrences in connection with that event, there is more than the usual amount of gossip floating round here just now. I should have said our Lieu-Governor, for the preparation of letters-patent appears to be a task that cannot be comfortably got through by the Home authorities within six months, and so for the present Mr. Hennessy has to be satisfied with the title and authority of a Lieu-Governor. There is no use in disguising the fact that the British portion of the community here were not very enthusiastic over Mr. Hennessy's appointment as successor to Sir Arthur Kennedy, and I cannot say that the new Governor's debut here has been altogether a successful one. The landing, which took place in the dusk of the evening, was bungled, and the salute from the shore battery had to be fired over again on the following morning, apparently by way of apology for the general breakdown in the arrangements on the previous evening.

The first act of his Excellency on landing—and I would have you mark this fact well, for it has created an immense amount of gossip here, and has only been indirectly alluded to in the local papers—was to bend and kiss the ring of the Roman Catholic Bishop, who was awaiting him in full canonicals on the wharf. Of course it may be quite right that a good Catholic should pay this respect to his Bishop; still the circumstance seems to stick a little in the throats of the people here, despite what they say to the contrary, and it also seems strange to see the head of the Colony attending the Roman Catholic Cathedral on Sunday leaving vacant the well-known seat so long graced by Sir Arthur Kennedy and his predecessors in St. John's Cathedral. The Portuguese community, however, seem to be exceptionally pleased with Mr. Hennessy. They got up a cheer for him when he landed, and it is said that Mr. Hennessy is the first Governor who has ever been cheered here. The new Governor certainly appears to be anxious to please, and I hope he will be successful.

Talking of matters ecclesiastical, there has been a slight "breeze" at St. Paul's College, and the very small modicum of popularity Bishop Burdon has enjoyed here of late seems to be threatened with a total extinguishment. You will recollect that a few months ago the London and China Express contained a rather glowing account of "Mission Work in China." It was stated in the course of the article that St. Paul's College here had resumed its original purpose as a training college for mission clergy, and that its students had recently been added to by six English students, who had just gone out with the Rev. E. Davys. Well, two of these students went back to England by a recent mail, and a third has left the College and is awaiting instructions from home as to what he is to do. They make certain complaints against the Bishop, and it is also said that the living at the College was such as was not calculated to bring on attacks of the gout, nothing but bread and water being supplied for the table after "tiffin." Anyway, there was a general "flare up" at the College, with the results I have mentioned. The Rev. E. Davys has also been dismissed from the post of Military Chaplain by the Bishop.

General Colborne seems determined that the "coolness" which existed between himself and Sir Arthur Kennedy shall not extend to the new Governor. The General certainly did not grace the departure of our late popular Governor with his presence, and it was remarked as somewhat significant that none of the officers directly under his command were present at the Farewell Banquet, although they were all invited; nor could they, themselves, have had any objection to attend. The military magnate in question, however, came down on horseback to meet the new Governor at his landing, and was also present at the levée at Government House on the 1st May.

We have had some rather violent thunderstorms here lately, with a great deal of rain—about eight inches per week. The temperature yesterday (May 4) was, maximum 84½, and minimum (over night) 79¼.

CANTON.

The Daily Press correspondent writes :—

One of those fierce encounters between the Customs officials and the people which so frequently take place in this shamefully misgoverned country has lately occurred in the Ying Tak district, about a hundred miles from here. It appears that a passenger on board a junk from this port arrived at Ying Tak about the commencement of this month, and when the lekin guard searched his luggage they found a few articles which they said were dutiable. The owner rejoined that they ought to be free, as they were not in the tariff, and he would not pay duty on them. The dispute soon waxed high, and at length from words the parties came to blows, and the officials hauled the luckless passenger before the mandarin of the place. That worthy ordered him to be tied up in the station, and gave instructions to his minions to "squeeze" the refractory man. All attempts to extort money from him having proved fruitless, the soldiers tied him up and gave him a severe flogging. The people of the neighbourhood, of which, by the way, the passenger was a native, had in the meantime been growing gradually more and more excited, and when they saw this unmerited punishment inflicted their indignation broke bounds, and arming themselves with bamboos they attacked the lekin station. The guard turned a gun upon them, and firing, killed two of the crowd. who thereupon fetched out all the guns and other weapons they could muster and a general fight ensued. Several persons have been killed on both sides, and a large number wounded, some seriously. The fight was still proceeding when the news was despatched to Canton. The Viceroy has despatched a delegate to inquire into the case, and investigate into the conduct of the mandarin in charge of the station.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The peaceful solution of the dispute between the Siamese and the Chinese at Tongkah appears, according to our latest accounts, to be as far off as ever. The Siamese are still drawing large bodies of Malay levies from the coast, and a force of not less than from 4,000 to 5,000 armed Malays and Siamese from Quedah, Lancavi, Purlis, Sitole, Trang, Poongha and Salang, are quartered near or about Tongkah; besides this there is a small body of regular troops from Bangkok, and two men-of-war in the harbour; all this force is brought into requisition for the purpose of overawing and intimidating the Chinese, who still maintain a dogged and sulky attitude, and are unwilling to come to any terms or conditions with the Government, short of anything wherein the privileges of their Kongsees and their own personal interests are likely to be compromised. Meantime the Government insists that certain terms for the future peace of the country shall be entered into by the Chinese. One of the terms is, that each Kongsee shall be answerable for the good conduct of its members, and if any act of disobedience to the law can be traced to any individual member in that Kongsee, then the head men of the Kongsee shall deliver up the delinquent to justice, and make restitution for any destruction of property caused by the overt acts of the individual or individuals belonging to the Kongsee. In carrying out this proposition these conditions to extend to the heads of tribes who are in the different Kongsees and to those also who are in no Kongsee. The second condition is that all arms and ammunition shall be delivered up to the Government, and none shall be allowed to bear arms without a license from the authorities. The other conditions are merely of a minor character, such as delivering up to justice the men who have been guilty of the late disturbances, and that the people shall return peacefully to their labours and employments as before.

The promulgation of Christianity in Siam is increasing, and there are now some two thousand communicants in the Roman Catholic Church at Patriw; they are mostly Chinamen and Cambodians. Patriw is a very flourishing province, and the chief town of the name, celebrated for its native sugar and rice mills.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.

The latest intelligence from Atchin is to the effect that all is quiet, and no further disturbances have been reported. The Dutch have just commenced operations against Langsa and Madjapahit, the only two States on the East Coast that had not yet submitted, but the latest news is to the effect that the chiefs of the last mentioned State offered their submission upon receiving an ultimatum from the Dutch officer in command.

It will be remembered that General Nino Bixio, Garibaldi's able Lieutenant in the last Italian revolution, died of cholera at Atchin in December, 1873, while in command of the Italian mercantile steamer Maadaloni. The remains were recovered with much trouble by the Dutch authorities, and have been handed over with military honours at Batavia to the Italian man-of-war Christoforo Colombo, Captain Count Canevaro, in order that they might be taken home for interment in Italian soil.

It has been officially notified that, from the 1st June, until further notice, the import of rice to Pedier, Ayer Labu, and Enjoong is prohibited unless duly authorised by the Assistant Resident of the East Coast of Sumatra.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 12th May; no later mail from London had been received. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

On the morning of 3rd May another of those disastrous fires which have lately caused so much havoc here broke out near Cavenagh-bridge, on the premises of Messrs. Jaimie and Co., ship-chandlers, and completely gutted those as well as Mr. Emmerson's tiffin-rooms above. Every effort was made by the police, who were quickly on the spot, and a number of residents and the blue jackets of the Growler, to save the property, but owing to its inflammable nature nearly the whole was entirely consumed.

The alarm appears to have been given about half-past one A.M., and before the arrival of the fire-engines attempts were made to enter Messrs. Jaimie and Co.'s godown in order to save some of the property, books, &c., of the firm, but every such attempt, both from Flint-street and Cavenagh Bridge-road, was repelled by thick volumes of suffocating black smoke which came pouring out of the doors and windows. Captain Walshe, Inspector General of Police, Superintendent Maxwell, Inspectors Ord, Richards, &c., were soon on the ground with their men, along with a detachment of artillery and a company of H.M. 74th Highlanders from Fort Canning, under Major Eden, R.A., with Lieuts. Hay and Adams. Captain Jones, of H.M.S. Growler, the only British man-of-war in harbour, also landed a party of blue jackets with their engine, who did good service. Captain Ellis also, the Master Attendant, was among the first present, and actively superintended the working of the fire engines, along with Mr. Carrington, Municipal Engineer. By two o'clock the two municipal steam fire-engines, in charge of Mr. Cazalas, had arrived and were hard at work, the one stationed at Cavenagh Bridge, and the other at Johnston's Pier, and about the same time the Insurance Companies hand-engine was set to work at the river steps in Flint-street. But, by that time, the fire had gained such a mastery over the combustible materials of a ship-chandler's store inside the building that it was impossible to save anything, even out of Mr. Emmerson's rooms on the first floor. Fortunately there was little or no wind, and, fortunately also, the night was clear calm moonlight. There was further an abundant supply of water close at hand. Another favourable circumstance was that the block of buildings was divided into two halves by a substantial brick wall, which aided very materially the fire-engines in preventing the flames from spreading from the half next the river to the half next Battery-road. It was feared at first that the whole block would go, in which case Messrs. McAlister and Co.'s store would have been in imminent danger; but it was soon seen that the Municipal fire-engines, which really worked admirably, could master the fire. Nevertheless, as a matter of precaution, the contents of the godowns in the block untouched nearest the fire, which were occupied, one as a shop, and the other by the E. and A. Company for stores, with Messrs. Bryce and Ellis the ship brokers' office upstairs, were rapidly cleared of their contents in a somewhat summary manner. Close attention was also paid to the roofs of Messrs. McAlister and Co. and Messrs. Hinnekindt's godowns on the other side of Flint-street. By three o'clock the whole of Messrs. Jaimie and Co.'s premises and Mr. Emmerson's rooms were nearly gutted, and the roof had fallen in, but the fire was completely under control, and there was no longer any danger of its spreading further. By half-past three it was being rapidly extinguished by full streams of water from the three engines, and the bugles sounded "fall in" to the soldiers and blue jackets, who were then withdrawn, after having done great good service, and displayed excellent discipline. The entire premises occupied by Messrs. Jaimie and Co., and by Mr. Emmerson were consumed, with all their contents. Messrs. Jaimie and Co. were fully covered with fire insurance to the extent of $50,000, distributed amongst the following offices:—

Phœnix Fire Office	$20,000
Royal Insurance Company	15,000
North German of Hamburg	10,000
Netherlands India Office	5,000

Mr. Emmerson had his tiffin and billiard-rooms also fully covered, to the extent of $5,000, in the Netherlands India Fire Insurance Company. The contents of the shop were all saved. The E. and A. Company were fully covered with insurance, but all the damage to their stores occurred from and during their hasty removal, and consisted mainly of a portion of their liquors being broached by some thirsty souls, and the loss will be trifling. Messrs. Bryce and Ellis had their office furniture and books considerably knocked about and damaged in the process of being pitched out of window and door for safety from the fire. In addition to the insurance on goods, the block of buildings is covered in the London Assurance Corporation to the extent of $24,000, but this amount covers also the buildings on the opposite side of Flint-street, occupied by Messrs. McAlister and Co., and Messrs. E. and H. Hinnekindt.

We are glad to announce that at last the Colonial-office has awakened to the necessity of providing another judge for these Settlements. On the 4th May his Excellency the Administrator received a telegram from the Secretary of State to the effect that Mr. Justice H. L. Phillips, of Natal, had been appointed here, and the announcement was received with general satisfaction. The present sittings of the Assizes conclude on the 12th May, and in the middle of the evidence in an important commercial suit the Acting Chief Justice has to leave for Penang to preside at the Assizes there, having had to adjourn the summary side of the Supreme Court until his return. It is arranged that Mr. Justice Ford will take the criminal cases at Penang, leaving the civil causes to be heard by his successor, Mr. Phillips, and will return to Singapore about the 4th June, after which he will remain here permanently, and we shall thus have the advantage —which has taken us so long to obtain—of one judge being always here.

Mr. Justice Ford has been engaged in the Supreme Court in hearing an action, in which Messrs. Sassoon of Bombay are the plaintiffs, and Messrs. R. M. C. A. Chitty and M. V. A. Chitty are the defendants—for the recovery of $27,402.86 and interest, for wrongful conversion of plaintiffs' goods, for detention of plaintiffs' goods, for goods sold and delivered, money received, interest and on account. The case is a complicated one, and involves an intricate question of accounts and will not be completed for some time. The Attorney-General appears for plaintiffs and Messrs. Donaldson and Burkinshaw for defendants.

Mr. W. E. Maxwell, who succeeded Mr. Davidson as Resident of Perak and performed the offices appertaining to that post until the arrival of his successor, is expected to return here about the end of May, and he will then be appointed senior police magistrate, in the place of Captain Walshe, who is now acting for the inspector-general of police, absent on leave.

On the 7th May, a flash of lightning struck a corner of the residence on Tanjong Pagar hill occupied by Captain Smith, Manager of the Dock Company. The lightning seems to have first struck a tree close to the house and then glanced on to the roof, tearing a portion off, and then zig-zagging down the wall into the ground twisting the wall-paper and other materials in the way into all sorts of shapes. Mrs. E. M. Smith and her ayah, who were in the house at the time, had a very narrow escape from sudden death. Mrs. Smith was at first believed to have suffered no injury beyond a shock to the system, but subsequently symptoms of paralysis supervened in the lower limbs.

Two prisoners, one of whom was sentenced to death for the murder of Mr. Dent, and whose sentence was afterwards commuted, and the other, a long-sentence prisoner, who was tried at the present assizes for having endeavoured to escape, have succeeded in making their escape from the Criminal Prison, and have not since been heard of.

The engines at Tanjong Pagar have stopped playing at night. The coals may now be said to be wholly extinguished, and rapid progress is making with clearing away the debris and erecting the new coal sheds.

The Commission appointed to make arrangements for the representation of the Straits Settlements at the forthcoming Paris Exhibition has held a preliminary meeting at the office of the Colonial Secretary.

Rain has fallen and cholera has been considerably on the decrease in town. In fact, the epidemic may now be said to have almost completely disappeared.

The following notification by the Government of the Philippines has been forwarded by H.B.M.'s Consul at Manila :—

"In compliance with the instructions which I have received from H.M.'s Government, I have decreed as follows :—1st. All the ports of Sulu Archipelago are open to free commerce, and trade shall be respected according to the principles of the Maritime International Law. 2nd. The Ports held in military occupation by our land and naval forces are excepted from the operation of the above disposition, and vessels shall be subject to the restrictions which the security of our military occupation may necessitate in the said Ports, which in all other respects are also declared free for general commerce."

The Gazette also notifies that the Hon. H. Plunket, Superintendent of Police, Penang, has received six months' leave of absence from the 10th of April, and Dr. A. F. Anderson, Colonial Surgeon, six months' leave of absence from the 5th May. Dr. T. I. Rowell will act as Colonial Surgeon during the absence of Dr. Anderson.

PENANG.

The present mail brings advices extending to the 14th May. The P. and O. mail from London April 13 arrived out on the 12th May.

We learn from the Penang Gazette that a Chinese riot, which might have resulted in a serious fight between the newly-formed Gee Hock society and the Ghee Hins, occurred at Chungkat, in the south of Province Wellesley, on the 1st May. Fortunately, owing to the active exertions of the manager of Caledonia estate, Mr Halliday, assisted by the Superintending Engineer, Mr. Dunlop, who pluckily exerted themselves in maintaining the peace, the police under Inspector Scully were enabled to crush the affair in the bud. It is to be hoped that the headmen of the kongsees concerned will be held responsible for this breach of the peace, and that the Executive will not hesitate to exercise the powers of deportation conferred upon it by the Legislature.

Mr. Trevenen, who was to have been appointed to the second Magistracy in Province Wellesley, has been shifted to Malacca, and in the meantime no one has been appointed to succeed him in the previous appointment.

The destruction of coal by the late conflagration in Singapore has had the effect of making a considerable rise in the price of the article at Penang.

The average note circulation of the local banks during the month of April was :—Chartered Mercantile Bank $426,920, Chartered Bank $192,785.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Transactions in Imports had been altogether on a much restricted scale. Yarns were less inquired for, and lower rates generally were offered. Shirtings were in scarcely any demand. Small sales of Drills had been made at lower rates; Government requirements having been apparently satisfied by direct importations from Shanghai. Indigo Shirtings had attracted some attention at low prices, and Victoria Lawns were in fair demand also at a decline. In Woollens, best qualities of Italian Cloth were occasionally saleable : Mousselines had been more inquired for, and Blankets remained in some demand. Metals continued very quiet; local dealers seemed to be fully supplied or were without orders, and to effect business holders would have to accept low quotations.

SHANGHAI.—Without any improvement in prices obtainable there had been a rather better demand for several of the leading Cotton manufactures. In Grey Shirtings sales are reported of all weights, most of which had been of the better qualities at Tls. 1.88 for Eagles and from Tls. 1.65 to 1.70 for good medium, to good 8-4lbs. Cloths; low descriptions were neglected, and Heavy Shirtings without any improvement. T-Cloths had changed hands without much alteration in prices. Drills had been wanted, and sold at the following rates :—Tls. 2.67 to 2.80 per piece for American makes, which have been most asked for, English Drills finding buyers at Tls. 1.82½ to 1.83 per piece of 14 lbs., and about Tls. 1.90 to 1.91 per piece of 15 lbs. weights. White Shirtings had moved quietly as wanted, at about previous quotations. In Jeans and Sheetings only a small business was passing. Woollens were still sold freely by public auction. The sales mark some improvement in Camlets, but Lastings and Spanish Stripes were if anything rather lower in value. Prices for nearly all kinds of Metals remained as last quoted. A moderate business had been transacted in some leading articles, but a more limited demand had been experienced for Lead and Iron, supplies of Nailrods had increased beyond anticipations, and depression was the characteristic feature of the market.

HONG KONG.—The market for Yarns and all articles under the heading of Piece Goods had been inactive, owing to the non-settlement of the currency question, chop-dollars being quoted at $10.00 discount per mille. The heavy rains had also had a depressing influence upon business generally. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says :—All counts of English Yarns command about former figures. Piece Goods : Sales of Grey and White Shirtings have been small, while T-Cloths have been moderately bought. English Drills are not in demand, and no American Drills are on offer. Some further small sales of American Cotton Goods have been made:—Continental mills Sheetings at $3.30 to $3.35, Massachusetts mills Sheetings at $3.55 to $3.60, and P. M. C. Jeans at $3.20 to $3.25 per piece. Woollens : Stocks of Camlets are light, and prices are maintained Spanish Stripes are hard to place. Best 12lbs. Blankets are scarce and inquired for at quotations. Metals : Fair sales of Lead have been made at slightly better prices. Tin Plates are slow of sale. Steel is wanted. The stock of Quicksilver is large, and there are now sellers at a decline from late rates. Yellow Metal has been quitted upon lower terms. Coals : The receipts have been 9,550 tons, comprising 7,100 tons of Cardiff and 2,450 tons of Australian. The sales have been 1,400 tons of Australian at $8.25 to $8.50 per ton, and 1,260 tons of Welsh, at 42s. for Cardiff, and $9 per ton for North Wales. The arrivals have not been excessive in the past fortnight and the market is now fairly steady at quoted rates, but buyers are showing no inclination to pay better prices.

CANTON.—Lead : Quotations unchanged; Mixed Brands $8.30, WB and Hole Chop $8.40 to $8.45 per picul. Quicksilver : Prices quoted $61 to $61.50 per picul. Ginseng : Clarified, No. 1, $385 to $435; No. 2, $235 to $285; No. 3, $135 to $195 per picul: Crude, No. 1 $380 to $420; No. 2, $230 to $270; No. 3, $130 to $180 per picul.

MANILA.—The Piece Goods market had been a little more active during the fortnight. Values of Plain Staples, with the exception of White Shirtings, had given way a little. Woven Coloured goods, which were scarce, exhibited signs of advancing, while Printed had declined considerably.

SINGAPORE.—The market for Manchester staples had continued dull, and prices generally had had a weaker tendency; but the amount of business done, although not large, showed a considerable improvement on the preceding period. The market was well stocked with Cotton staples, and the supplies coming forward were heavy. Grey Shirtings had continued quiet; about 10,000 pieces had been placed, chiefly 8¼ lbs. of low quality, at $1.65. Grey supers difficult to place, holders taking lower rates to effect sales. T-Cloths sold to a moderate extent, 7 lbs. were pressed for sale at declining rates; 6 lbs. quiet, and moved off very slowly. Drills unchanged. White Shirtings dull, and business unimportant. White Cambrics in more request at previous rates. White spots neglected. Grey Yarn, No. 40's, had received more attention; rates unchanged. Dyed and Printed Goods without change. Prints saleable at low rates. Iron quiet; stocks in first hands very low. Steel unsaleable, market overstocked. Yellow Metal in heavy stock, quiet, and weaker.

PENANG.—A fair business had been done during the fortnight, but in some instances prices were lower. Grey Shirtings: Moderate sales of 7lbs. at $30 to $33, and 8¼ lbs. at $35½ to $44 according to quality. A sale of 45-inch 9 lbs. at 45. Grey Supers: In no request. Grey Madapollams: A sale of 2¼ lbs. at $12.37½. Grey T.-Cloths: In good demand; sales of 5 lbs. at $22, 6 lbs. at $24½ to $31½, and 7 lbs. at $28 to $29. Grey Yarns: Small sales of No. 40 at $103. White Shirtings: Fair sales from $48 to $80, according to quality. A sale of 45-inch at $68. In Woollens and Metals nothing had been done.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The first arrivals of "new crop" came to hand with the opening of the month of May, and had found buyers at prices ranging from $48 to $56 per picul. The musters so far shown afforded no criterion of the season's crop, being mostly "Garden Teas;" but the weather had been fairly favourable. Settlements to date are reported to have been about 260 piculs. The s.s. Gaelic with the present mail would take about 2,000 packages new crop tea.

SHANGHAI.—Black: No business whatever had been done, the small remaining stock being held by the teamen for prices far above the London market. Green: The season had, closed slightly lower prices having been accepted by teamen for country teas.

TAMSUI.—It is reported from this place that the production of Formosa Oolongs will be greater than in any previous season. The estimated supply is 11,000,000 lbs.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Circular says:—During the past fortnight transactions in Congou have amounted to about 9,700 boxes; the demand has chiefly run upon the better grades, the prices asked by teamen for common descriptions being much too high to tempt buyers into operations. Purchases have generally been made at from Tls. 21 to 28, but a few small parcels of finest tea have found buyers at Tls. 30 and upwards; no change can be quoted in the market; prices have, in some instances, ruled rather lower, but the quality of the settlements shows a falling off. Shipments from Macao continue on a fair scale, and consist for the most part of contract teas. Scented Teas: Musters have been shown on the market during the past few days, and about 4,000 to 5,000 boxes of Capers and Pekoes have been packed for early shipment; prices have not yet transpired, but they are said to range from Tls. 21 to 28 for fair to fine. It is perhaps premature to offer any opinion on the quality of the crop, but, as far as can be seen, it is likely to be inferior to that of last season; the Capers being apparently of poor make, much mixed in leaf, and coarser in cup, while the Pekoes show no improvement on the indifferent teas of last year. In our next issue we shall doubtless be able to advise a considerable business. Scenting flower has been in fair supply and of good quality, and has been purchaseable at lower rates than at this time last year. The shipments of New Season's Congou to date have been 431,657 lbs., against 461,499 lbs. to corresponding date last season.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had been nearly at a standstill, the only transactions which had taken place consisting of a small lot of Hanks at $560 (20s. 6d., or f.58) and some Oshius at $500 (18s. 9d., or f.52), besides deliveries of "Filatures" under contracts. Sellers were anxious to realise, and would probably accept lower prices, but there was no demand whatever at the moment, and quotations were nominal. Settlements from 1st July, 1876, to date 20,425 bales, against corresponding period, season 1875-6, 12,850 bales; do., 1874-5, 11,200 bales.

SHANGHAI.—The unfavourable telegraphic advices had caused an almost complete cessation of business on the part of foreign buyers, but natives had been heavy shippers. Tsatlees: Prices showed a decline for the fortnight of Tls. 30 to Tls. 40 per picul, and at this concession 400 to 500 bales had been settled by foreign buyers, and about as many more bought by native speculators to hold. These operations had cleared the market of all good Silks, and nothing remained on offer but common and undesirable parcels. As regards the new season's Silk the Chinese reported an abundance of worms, but an inadequate supply of mulberry leaves; so far the weather had been fairly propitious.

CANTON.—There are settlements reported to the extent of some 100 bales No. 3 and No. 4 Tsatlee at prices showing a reduction on last quotations of fully $20 to 30 per picul. The available stock of these classifications was firmly held. Long Reels: Market almost cleared of this description. Re-reels had been settled at lower prices, and the season was at its close for this class. New Silk: Reports from the country continued favourable, although the weather during the fortnight had been very wet. Musters were looked for in two or three weeks from date.

MISCELLANEOUS.

YOKOHAMA.—Camphor was quoted $16 to 17, Wax $11 to 12, Rice $2.05 to 2.10, Isinglass $28 to 30.

HONG KONG.—Supplies of Camphor had been very light, no cargo having been received from Japan and but little from Formosa, and the value of the Formosa article was $18.50 to $19.00 per picul. Vermilion was quoted $33.00 per case. Gamboge was scarce and good quality commanded full prices. Aniseed Oil was in fair supply and held for $190 per picul. Holders of Cassia Oil were demanding $97.50, but buyers would not pay this price at the moment. Aniseed Stars of ordinary quality had been in demand at $25.50 per picul, and but a small supply was offering.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon's Circular says:—Drugs and Spices: Cassia Lignea is quoted at for New Season's loting $10.40 to 10.50 in mats, $10.75 to 10.80 in boxes, for Old Season's $10.75 to 10.80 in mats, $11 to 11.10 in boxes. Sales of "New Season's" 1,300 to 1,400 piculs. Stock 1,500 piculs. Sales of "Old Season's" nil. Stock 7,000 to 8,000 piculs. Cassia Buds, $18 to 18.25 per picul. Star Aniseed, $25 to 26. Aniseed Oil, $58 to 60. Rhubarb, No. 2, $58 to 60. Alum, $1.80 to 1.90 per picul. Camphor, $16.50 to 17 per picul, packed. Sundries: Fire Crackers 75c. per box for Manhing's No. 1 gold chop. Vermillion, $32 to 33 per box. Matting, Manhing's Fine contract, White 4/4, 10½c.; 5/4, 12½c.; 6/4, 15c. per yard; Red Check, 4/4, 11½c.; 5/4, 13½c.; 6/4, 16c.; Double Extra Imperial, white 4/4, 13½c.; 5/4, 16c.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell, and Co.'s Circular says:—Sugar and Hemp have been very active during the fortnight, but Coffee has declined. Freights have further given way slightly, and exchange has gone in favour of buyers. Sugar: Telegraphic news has greatly excited our market, and sales to the extent of about 100,000 piculs have been made at continually advancing prices. Purchases of superior have latterly been made at $5.50 to $5.62½ per picul, and for extra $5.75 to $5.81¼ per picul is freely offered. Unclayed: Arrivals taken at $2.87½ to $3.3 per picul, but higher prices have been obtained though terms have not been made public. At Ilo Ilo and Cebu there is a good demand, and prices have a strong upward tendency. Hemp: The price has again advanced, and sales are reported to have been made at $5.43¾ to $5.56¼ per picul (£22 8s. 6d. to £22 17s. 6d.). Holders, however, are now asking more for stored parcels, and free supplies are very difficult to be had. In course of shipment there are now 7,000 bales going forward to Great Britain, but none to the States. Coffee: The price has now dropped to $19.50 per picul (£73 7s. 4d.), at which there is only a very moderate demand.

SINGAPORE.—During the fortnight a moderate business had been done in produce, Gambier and Pepper had had a downward tendency, but values of most of the other staples had been very firm although both exchange and freights seemed likely to rise. The Gambier market opened at $4.75 to $4.70, but rapidly declined to $4.47½, closed weak. Black Pepper, the second crop coming on, the market opened at $8.05, but had since declined to $7¾ per picul. White Pepper unchanged, about 100 tons taken up at former rates. Tin was quoted firmer.

PENANG.—Transactions in Tin had been moderate, and a limited business had been done in Pepper. Very little had occurred in other produce. Tin: The purchases had been at $19 to $19.50. During the fortnight there had been a great excitement in the market whenever there was a demand, holders at one time asking $20.20. The last transaction was at $19.50, but there was no more obtainable at this price; the stock being held for $20. Black Pepper: Arrivals small, and the market had fallen; 750 piculs West Coast sold at $7.56 to $7.65, and 1,400 piculs Atchin at $7.40 to $7.25. White Pepper: In demand for Singapore, and transactions at $13½ to $14. Sugar: Both European and Chinese manufacture had been in demand, but manufacturers declined entering into contracts.

One of the latter was killed, and two others mortally wounded. "It seems from the report," says the Gazette, "that the provocation came from the French. Steps have been taken to institute a searching and impartial inquiry into this lamentable occurrence."

A Chinese Dictionary in the Cantonese Dialect. By ERNEST JOHN EITEL, PH.D., Part I., A-K. Trubner and Co.—For twenty years Dr. Williams's Tonic Dictionary in the Canton dialect has been the vade mecum of every Cantonese student, and the envy of all students of other Chinese dialects—not favoured in the possession of such a portable and useful assistant to the acquisition of the most trying of languages. Lately, however, the tables have been turned on the Cantonese scholar. Taking Williams for his model, Dr. Carstairs Douglas brought out a Tonic Dictionary of the Foh-Kien dialect; and then Dr. Williams excelled his former work in his Mandarin Dictionary. Meantime the whole stock of the Cantonese Dictionary was exhausted, and second-hand copies were rarely in the markets, and only at several times the original cost. It is therefore a distinct pleasure to us to call attention to the fact that Dr. E. J. Eitel, already well known to students of Chinese and Buddhistic literature by his vocabulary of China, equivalents of Sanscrit terms, and his very able and interesting lectures on Buddhism, his work on Feng Shui, &c., has devoted his labour to the production of a new dictionary to supply this want. The fact that Dr. Eitel at first only contemplated a revised edition of the Cantonese Tonic Dictionary is a high and well deserved compliment to his predecessor. Nor does it cast any slight upon the acknowledged value of Dr. Williams's work that now, after an interval of twenty years, the advance in Chinese scholarship, and especially the herculean labours of Dr. Legge upon the Chinese classics, led to a change of plan. The present work will be found in every respect a decided improvement on the former, unless it be in bulk, for increased size and diminished handiness is not in itself a recommendation. It is difficult, however, to see how the increase of size could have been avoided. A number of words omitted by Dr. Williams are included here, the Chinese characters (a most valuable improvement) are added to the illustrative sentences, and the classical meanings taken from Dr. Legge's vocabularies necessarily swell the volume. One most convenient novelty, appearing, we believe, positively for the first time in any Chinese dictionary, takes up no extra space, and deserves the gratitude of all who will use the work. Dr. Eitel has marked above each character its radical and number of strokes. All who have experienced the difficulty of retaining 214 radicals in memory, some of which are very rarely encountered in reading, and the bother of counting on the fingers the strokes which make up a Chinese symbol, will appreciate this welcome service. This feature of the work, and its embodiment of the classic vocabularies, will render it useful to students of other dialects besides the Cantonese, and the Mandarin pronunciation being added makes the work suitable for consular and other interpreters. The introduction contains much interesting matter which our space does not allow us to discuss. We are glad to note that Dr. Eitel's is thoroughly outspoken and sound on the subject of tones. He could not have rendered the beginner a more valuable service than this firm protest against the indolence which would slur over as unimportant this essential peculiarity of Chinese speech. The recognition in the Cantonese of a ninth tone besides the eight usually accorded a place in the dictionaries is a great merit, because the ninth tone is a fact, because the recognition of it draws the student's attention to the necessity of learning the tones by ear, and not relying absolutely on what teachers and books say about them, and also because it required courage to admit such an unpopular discovery into the already too formidable list of tones. The examples for tone-practice are new and well-arranged. Dr. Eitel has amply repaid the confidence which led the Legislative Council and the Chamber of Commerce of Hong Kong to grant him assistance for the production of this work.

PROFESSOR SHELDON AMOS ON CHINA.

On the 9th inst. Professor Sheldon Amos delivered a lecture before a small audience at the Working Men's College, upon our relations with China during the last forty years. The lecturer directed special attention to the opium traffic, and took up a strongly condemnatory view of our action towards China, both in that and in other matters. After dealing with the early history of our intercourse with the country, he went on to say that a clear notion of the nature of those relations might be gathered from two or three great events—the treaty of Nanking in 1842 and the first Chinese war immediately preceding it; and the treaty of Tien-tsin in 1860, which still existed; and he then related the circumstances which had led to these treaties, enumerating their terms, and criticising the action of England in relation to the Chinese policy. After describing the steps taken by the Chinese Government for the suppression of the opium traffic, the war which followed, and the subsequent treaties imposed, he expressed an opinion that throughout our relations with China our endeavour had been mainly to get new ports open. He characterised the action of England in regard to China as iniquitous, and in support of this assertion he specially mentioned the taking of the island of Hong Kong, which, since it came into possession of this country, had, he said, "been converted into a hotbed of legalised vice, by which a great evil had been inflicted upon China." The whole of the difficulties with China he attributed, directly or indirectly, to opium, and concluded by reading one or two passages from Chinese writers condemnatory of the English policy and the continuance of the opium traffic, by which social and moral obligations were destroyed.

HONG KONG.

In the Blue-book on the Colonies for 1875, just issued, Sir Arthur Kennedy's report on Hong Kong is published. The observations made by the late governor are very concise, and for the most part are merely introductory of the reports from the Heads of Departments, which have already been noticed in these columns from time to time. Sir Arthur's general remarks are as follows:—

A vast amount of material improvement has been effected during the year. Sanitary improvements have been progressing. The drainage and sewage have, at considerable cost, been cleansed, flushed, and improved; new drains constructed, and many which had been choked and stagnant for years put into working order, resulting in the improved health of the whole community. A large extent of road and streets have been re-made, and side channels to carry off the floods of rain constructed. Many miles of mountain path have been made. The public gardens have been enlarged and improved, and will now compare favourably with any place of recreation in the East. Trees have been extensively planted on the hitherto barren waste lands. Justice is firmly and fairly administered. The Chinese population are docile and orderly, having full confidence in the impartial administration of the laws. The Colony is well served by its public officers, and I could not report of its condition and progress in the satisfactory manner I now do, If I had not received their efficient and cordial support.

CEYLON.

A Blue-book recently issued contains the report for the year 1875 by Sir W. H. Gregory, late Governor of the above Colony. The value of the imports in 1875, exclusive of specie, was Rs. 44,828,049, or Rs. 1,818,814 less than the corresponding amount in 1874, Rs. 46,646,863. There was an increase of Rs. 11,467,647 on the exports, the value for the two years having been, 1874, Rs. 44,868,358, and 1875, Rs. 56,336,005. Adding to these the specie imported and exported, the total value of the imports and exports of 1875 stands thus, as compared with the preceding year:—

Imports.			Exports.
1874	...	...Rs. 56,918,600	1874	...	...Rs. 46,873,887
1875	...	... 57,186,559	1875	...	... 57,337,707

Regarding the health of the colony, the Report says:—The prevailing diseases were the same as in former years—Fevers, diseases of the lungs, affections of the liver and spleen, diseases of the stomach and bowels, venereal affections, skin diseases, ulcers, &c. Cholera, which carried off twenty-two prisoners in the Northern, six in the Western, one in the Southern, and one in the Central Province, contributes towards the excess in the mortality, and were it not for this the death-rate of the year 1875 would have been almost on a par with that of the previous year. But even including the deaths from cholera, the mortality, 2·77 per cent., contrasts very favourably with that of the years 1871 and 1872, when it was as high as 6·8 and 5.05 per cent. respectively.

On the subject of railways the report states:—

The number of miles open for public traffic in 1875 was 91½, viz., Colombo to Kandy 74½ miles, Peradeniya to Nawalapitiya 17 miles, against an average of 83 miles in 1874.

The gross receipts amounted to Rs. 2,896,223, or Rs. 470,663 more than the earnings in 1874, Rs. 2,425,560, and the working expenses to Rs. 982,830, as against Rs. 886,845 in 1874. The difference between these figures and those in the returns of the Auditor-General is accounted for by the fact that the latter show the amounts brought to account within the year, and the former the actual amounts of the annual receipts and expenditure. The actual net increase of profits over 1874 was Rs. 374,678.

The number of passengers carried was 858,094, against 708,376 in the previous year, and the tonnage of goods, inclusive of breakwater materials (18,990 tons), 212,229 tons, against 167,975 tons in 1874.

A contract for the construction of a line from Colombo to Morotuwa, a distance of 11½ miles, was let to Mr. Mitchell during the year at Rs. 282,049, exclusive of permanent way and rolling-stock, which are provided by Government, and the line is to be open for traffic by February 1877. The cost is to be defrayed out of general revenue.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

The above-named Blue-book also contains the reports from Sir W. Jervois on the Straits Settlements for the same period. It states:—The grand total of the value of imports into the three settlements for the year 1875 is $63,137,716, showing a decrease of $3,980,266, rather under 6 per cent., when compared with the amount for 1874. The value of imports into Singapore for the year is $43,766,201, a decrease of $3,120,869, or a little more than 6½ per cent. from the previous year. The following statement shows the amounts under each of the three classes into which the imports are divided:—

Digitized by Google

From United Kingdom		$8,669,518
„ British Colonies and Coasting ...		15,373,924
„ Foreign Countries		19,722,759

In the first the decrease amounts to $1,735,831, or nearly 17 per cent. on the value in 1874. This decrease is due chiefly to the general stagnation in trade, and to the low price of cotton goods, but partly also to the fact that English goods are now sometimes conveyed direct to the markets in China, Manila, and Java, instead of being transhipped here, as was formerly the case.

The grand total of the value of exports during the year from the three Settlements is $62,493,328, showing a decrease of $149,667, or less than a quarter per cent., when compared with the total for 1874. The value for Singapore for the year is $41,619,519, viz.:—

To United Kingdom	$6,658,236
„ British Colonies and Coasting	9,791,975
„ Foreign Countries	25,169,308

In the first there is an increase of $212,040, or more than 3 per cent., in the second there is a decrease of $3,033,658, or about 24 per cent., and in the third an increase of $2,932,339, or more than 13 per cent.

Regarding the Judicial arrangements of the Colony the report says :—The whole work of the Supreme Court, in the absence of the judge of Penang as acting chief justice at the Fiji Islands, continued to be performed by the puisne judge, whose salary, made up of the whole of his own and the half of that of the absent judge, amounted to $10,008, or $912 more than the full salary of the senior judge of the Settlement. It has now, I think, been conclusively proved that, with a little strengthening of the stipendiary magistracy, one judge for the Settlement is sufficient.

The working of the new court of quarter sessions has been eminently unsatisfactory, and the court may be designated a failure. This may, to a considerable degree, be attributed to the appointment as president of the court of the puisne judge, who, as already stated, had also acted from the establishment of the court as judge of Penang. Many of the seventy-one cases sent to this court by the magistrate of Prince of Wales Island, as well as of the twelve cases sent up by the magistrate of Province Wellesley, were remitted to the courts of those magistrates and ultimately disposed of by them.

Naval and Military.

There is no truth in the rumour that General Colborne, at present in command of the troops on the Straits and Hong Kong Station, has applied for leave of absence.

Commander William M. Lang has been appointed to the command of the Magpie, gun vessel, in China, vice Charles V. Anson, invalided.

Mr. Sclater-Booth, M.P., President of the Local Government Board, accompanied by Earl Stanhope, has paid an official visit of inspection to the Exmouth, which has taken the place of the Goliath as a training ship for the pauper boys of London. The right hon. gentleman addressed the lads, and pointed out the advantages which had been afforded them by the excellent training they were receiving in being made proficient to take their places in Her Majesty's navy or the mercantile marine of their country. He congratulated them as well as their instructors on their appearance and perfect discipline, and urged them to continue their exertions to attain the high positions which were open to them through the training they received on board that ship, and he was proud of his connection with the work.

On the 9th inst. Midhat Pacha, accompanied by Mr. Austen, C.E., and Mr. J. R. Mayers, visited the works of Messrs. J. Thornycroft and Co., at Chiswick, and inspected the arrangements for turning out those little vessels. After the inspection, Midhat Pacha witnessed the launch of a torpedo vessel, just completed for the Dutch Government. This vessel, 76ft. long by 10ft. beam, was launched complete with steam up, and the arrangements were so perfect that immediately after the launch Midhat Pacha was taken for a short run on the river, and ultimately landed opposite his hotel at Blackfriars. During the run the engines, then tried for the first time, worked most admirably, and Midhat Pacha expressed himself much gratified with his visit and with the pleasant run he had on the river.

The armour-plated ship Teméraire, under construction at Chatham, is expected to make a trial of her machinery at the measured mile, off the Maplin Sands, about the 25th inst. All is bustle on board now in finishing the vessel off. Her fitments for firing the fish and other torpedoes are now well advanced, but everything in connection with them is kept a profound secret. It is said that the firing apparatus is an improvement upon any yet fitted on board any vessel. A strict order has been issued that only workmen engaged upon the vessel are to be allowed on board, and a policeman is kept on duty at the gangway to prevent strangers going on board.

By permission of the Lords of the Admiralty, Admiral Popoff, of the Imperial Russian Navy, has paid a visit of inspection to Chatham dockyard. He went over the various vessels under construction and fitting out, but the greater part of his time was spent on board the armour-plated ship Téméraire, which is preparing for sea.

The Dahomian blockade was raised on the 12th ult., the fine of 500 puncheons of palm oil having been paid by the King. The blockading squadron, consisting of H.M.S. Tourmaline, Sirius, Boxer, Seagull, Mallard, and Cygnet, were to leave on the 15th ult., for Cape Coast.

The Supply, 2, iron troop and store ship, has arrived at Chatham from the Cape of Good Hope and the West Coast of Africa, and is being dismantled, preparatory to being paid off and put out of commission.

The Marquis of Lorne is going through a course of instruction in gunnery at the Royal Military Repository, Woolwich, under the direction of Major Duncan, R.A.

Commander Hugo L. Pearson, of the Osborne Royal yacht, which arrived at Portsmouth from the Mediterranean on the 11th inst., has forwarded to the Admiralty, through Admiral Sir George Elliot, the Commander-in-Chief, a report respecting a sea monster the yacht encountered during her homeward voyage. The report states that on the afternoon of the 2nd instant., while the yacht was proceeding round the north coast of Sicily towards Cape Vito, the officer on watch observed a long ridge of fins, each about six feet long, moving slowly along, the sea being very calm at the time. He called for a telescope, and was at once joined by other officers. The Osborne was steaming westward at a speed of about 10½ knots an hour, and the fins were progressing in an eastwardly direction. As the yacht met the fins those on board noticed the foremost part of a gigantic sea monster. Its skin was apparently devoid of scales, was almost as sleek as a seal. The head was bullet-shaped, with an elongated termination, being somewhat like that of a seal, and about six feet in diameter. Its features were only seen by one officer, who described them as like those of an alligator. The neck appeared to be narrow, and the body was somewhat like that of a turtle, a fin about fifteen feet long extending from either side. The appearance of the monster is accounted for by a submarine volcano which occurred north of Galita, in the Gulf of Tunice, about the middle of May, and was reported at the time by a steamer which was struck by a detached fragment of submarine rock. The disturbance below water, it is thought probable, may have driven up the monster from its "native element," as the site of the eruption is only 100 miles from where it was reported to have been seen.

A letter written by one of the crew of the Alexandra gives the following as the cause of the émeute on board :—"The squadron being at drill, the work of the Alexandra did not please the captain, who ordered the watch extra drill, which they refused to perform. Two days later the hands were turned up and informed that the admiral had ordered the ship to sea for fourteen days to do "black list," and that many of them would find out before long what that meant. As soon as the men were passed down they commenced hooting and howling, and a short time afterwards the rammers, worms, pikes, and sights of the guns were thrown overboard. Since then sailor sentries have been placed all over the ship in charge of the guns and gear, and are held responsible for their safety." The ship was with the squadron when this letter was written.

A few days since a boy belonging to one of the ships of the Channel Squadron, the Lord Warden, fell from the mizentop, a height of nearly 100 feet. He struck against the lower rigging and rebounded overboard. Captain Fremantle was on the quarter-deck and saw the occurrence, and, knowing that the boy would be stunned and instantly sink, he dived off the deck into the water, and succeeded in grasping him and bringing him to the surface. The boy is likely to recover.

With the view of promoting uniformity in the dress of seamen in the navy, the Lords of the Admiralty have directed that the flannels of seamen shall be cut square across the breast, and close up to the neck—so as to afford more protection to the chest—with a narrow half-inch blue binding round the neck, the wearing of sleeves being optional.

The London School Board purposed to undertake the management of a training ship for Industrial School boys, but the Admiralty have informed the Board that no ship can be lent for the purpose.

The model of the bust of the late Commodore Goodenough, which is to be placed in the Painted Hall at Greenwich, is now on exhibition at Count Gleichen's studio, St. James's Palace.

The iron screw steamship Monarch, Captain M. Culme Seymour, arrived at Spithead on the 13th inst. from the Mediterranean station. She will proceed to Sheerness to be paid off.

Captain Charles Inglis died on the 9th inst., in his 83rd year. He was present at the pursuit and destruction, in October, 1809, of the French ships Robuste and Lion.

A French fishing smack of Granville has been captured by H.M.S. Dasher whilst fishing within the limit of English waters, and has been taken with her crew to Jersey.

LONDON: MONDAY, JUNE 18, 1877.

THE report of the Messageries Maritimes Company for the past year, of which we gave an abstract last week, is of interest as showing the working of the steamers during that period. Upon the whole, considering the general depression of trade which has prevailed, it is of a satisfactory character. The Insurance reserve has been increased, the expenditure considerably reduced, and a dividend of f.35 per share, or the equivalent of 7 per cent., has been declared. The directors do not anticipate such serious results from the war in Europe as might at first be feared, and point out that the effect of an outbreak of war is generally not to diminish the wants of consumers, and that products which ordinarily would come from the countries in which the warlike operations are being conducted have to be brought from other parts of the world. The Company having lines so greatly diffused may therefore, under such circumstances, expect compensation in one direction for what is lost in another.

THE report by Mr. Consul TREMLETT on the trade of Saigon for the year 1876, which has been published, gives a very discouraging account of the commerce of that Colony, so far as European interests there are concerned. For many years past the complaint has been made that the trade was drifting steadily into the hands of the natives; and according to the above report, it appears that no less than nine-tenths of the entire rice crop and the whole of the other articles of produce were shipped during 1876 by the Chinese. This results in part from their coming into direct contact with the natives, but chiefly from their being able to carry on their business with inexpensive establishments, in fact, from the same causes as make the Chinese such formidable competitors with us in their own country.

THE launching of the Kiyer, a Japanese corvette, which has been constructed by the Milford Haven Shipbuilding Company, Pembroke Dock, took place in the presence of an immense concourse of spectators on 12th inst. The Japanese Minister, his wife, and suite, with Mr. E. J. REED, M.P., arrived from London to witness the launch, and were met at the station by the Mayor and Corporation. A procession was formed through the streets of Pembroke Dock, and during its progress a choir of 1,000 children sang a song to welcome the Minister and his suite. After the launch there was a grand banquet and a display of fireworks, the town of Pembroke being profusely illuminated.

THE Blue-book on China having special reference to the Grosvenor Mission and the Chefoo Convention has not yet been issued, and the cause of delay is attributed to the non-completion of the report of Sir THOMAS WADE. The question of ratification consequently remains open. The Order in Council for the working of the Supreme Court of China and Japan is still under compilation by Sir JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE and other officials at the Foreign-office in connection with the Law Officers of the Crown.

WITH reference to the letter of our correspondent "SINGAPORE," in which he notices the delay in the issue of the expected Blue-book upon the Malay States, we are glad to be able to state, upon reliable authority, that it will be published in a few days.

WE understand that the arrangements for the issue of a new Chinese Loan are in a forward state. It is to be issued in sterling by the London office of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, but the amount and terms of issue are not yet decided on.

THE printing of Professor DOUGLAS's Catalogue of the Chinese Books in the Library of the British Museum has now been completed. Three hundred copies of the work are in the hands of the binder, and will be ready for issue in a few days.

MR. JAMES J. ENSLIE, of H.M. Consular Service, Japan, has been called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn. Mr. AYRTON, of the Consular Service, returns to China this week.

RAILWAYS IN CHINA.

A CORRESPONDENT pertinently directs attention to the divergence between the actual facts connected with the Woosung Railway and the theories, which a short time back were propounded in a pamphlet published over the signature of "Justum" with regard to it. It was set forth by the writer of that brochure that a gross injustice had been inflicted upon the Chinese by forcing a railway upon them, and the little line between Shanghai and Woosung of about twelve miles length was spoken of as if it were a line of at least some hundred of miles whose introduction would do little less than revolutionise the country. The kind of argument which was used was a fair specimen of much of the indignation which is from time to time expended with respect to Chinese matters; and its uselessness is certainly well illustrated by the existing facts. That there was likely to be some opposition on the part of the Chinese Government to the introduction of railways was well known to those who started the Woosung line, and they wisely abstained from raising any questions more than necessary, and certainly did not press the matter upon the authorities in the form of its being a startling innovation or an affair requiring the settlement of any great abstract question. Had they done so, the result would have been some lengthy and elaborate correspondence and a distinct refusal upon abstract grounds to allow any steps to be taken in the matter. By a little management affairs have been brought to a much more satisfactory issue, and we find by the latest accounts that the Chinese officials are willing to continue to keep the line open, and it is even said there is every probability of its being before very long extended also to Soochow. A beginning has thus been made, and it has been demonstrated to the Chinese that railways need not necessarily be the dangerous and subversive things which, judging upon abstract grounds, they had imagined them to be; and the result is that the chances of ultimately inducing them to accept the iron road upon a more extended scale are very greatly enhanced. Had the strictest formality been observed and reference been made to Peking, it is quite certain that nothing whatever would have been accomplished, and the consequence would have been that an admirable chance of effecting material improvement in China would have been completely lost. It is not to be overlooked in discussing questions of this kind that the Chinese officials themselves are quite ready at times to stretch a point with a view to the attainment of practical ends. Hedged in on all sides by old traditions, they are only too glad occasionally to break through the strict letter of their laws; and where they are willing to do so it would be absurd on our part to suggest formalities and raise up difficulties against ourselves and against the prospects of ultimate progress. A great deal can be done by coming to an understanding with local officials, which would, if referred to the Central Government, be at once negatived; and, as a rule, nothing is more likely to lead to the failure of any enterprise in China than the adoption of that course. On the other hand, we have abundant proof that the Peking authorities are not inclined as a rule to look very severely upon what is done by the local officials when it has once become a fait accompli, unless something occur to bring it forcibly and officially to their consideration.

RAILWAYS IN JAPAN.

WE have received a copy of a very interesting and valuable report upon the proposed routes for the main trunk lines of Railways in Japan, compiled in September last year by Mr. R. VICARS BOYLE, Engineer in Chief to the Japanese Government. It is accompanied by a map, upon which the lines of railway proposed, those already staked out and those actually completed, are set forth. A glance at this sheet suggests strongly the small amount of railway which has been opened compared with what has been suggested. Mr. BOYLE'S scheme is to establish a grand trunk line through the whole of the country, namely, from Kobe through Kioto, passing through the centre of the country, branching out at Uyeda on the north to Niigata, bearing south to Tokio. He states that to make railways profitable in Japan a judicious selection and centralisation of main trunk lines in the first instance is manifestly desirable; and he justly advises that any rivalry of towns or localities striving for their own peculiar advantage should be discouraged in favour of the country at large and with a view to the development of the resources of the central districts generally, making them conveniently accessible to the capitals and sea boards by the most natural and ready channels of communication. He considers that the line above indicated will meet these conditions and prove in all respects, physically, commercially and politically, the best suited to the character and requirements of the country. The line proposed is divided as follows into five divisions, namely, from Tokio to Tagasaki 66 miles, Takasaki to Matsunoto 80 miles, Matsunoto to Nakatsugawa-yeki 70 miles, the last-named place to Kano and Gifu 271, and from Kano to Kioto 74 miles, making a total length of the line from Tokio to Kioto 345 English miles. The branch line from Uyeda to Niigata will be 150 miles in length. The lines from Kobe to Kioto and from Yokohama to Tokio are, as our readers are for the most part aware, the only portion of this scheme as yet completed; but the route is staked from Kioto to Mai-bara, with a branch north thence to Tsuruga, and from Maibara to Gifu with a branch south to Miya; so that some progress is being made towards carrying out the scheme which has been proposed, though it proceeds apparently at a somewhat slow pace. It is, however, a subject of congratulation to those who have the progress of Japan at heart that a definite plan of action has been laid before the Government, and we trust that it will see the advantage of following Mr. BOYLE'S advice, and of being careful to subordinate local interests in particular lines to the general interests of the conntry at large. Commencing to introduce railways at the present time, Japan has the advantage of many years' experience on the part of other countries; and there is no doubt, that much injury to the general good of the public has repeatedly resulted from railways having been set on foot, too much with reference to limited and comparatively local interests. If this danger be avoided there seems no reason to doubt that railways may be gradually extended throughout Japan to the great advantage both of the Government and of the country at large. In conclusion, Mr. BOYLE urges the importance of commencing the ten miles extension from Kioto to Otsu on the Biwa Lake—part of the line to Gifu which, as already mentioned, is now staked out—and of sixty-six miles at the proposed trunk line, namely from Tokio to Takasaki. This latter he says would form a material instalment of the future central trunk line, and could be worked with convenience and advantage in connection with the open line from Yokohama to Tokio. He considers these two lines should be constructed without difficulty at a cost of about 5,000,000 yen, or say £1,000,000 sterling, and adds that, whether considered alone or in connection with the open lines, there seem to be no other districts in Japan where more remunerative traffic may be expected; nor is it possible that any other two extensions of corresponding lengths could be adopted which would more surely tell in favour of the two lines already in operation.

OPIUM AND TOBACCO.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I cannot agree with your correspondent "In Medio Tutissimus" in the remarks which he makes concerning the report of Dr. Ayres, the Colonial Surgeon in Hong Kong, with reference to opium-smoking. The statement objected to is that "the use of opium in moderation is no more harmful than tobacco"—and I cannot see why this assertion should be put down as unwarranted, seeing the strong qualification which is to be found in the words in moderation. I cannot myself help thinking, and in fact during many years' residence in China have thought, that this is precisely the point upon which we have never yet taken the trouble to obtain any reliable information. We know a great deal about those Chinese who abuse the drug. Dr. Ayres comes forward and tells us some things about those who use it and do not abuse it; and straightway we say he must be wrong. It is said, and no doubt with some plausibility, by old China residents, "We have the evidence of our eyes as to the perniciousness of opium. We had Chinamen coming into and going out of our offices all day long, and we knew only too well the dull, sleepy, listless men, never to be seen before twelve or one o'clock in the day, as the opium-smoking Chinamen." True, you knew a certain number of Chinese who took a great deal more opium than was good for them, just as one unfortunately knows only too many people at home who pretty well ruin themselves by similar vices. But has anybody taken the trouble to ascertain much about those who smoke opium within Dr. Ayres's limit, i.e., with moderation? I think I can confidently reply that this has not been done. The strong opponents of opium have met the point whenever it has been raised by the assertion, so easy to make and so difficult to refute, that it is impossible for any one to take opium moderately, and that the use of the drug once commenced, the victims are bound to go on until they have poisoned themselves. To my mind Dr. Ayres's testimony supplies just the missing link in the chain of evidence required to form a just conclusion on the subject. He happens to be in a peculiarly favourable position for forming a judgment, having some hundreds of Chinamen to watch over at the Hong Kong gaol, of whose habits he can form some practical and accurate estimate; and I cannot see why his testimony should not be believed in the main, though I quite agree with your observation on the somewhat ill-advised form in which his remark is couched. I do not myself think there is any more similarity between opium-smoking and tobacco-smoking than there is between opium-smoking and opium eating, with which it is popularly confounded here. I can only, in conclusion, mention one instance of an opium-smoker to whom my attention was many years ago called in China. He was compradore in the house to which I went out, and part of my duty brought me into daily contact with him. He was an opium-smoker, and had been so as long as the memory of man in the house in question extended—certainly over twenty years. Well, Sir, that old gentleman died, but no more of opium than Harry the Fifth died, or was likely to die, for the love of Katherine of France. He was something like sixty-five years of age, and within a fortnight of his death was about the most circumspect and clear-headed man of business with whom I ever came into contact, even in China.—Yours faithfully, S.

SALES OF PIECE GOODS FOR ARRIVAL.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I fully endorse the remarks which you make with reference to the extraordinary decision in the Court at Yokohama, in the case of Temple Willcox and Co. v. Zensuke, so much so that I should have liked to see them extended, so far as they refer to the effects as to merchantableness of a deviation from sample in the articles supplied to fulfil contracts for piece goods. There is no question that in the large majority of cases supplying piece goods of any description of a quality inferior to that stipulated for amounts practically to supplying different goods altogether; and is extremely unfair upon the buyer, as he may be quite unable to sell them again at any price whatever. This circumstance alone is sufficient to show the absurdity of the decision that the buyer ought to take delivery even when the quality has been pronounced by his own arbitrator inferior to what was bargained for. I may state that I have had under my own cognisance strong illustrations of the importance which natives both in China and Japan attach to particular qualities of goods, and have known cases where those really of an inferior quality have sold higher than a better class of goods—the one simply being wanted and the other not. To offer a purchaser for arrival inferior goods, or indeed goods differing in any way materially from those bargained for, will in most cases completely upset his arrangements, and perhaps prevent his having any means whatever of redisposing of them.

The decision which has been given is specially to be regretted at the present time. For years past we have been endeavouring to establish trade with the Japanese upon such a footing that we may be able to sell to them, by sample, goods for arrival, and so prevent the needless accumulation of stocks on the Japan markets to the loss of importer or manufacturer. The result of the judgment, if it be not overruled, will be to do away with our chance of establishing trade upon this basis, and to bring back the heavy stocks and lagging trade of former days.—Your obedient servant, EXPERIENTIA DOCET.

RAILWAYS IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—Will you permit me in a few words to "point a moral and adorn a tale" on the basis of the information brought by last mail from China? It appears that the mandarins have entirely of their own motion determined to continue keeping the Woosung Railway open, and it is also stated that there is a probability of the line being extended to Soochow. It is not very long ago that a furious pamphlet was issued in London, setting forth the enormous injustice which the introduction of this line was to China, and exaggerating every little flaw in connection with the transaction which it was possible to detect. I hardly think a plainer illustration could be given of the harm which these ill-advised enthusiasts constantly work by unfounded statements or unwarranted exaggerations. There can be no doubt that the introduction of the Woosung Railway has been already beneficial, and there is every reason to hope that this benefit will be extended generally in China. The paving of the way for attaining this end is what a short time back was spoken of as if it were an act little short of criminal.—Yours faithfully, PROGRESS.

COMBINATIONS IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I notice in the accounts which are given in the Hong Kong papers with reference to the recent combination among the Chinese cotton-yarn men in that Colony that the effects of that movement were much increased in severity from the want of uniform action among the foreign merchants. I am aware that it is an old complaint, but still I would ask whether it is not in the highest degree ill advised for the European merchants thus to throw everything into the hands of the Chinese? Experience has amply proved that the combinations made by Chinese, though no doubt of a serious character, are not by any means so formidable as is commonly supposed, and there can be very little question that if foreign merchants in China only held together a little more they might often put an end to these combinations by simply waiting till the Chinese had had enough of them. Instead of this, the merchants in China invariably vie with one another who shall be the first to break through any compact which may be come to in such cases, and, as a natural consequence, the Chinese always gain the day, and the conclusion is jumped to that they are simply irresistible. It seems absurd, however, to believe that foreign merchants with greater resources and capital could not, if they set about it in earnest, "see the Chinamen out;" but unluckily it seems that business in China ever will be conducted as it ever has been, upon those principles of unchecked and unmeasured competition which have so long been the bane of foreign trade in that country.—Yours faithfully,

London, June 12, 1877. IN UNITATE VIRES.

THE MALAY STATES.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I hear many inquiries about the promised Malay Blue-book. The Straits Community was long kept in the dark about Malay affairs, and Colonists at home, as well as many members of Parliament, and others who have kept an eye on the proceedings of our officials in that part of the world, are expressing some impatience at the delay in producing the papers. It is time that some improvement were made in this matter; the complaint is of old standing. Last year Lord Stanley of Alderley, in his speech on the Malay Peninsula, observed that the Fiji papers were given to the House of Lords only on the day of the debate, the Gambier papers only one clear day before the discussion; the Malay Blue-book, No. 1,111, was delivered to members only in August, 1875, though purporting on its title-page to have been presented July 31st, 1874. No. 1,320, in the same way, which professed to have been laid before Parliament in August, 1875, was really not delivered to members until the day of the debate on Mr. Noel's motion in the House of Commons, May 17, 1876. In short, the general practice seems to be to withhold papers until the day or eve of a debate, in which case no use can be made of them; or to withhold them till the session is closed, and then the affair to which they relate may be safely considered to have passed into the domain of ancient history. Of course no great public department would deliberately resort to such an artifice for the purpose of escaping criticism; but when procrastination is attended with the undoubted advantage of conducing to repose, it tends quickly to become habitual. Let us trust that the Colonial-office will do something to show that it is capable of shaking off a habit which has little to recommend it.—Your obedient servant,

London, June 14, 1877. SINGAPORE.

PROFESSOR SHELDON AMOS ON HONG KONG.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—If the accounts which are given in the daily papers of a lecture delivered by Professor Sheldon Amos at the Working Mens' College upon our relations with China are correct, a statement made by that gentleman which, though not entirely unfounded, is nevertheless put in a form eminently calculated to mislead, calls for a word of notice.

Professor Amos is reported to have said that "Hong Kong, since it came into possession of this country, had been converted into a hotbed of legalised vice, by which great evil had been inflicted upon China." It is of course impossible to refute a statement couched in such general terms; but I can only say first that the licensing of vice in Hong Kong neither did nor could in any way affect China generally; secondly, that the residents of Hong Kong have always been as opposed to the licensing of vice as Professor Amos himself can possibly be; and lastly, that only one form of vice is licensed there in the present day; and this is simply a precautionary measure similar to those adopted under the Contagious Diseases Acts at our own Military stations here. The licensing of gambling, which, as the special hobby of a particular Governor, was at one time in force, was several years back put down, in consequence of the general public opposition made to it; and so far as the other license of the form of vice, is concerned, though the general feeling is against the system, it is deemed, and I think justly, as absolutely necessary at a place where a regiment is permanently stationed, and where our men of war have to stay for long intervals.—Yours faithfully,

Glasgow, June 12. A HONG KONG RESIDENT.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JUNE 12.

Hardly have disturbances in the East attained a decided form, and already new clouds are accumulating on the political sky to the westward; the late events in the French capital are far from being regarded here, or in any other part of Germany, with much confidence. The Government at Berlin also does not appear to trust much in the present situation, and being anxious "to be always ready," has given orders that several fortificatory labours on our western boundaries are to be finished as speedily as possible. Thus the new fortifications at Cologne will be finished in August, notwithstanding the contracts made allowing the contractors the deliverance of their works no sooner than the next year. Strassburg is also to be surrounded by one more fort; in short, everything is done here to prevent being overtaken by unexpected events, which, in our time, seem to be the order of the day.

Emperor William, with a considerable suite, has visited the city of Liegnitz, in Silesia, during the past week. The regiment of grenadiers there in garrison, that Emperor's own regiment (Leib Grenadiers), celebrated its sixtieth anniversary of the day on which the Emperor, at that time Prince of Prussia, became Commander-in-Chief of the regiment, and great festivals have taken place on that behalf. On this occasion his Majesty caught a cold, and the departure to Ems, previously fixed on the 14th of this month, was spoken of as to be postponed; but now the Emperor having fully recovered, will part for that bathing place on the mentioned date.

The negotiations with Austria for the conclusion of a new treaty of commerce are not yet resumed, but, as I hear, the German Plenipotentiaries are going in the next days to Vienna. The result of the coming negotiations between Germany and Austro-Hungary are at the same time of considerable importance for Great Britain, as these negotiations are also the basis of a new treaty between your Kingdom and Austria. As I wrote already to you in one of my former letters our free-trading Government cannot concede with the demands of the Austrian authorities, which are asking an increase of the Austrian import duties on iron, on textile fabrics, and an abolition or limitation of the so-called refining system, consisting of free import of all articles, which after exposure to a certain process of washing, bleaching, dyeing, dressing, printing &c., are again exported in a fixed term. Bismark addressed himself directly to the Hungary Cabinet, and threatened in case of acceptance of higher import duties with compensatory measures, viz., increasing the import duties on Hungarian wines.

Prince Bismark is at present, as you know, at Kissingen (Bavaria), and at the same time Lord Odo Russell, the British Ambassador at Berlin, has taken his residence there. As I hear also, Prince Hohenlohe, the German Ambassador at Paris, will go to that town during the stay of Bismark.

Herr Baare, an industrial man in the so-named Rhine province, has been sentenced these days of the High Court at Cologne to m 500 and fifty days imprisonment for having offended Herr Camphausen, the Prussian Minister of Finance, asserting this gentleman having said to a deputy of iron-men, visiting him at Berlin, "the iron-establishments in Westphalia may be ruined if they cannot compete with British industry after abolishment of the iron-duties."

The marine underwriters at Hamburg during the year 1876 have signed a capital of m.1,834,495,600, at an average premium of 1.22 per cent. against 1875	...m.1,788,812,600	at 1.24	per cent.	average prem.

From all quarters very satisfactory reports are coming in about the growing crops; the cornfields almost everywhere look very promising; the ray already displays a pleasant look of well grown and long ears, wheat also looks very well and healthy, and the summer grains, although somewhat retarded by the cold May, are rapidly recovering by the extraordinary fruitful weather. The rape has blossomed well, and in southern Germany is on the eve of being cut, promising to yield very satisfactory. From Hungaria the reports also are good, and prices there are already going down. The fruit trees, especially apples and pears, show a good stock, and those exporters of fruit who only four weeks ago were anxious to get their contracts annulated, are quite as anxious now to make new ones.

Two fearful murders have been committed here of late; in the first instance a fireman of the steamship Wega (trading to London) killed his comrade on board of the said steamer; both having got into a quarrel about a girl, the one drew his knife, three times stabbed the other, instantaneously killing him, and then fled, but was soon arrested. The second case, occurring only two days later, was also caused by love; a young sculptor had been engaged to a painter's daughter, but this engagement had been broken by the father of the young girl, on the ground of the young man having given false accounts about his circumstances. Some days ago the girl's father, returning in the evening with his two daughters, was shot twice by the rejected lover, and died an hour afterwards. The murderer, being attacked by a commissionary, inflicted a fearful wound on the latter, and then fled away, but being pursued by a policeman soon fell to the ground, when it was found that he had also wounded himself very severely. Both the murderer and the commissionary very likely will not recover, and thus three men would be killed in a most barbaric manner.

The Opposition party to the Government at Copenhagen of late has received a severe blow; its leader for many years, Mr. Hansen, a man who enjoyed the highest confidence all through the country, and who already had been made a present of a fine building as a mark of esteem of his party, all of a sudden was discovered to be a defraudant and deceiver on a large scale. Hansen was director of the so-called Volksbank (a saving-bank for the lower classes), had a fine income, and hitherto never had been asked a balance. But when this was done it was found that this man, the ne plus ultra of a gentleman, was nothing else than a mean falsifier of his books, and a cheat. Mr. Hansen died soon after this discovery, but his party, indeed, received a severe blow by it.

The Swedish professor Nordenskjold, well known by his two successful voyages up the Karian Sea to the river Jeniser in Siberia, will not make an exploitary voyage during this summer, but is preparing for a great expedition in 1878; the hardy professor not being satisfied with having given proofs of the possibility of a trade with northern Siberia, on his next voyage will try to find his way all along the northern coast of Asia, and intends to return through Behring's Straits and over China and East India to Europe. This idea finds much support, and a sum of kr.150,000 has already been subscribed. The expedition is to leave in June 1878.

Prinz Frederic Carl, the celebrated German field-marshal and cavalry general, at present is at Stockholm, where he arrived on the 8th inst., being heartily received by the King of Sweden and his family.

The position which England has taken in the Suez Canal question is regarded here with much satisfaction, as it gives the security for an unimpeded trade through this great fair way. Russia, nolens volens, will have also to be satisfied, as her naval forces hardly would allow it any real undertaking against Turkey in these quarters.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Business on our Produce Markets has been rather a dull one during the past week, as demand only existed for consumption. Money remained very abundant, and the rate of discount has throughout been below that of the Imperial Bank, and if in spite of this circumstance a speculative demand did not spring up, the reason can only be found in politics.

COFFEE.—Transactions have been of limited extent, and because first hands have been very much reserved, the article was able to maintain values.

SUGAR.—First hand lots did not change owners. Quotations are:—Manila brown clayed, m.29 to 31; do. unclayed, m.23 to 24½; Mauritius brown, m.22 to 31; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34; Batavia white, m.34½ to 36; do. yellow and grey, m.31½ to 34; do. brown, m.22 to 30½; Siam, Benares and China white, m.32 to 36 (are wanting); Zanzibar brown and yellow, m.28 to 33; China brown and yellow m.23 to 32.

RICE.—Of raw quality no transactions transpired.

TEA is firmer, and holders remain reluctant. The following first hand parcels have changed owners:—2,005/8 boxes Congou, 211/8 boxes Souchong, and 500/16 boxes Imperial.

COTTON.—Tendency has become rather a better one, but sales have only been made in American produce.

SPICES.—Nutmegs of prime quality, m.5.60 to 6.20. Mace, prime quality, m.4.70 to 4.90. Ginger maintained its value, Bengal quality m.27½ to 28; Cochin m.60 to 85. Cloves are quiet; Zanzibar, value m.136 to 137. Pepper has been dull, Singapore m.37 to 37¼; Penang m.35 to 35½; White, m.68 to 76.

EXCHANGE.—London, three months, m.20.36 to 20.30 per £.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

Business during the past week has been a rather curious one. In the first place it has been influenced by a rumour, according to which Great Britain had taken possession of the Suez Canal, military spoken, and quotations of the whole line have gone back, but afterwards, when the absurdity of this rumour became apparent, values rose and on occasion of any advance realisations took place, thus reducing quotations rather considerably. On the whole the tendency has not been a very firm but a varying one, and the sole benefit is to be found in Austrian shares and stocks, which have been influenced at the bright harvest prospects.

HOLLAND

AMSTERDAM, JUNE 13.

The result of the election which took place here has been made public. As was anticipated, the Liberals have obtained a large majority, Messrs. Holtzman, Stieltjes and Rutgers van Rosenburg being elected. We are now waiting for telegrams from the other districts. Utter dulness prevails in politics. The attention of everyone is fixed upon the result of this election, which will decide the to be or not to be of the Cabinet. I am of opinion that Mr. Heemskerk will not be turned out just yet, even if the Liberals obtain the victory, because they wish him to clear the way by moving the Lower Class Instruction question, and it is not improbable that he will find the means to delay it as much as possible.

The members of the First Chamber are summoned to meet to-morrow, in order to vote an address of condolence to the King. The corps, of the late Queen will be interred on the 20th inst.

The "Old Catholic" bishops have published a protest against the demand of the Roman Catholics, claiming the intervention of our King in order to restore the Pope to his temporal power.

At Rotterdam there has been established by Messrs. P. and M. G. Van den Arend a company under the title of "Tabak Maatschappy Arendsberg." The aim of this Society is to plant tobacco and other articles in Sumatra and to sell them. The capital is fixed at one million of guilders, of which only f.75,000 will provisionally be raised; sixty-three shares are subscribed for. Messrs. J. A. M. Van Berekel, G. Kolff and Mr. M. Mees are elected Commissaries.

The second son of the Viceroy of Egypt, Prince Ibrahim, arrived here. He was accompanied by Zeki-Pacha, Zahrab-Bey and Ibrahim Bey.

The report of the Nederlandsche Sui-ker-raffinadery was published to-day. I told you some weeks ago that this company had stopped payment. The figures are most deplorable, and prove that the greatest mismanagement has prevailed. The activa are estimated at an amount of f.50,059.69, and the passiva at f.749.217.29½. The result will be of course most injurious to both the shareholders and the creditors.

The Government has opened an Architectural competition, in which foreigners are allowed to take part, for the erection of a new University at Leyden. The author of the best plan will be entrusted with the execution of it, or receive a prize of 5,000 florins, whilst the author of the second best will receive a prize of 2,500 guilders.

The plan to erect a statue in commemoration of Mr. Motley finds many supporters, and is generally approved by the Press. A commission will be formed in order to collect the subscriptions, which will be very large.

Much sensation has been caused by the fact that Mr. Decker, of the shipowners firm Van Zeylen and Decker, has been arrested at Middelbourg. It is said that this measure has become necessary, because Mr. Decker had insured an East Indiaman after he had received a telegram that she was lost. By mistake he should have added the said telegram to the papers destined for the Insurance-brokers.

AMSTERDAM, JUNE 14.

The following candidates have been elected:—at Rotterdam, W. H Viruly Verbrugge and H. C. Verniers Van der Loeff; at Utrecht, Jhr Mr. J. Roell; at Winschohen, Dr. W. J. A. Jonckbloet; at Assen, Mr L. Oldenhuis Gratama; at Nymegen, Mr. Heydenryck; at Haarlem Mr. C. J. F. Mirandolle; and at the Hague, Mr. Schimmelpenninck. The election at the Hague was a severe blow to the Liberals, who had put forward there their best man, viz., Mr. Lodewyk Mulder.

AMSTERDAM, JUNE 15.

The definitive result of the Parliamentary elections has been in favour of the Liberal party, which is reinforced by five new members. In two districts re-elections must take place, because none of the candidates obtained the requisite majority. I need not add that the position of the Cabinet is much endangered now.

Another extraordinary meeting of shareholders of the Dutch India Railway Company has taken place. The four proposals, including that to sell the line Batavia-Buitenzorg to the State for an amount of five millions, were approved with a very large majority.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

A lull has prevailed in the markets for Colonial Produce, and scarcely any transactions have taken place. Business is checked, especially by holders waiting for higher prices. Money is in good supply at 2½ to 3 per cent.

COFFEE.—Prices have been well maintained, but the transactions are most unimportant, both in first and second hands.

SUGAR.—The trade looks healthy, but nothing has changed hands. There is a lack for offers of good parcels. About 8,000 kranjangs were sold at f.2½ to f.3½ above the April prices, according to colour and quality.

TOBACCO.—The several lots Java and Sumatra that were offered in public sale and by private tender were all sold at full prices. The stock now includes 18,417 bs. Java, 7,255 bs. Sumatra, 3,400 bs. Manilla, and 3,000 bs. E. I.

COTTON.—The market is firm, but trade is dull, because the holders decline to operate.

SPICES of every kind are very dull. Prices are, however, maintained.

RICE is dull. The arrivals have been extensive. Cleaned Java and Japan have met with a good demand for export.

INDIGO.—About 150 chests Java have changed hands at unaltered prices.

DIVI-DIVI.—The arrivals have been considerable, and large quantities will shortly be brought into the market.

HIDES without transactions. On the 19th inst. some thousands of Buffaloes will be brought into the market.

TIN.—No business has taken place in Banca. Billiton has been sold in small quantities at f.41¼.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—June 6, at Flushing, from Banjoewangie, Susanna Johanna; at Brouwershaven, from Rangoon, Ava Guiseppe; 7, at Ymuiden, from Samarang, Noordzeekanaal; 8, at Brouwershaven, from Bassein, Favorit; from Rangoon, Veloco, at Flushing, from Bombay, Commonwealth.

DEPARTURES.—June 9, from Nieuwediep, for Batavia, Conrad (st.).

The Oriental Bank Corporation notify that the coupons due the 1st prox. on the bonds of the Imperial Government of Japan Seven per Cent. Loan of 1873, and the bonds drawn on April 3 last, amounting to £55,000, will be paid by them on and after the 2nd prox.

The steamers of the Pacific Mail Company and the Occidental and Oriental Company will leave San Francisco from the 20th inst. for Japan and China every twelve days.

We understand that the directors of the Comptoir d'Escompte have decided to close the Yokohama and Hong Kong branches of their establishment.

The case of E. M. de Bussche v. W. J. Alt for difference in value of steamers sold in Japan will come on for trial to-day.

The Tea Market during the past week has shown increased depression, and at the public sales unprecedentedly low prices have ruled, the majority of buyers being terrified by no less than 20,000 packages being offered in face of telegraphic advices of 36,000,000 lbs. to arrive, all in July. The only Teas which have supported their prices are those between 1s. 2d. and 1s. 5d. Quotations for common Teas are nominally the same as for the last few weeks, but, if quality be taken into account, they will be found to have dropped ½d. to 1d. It is surmised in quarters generally well informed as likely that the principle of selling teas by auction without reserve may be adopted in fresh directors. The feeling is at the present time strongly against holding, an illustration of the evil effects of that principle being given in this week's sales, at which a parcel of Kaisow imported per Statesman in 1875, for which 2s. had been refused, sold at 1s. 0½d. The postal advices from Hankow relative to Season 1877-78 state that the Shensi traders (Chinese), who have hitherto packed teas in the Oopack Province for the overland trade, via Kiachta, to the great fair held annually at Nichni Novgorod, this season prepared them for shipment to Russia, via the Canal, and this doubtless accounts for the rumours of the full supply offering at Hankow, a large portion of which is evidently destined for immediate transhipment from hence to Russia. There seems to be much difference of opinion of the yield, some telegrams stating an average crop, others that it is inferior; all, however, agree the cost is lower. That shipments must cease for a time to impart confidence to the home trade is patent to all watching the current course of events now ruling in this market.

There has been a sudden reaction in the Silk Market from the rise which took place during the past fortnight, and quotations have fallen from 1s. to 1s. 6d., as much as 2s. per lb., or £10 per bale, having been lost on speculative purchases made a fortnight since. In view of the public sales next week, purchasers are holding off. The reports as to the crop in France are more favourable, but latest telegrams from Italy state that the worms have been injured at the fourth stage by the sudden heat.

In the Produce Markets business continues very quiet, and in the prolonged absence of any speculative inquiry transactions in all articles have been restricted. Coffee has slightly improved. Sugar is again quiet, the improved demand noticeable last week having disappeared. Gambier is active and higher. The periodical sales of Isinglass have established a lower range of values. Rice continues dull, and has sustained a further decline.

The report of the Eastern Telegraph Company for the half-year ending March 31 states that the company's revenue amounted to £224,635, from which is deducted £52,952, the ordinary expenses of the company, leaving a balance of £171,683. Of this amount £24,332 has been absorbed by special expenditure during the half year, £800 for bad debts, and £1,504 by income-tax, leaving £145,047, which, together with £2,959 brought forward from the preceding half-year, leaves a balance of £148,006. From this balance £6,960 is payable for interest on debentures, and £16,094 for interest to 31st March, 1877, at 6 per cent. per annum on the preference shares, in accordance with the terms of issue. The directors have during the half year paid to the shareholders £46,212 as interim dividend of 1¼ per cent. on the ordinary shares. They now recommend the declaration of a final dividend on these shares of 2s. 6d. per share, to be paid on the 14th of July next, making, with the three previous payments on account, a total dividend for the year of 5 per cent., and £32,526 be carried to the reserve fund. The board have applied £100,000 from the reserve fund to the reduction of the cost of cables, &c., instead of issuing further capital as originally intended to replace that amount heretofore expended in the new works. The reserve fund is thus left at £121,611.

Brook's Wharf, which, it will be recollected, was some time back burnt down, has been rebuilt, and is to be opened on the 18th inst. Mr. Charles John King, formerly of Messrs. Chapman, King and Co., of China, has undertaken the general management of it.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for the month of May present some satisfactory features, and tend to confirm the impression lately held that trade was slightly on the improvement. The value of our exports of British and Irish produce for the first time for a very long period shows an increase, the total being £17,461,139, against £17,055,504 for the same month last year, showing an increase of 2⅜ per cent. Compared with 1875, when the total was £18,225,152, there is a decrease of 4 per cent. In the imports the total was valued at £34,647,682, against £29,405,133 in May of last year, showing an increase of 17¾ per cent.; while the increase on the total of £32,346,107 for May, 1875, is 7 per cent. The total value of corn imported was £3,285,445, against £1,796,860 in the same month last year, or an increase of 83¾ per cent. The quantity shows an increase of only 42½ per cent., the wide margin between the two percentages being due to the war in the East, which has lately kept up the price of corn. Amongst the general items of export cotton yarn shows no change in quantity, but the value has diminished 3 per cent.; cotton piece goods show an increase of 11¾ per cent. in quantity, and 8 per cent. in value; linen and jute yarn a decrease of 8½ per cent. in quantity, but an increase of 2⅜ per cent. in value; linen piece goods, an increase of 25½ per cent. in quantity and 14 per cent. in value; woollen and worsted yarn have decreased 3½ per cent. in quantity and 12½ per cent. in value; woollen cloths decreased 3½ per cent. in quantity and 7⅜ per cent. in value; worsted stuffs decreased 4⅜ per cent. in quantity and 8½ per cent. in value; silk manufactures increased 1¾ per cent. in value; coal, coke, &c., increased 1¾ per cent. in quantity but decreased 8 per cent. in value; and iron and steel increased 7½ per cent. in quantity and 2½ per cent. in value. In regard to the imports raw cotton has decreased 3¾ per cent. in quantity and 7½ per cent. in value; raw silk increased 11¾ per cent. in quantity, but as much as 58½ per cent. in value; while the value of silk manufactures has only increased 1¾ per cent. Wool has increased 56½ per cent. in quantity and value; flax increased 79¾ per cent. in quantity and 60¾ per cent. in value; hemp decreased 23 per cent. in quantity and 21½ per cent. in value; sugar decreased 5 per cent. in quantity, but increased 24¾ per cent. in value; tea increased 99 per cent. in quantity, but only 85¾ per cent. in value; coffee increased 13½ per cent. in quantity, but only 5¾ per cent. in value; cocoa decreased 39⅞ per cent. in quantity and 45 per cent. in value; rice increased 103 per cent. in quantity and 118 per cent. in value; wine decreased 14½ per cent. in quantity, but only 3⅞ per cent. in value; and tobacco increased 5¼ per cent. in quantity, but only 2⅜ per cent. in value. The imports of iron and steel manufactures show a decrease of 7 per cent. in the quantity, but the value has diminished only 1½ per cent.

The following is an extract from these Returns of the figures which refer to our export trade with China and the Far East:—

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—Our market remains in a very unsatisfactory state, business by private contract is very limited. At auction a larger quantity has been offered, and with a general disinclination to add to stocks on the part of the trade, the sales have passed off very flatly, and in nearly all cases prices must be quoted rather easier. Congous:—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings remain firm; common has sold from 7d. to 7½d. per lb., fair to good common 7¾d. to ⅞d. per lb., fair kinds from 9d. to 9½d., medium kinds from 11½d. to 1s. 1½d., fine from 1s. 4¾d. to 1s. 6d. per lb., all being in favour of buyers. Pakling kinds sell with difficulty at last week's rates. Black-leaf kinds: Common has sold from 6¾d. to 7½d. per lb., good common 7¾d. to 8¾d. per lb., fair from 9d. to 10¾d., medium from 11d. to 1s. 1½d. per lb., good from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4d., fine 1s. 6d. to 1s. 7¾d. per lb.—all at auction and at lower prices than before, especially for the better grades. New-make Congous: Common to fair from 8d. to 11d. per lb. are in request, the better kinds have sold with difficulty from 11½d. to 1s. 5d. per lb., showing 1d. per lb. decline. Oolongs have realised lower prices — say good from 1s. 1¾d. to 1s. 4½d. per lb. Souchongs have also sold cheap at sale, good common to fair, 8½d. to 9d. per lb.; good, 1s. 4½d. per lb.; and fine 1s. 7½d. per lb. Scented Teas remain dull of sale for Canton kinds; common Capers sold at 10d. to 10⅜d. per lb.; good, 1s. 2½d. to 1s. 2½d. per lb. Orange Pekoes, good kinds, at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4½d. per lb. Foochow kinds remain firm. Green Teas.—The market is without improvement, and all kinds are selling at low prices, there being no export demand, and the home trade only buying sparingly. The public sales have comprised 24,283 packages, nearly the whole of which have been sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

	1877. lbs.	1876. lbs.
Coastwise	696,711	637,249
Exports	424,613	561,067

SILK.

There is nothing doing in the market. The public sales will be held next week, and although small, still there will be sufficient Silk offered for sale "without reserve" to make quotations, and holders can then decide whether they will accept such prices or carry their stocks over to the new season. The deliveries so far this month have been good, and are the only cheering feature in the market.

COFFEE.—The slight improvement noticeable at the close of the market last week has been more fully developed during the past few days, and the supplies at auction have met a strong demand, and have gone off with competition, plantation Ceylon, of which the greater part has consisted, selling at an advance of 6d. and in some instances 1s. per cwt., and Native 1s. higher. Bombay, however, sold readily at an advance of 1d. to 3d. for tongue, and 1d. to 2d. for cake, bladder pipe at full rates to 1d. higher. VERMILION.—Four boxes China have been sold at 2s. 3d.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

With advanced prices and large business in Liverpool, a decidedly firmer tone has prevailed, and buyers have gradually extended their operations at advancing prices. The business has been of considerable extent, and more could have been done were it not that the activity and dearer prices of cotton have led many manufacturers to ask still higher rates, which, so far, buyers are reluctant to pay.

GENERAL SHIPPING NEWS.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The traffic returns of the Suez Canal Company in the month of May last, and in the same month of the two preceding years, were as follows:—1877, 153 vessels and f.2,856,000; 1876, 116 vessels and f.2,452,858; 1875, 130 vessels and f.2,520,802. During the first five months of the three years:—1877, 766 vessels and f.15,023,236; 1876, 692 vessels and f.13,732,866; 1875, 714 vessels and f.13,144,170. A rumour that the depth of water at the Mediterranean entrance of the Canal has been reduced to twenty feet, thus obstructing the passage of ships of greater draught, is contradicted in an official telegram, in which it is stated that the depth of the Canal throughout is 26ft. 3in., and that the least depth of water at the Mediterranean end is 27ft. 3in. There is a report current that the English Government are in negotiation for the purchase of the territorial rights of the Sultan and the Khedive over the canal, its banks, and its approaches.

SHIPS DETAINED FOR SURVEY.—A Parliamentary return has been issued, showing the total number of ships ordered to be detained since the commencement of the Act 39 and 40 Victoria, distinguishing between those cases in which the ships were found safe or unsafe. From this return we perceive that the number of ships detained on account of alleged defects in hull, equipments, or machinery has been 82, of which 81 were found unsafe, and in the other case the survey is pending. The number of vessels ordered to be detained on account of alleged overloading or improper loading has been 23, and all of them were found to be unsafe.

THE CAPE MAIL SERVICE.—A new screw steamship, to be added to the Union Company's fleet, and to be employed in the Cape of Good Hope and Natal mail service, has been launched from Mr. James Laing's yard at Sunderland. She is named the Durban, in honour of the colony of Natal, Durban being the principal port of that colony. The leading dimensions of the vessel are as follow:—Length, 360ft.; breadth, 38ft.; depth, 31ft.; and gross tonnage about 3,000 tons. Her engines have cylinders of 56 and 97 inches respectively, with 54 inches stroke, and 9,000ft. of heating surface.

THE Nederland Company's steamship Conrad, Captain Adriano, sailed from Southampton on the 12th inst. for Naples, Padang, Batavia, Samarang, and Sourabaya, with mails, 140 cabin passengers, 125 Dutch troops, and a full general cargo.

THE P. and O. Company's steamship Indus arrived at Southampton on the 9th inst., bringing the India, China, and Australian mails, 171 passengers, about £562,000 in specie (principally from Australia), and 15,111 packages of cargo.

The Eastern and Australian Mail Steamship Company's steamer Normanby, with the Queensland mails, due in London 16th July, arrived at Singapore on the 7th inst.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other.

REMEDIAL USES AND ACTION.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium.

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

EXTRACTS FROM MEDICAL OPINIONS.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.

None genuine without the word "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. Sold in Hong Kong and Shanghai by Watson and Co.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy five pupils and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23; Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The manner in which relief has been afforded to the sufferers from the recent famine has been the subject of notice, in consequence of a report from the Governor of Kiangsu, which has appeared in the Peking Gazette, setting forth the measures which were taken for the relief of the refugees from the famine-stricken districts north of the Yangtsze, who were cared for in that Province during the winter. It is stated that altogether some 85,000 people were provided with shelter and sufficient food to sustain life, and that order was maintained. They were given a supply of seed and a month's rations when sent back to their homes. This, however, it is to be noticed, was the case of a comparatively wealthy province bearing a burden suddenly thrust upon it from outside, and where little or no Imperial assistance was given or required; but in Shangtung, where the local resources entirely failed, no aid was afforded by the Imperial Government, and the people were apparantly left to die their own way. What official report will be given of this remains to be seen. Messrs. Cornabé and Co., of Chefoo, who acted as honorary treasurers of the relief fund there, had received Tls. 22,245 up to April 19, of which Tls. 16,871 had been expended. The accounts from the usually prosperous district in the south-west of Chihli are of a very harrowing character. It is said that all the seed-corn for this year has been expended, so that there will be no crop in June. The people were endeavouring to subsist upon bark, grass and weeds. The climate at the newly-opened port of Wuhu is reported to be tolerably good, and the people gentle and polite, the usual complimentary epithets applied to foreigners not being heard. From Shanghai there is but little local news by the present mail beyond the details of the Spring Races, which, notwithstanding the badness of the times (or possibly in consequence of it), still occupy four days of the week in which they "come off." A Naval Court has been held with reference to the wreck of the barque Serpent. From Hong Kong the mail brings news of a rather serious accident at the United States Consulate, where the verandah came down bodily on account of some unknown defect. Attention is called to the fact that there is no interpreter in the Colony who speaks the Mandarin dialect. Mr. Huffam, the Deputy Registrar of the Supreme Court, left by the steamer Hankow on leave of absence.

From Japan the dates brought by the present mail have been anticipated via America.

From Singapore we learn that the scheme for the new Exchange Rooms, Chamber of Commerce, and Club buildings is making progress. The foundation-stone of a new Mission-house, in connection with St. Andrew's Mission, has been laid by the Acting Governor. The starting of a Chinese newspaper in the Colony is in contemplation. A solemn requiem Mass for the repose of the soul of General Nino Bixio, whose remains are in course of transmission to Italy, has been celebrated.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA, APRIL 28.

As regards matters political here I am unable to send you more than the most meagre news. So rigid a censorship has been exercised over the Japanese newspapers by the Government that their columns have been simply a chronicle of Government successes, the truth of which many have been inclined to doubt. It is a fact that the Castle of Kumamoto, which was beleaguered by an insurgent force, has been relieved, and the insurgents have taken up a position elsewhere. Without doubt this is of late years the most serious revolution that has occurred in the country, and has taxed the utmost powers of the Government to keep down. The opposing forces have been so nearly equal as to make the Imperialists very timid of striving to win at one stroke, and their game has evidently been to avoid large pitched battles until their force was numerically so much stronger as to leave little doubt of success when an engagement took place. The Mikado still remains at Kioto, where he has continued since the State opening of the Kioto and Osaka Railway in February last. He is expected back in Tokio (Yedo) shortly.

Trade of course is in a measure paralysed, while the country is torn in this way; but the returns for 1876 will show a considerable increase in the export figures, due to the impetus in the silk trade which characterised the business in that staple last year. People should, I think, make up their minds that the Japan trade will never attain to large dimensions. The country is essentially a poor one; nay, I will go further, and say a very poor one. Any one with half an eye can satisfy himself of this by a short trip into the interior where squalor and pauperism are paramount, here and there, notably in the silk districts, a few prosperous-looking villages will meet the eye. The American Press may claim the somewhat unenviable distinction of having written up Japan to such an extent as to have entailed a great deal of misery on a large number of foreigners, who, urged by the glowing accounts given of Japan in the columns of American newspapers have rushed to Yokohama, to find themselves simply, after the lapse of a few days, with empty pockets and starving on the streets.

The country has a future before it undoubtedly, and when thrown open in its entirety, with full facilities to foreigners to embark capital in all sorts of enterprise, will, doubtless, grow into a country of wealth and importance; but that time must be bided with patience. One thing is, I think, certain, and that is that there will be no general opening of the country until the jurisdiction question is settled, that is until the exterritoriality is done away with and the Japanese have full jurisdiction over foreigners. Before this comes to pass many years must, I think, necessarily elapse. It is true the Japanese have established Courts of First Instance, and Courts of Appeal, but the experience of foreigners here with regard to Japanese Courts is not a happy one. Interminable delays, a vexatious procedure, and a multiplication of forms have not tended to impress foreigners with a sense of admiration for the administration of justice by Japanese. As a fact, the Japanese have not in them the bent of mind which makes good judges; calm deliberative qualities are foreign to them, petty details absorb them. Petty-fogging is essentially in their line. I do not mean to say that all this will not in process of time be cured. But who will fix the date when this shall come to pass? I will not deny to them the possession of qualities which are apt to blind people abroad and make us in England and elsewhere allow to Japanese a far higher place in the world's civilisation than is really deserved. Too much is made of the few instances where Japanese students in England and on the Continent and in America have passed successful examinations, and great things are prophesied of the country that produces such marvels. It is not these shining lights that will make Japan a great country just at present. Instances are not wanting in other countries of men who pass brilliant examinations, and are marvels of quick intelligence, but whose countrymen are plunged in general ignorance, if not barbarism.

The movement that is to impel Japan forward must come from within, and a better example must be set by the governing classes in the way of more decent and orderly modes of life, and in a more heartfelt care for the real wants of the masses. No one sympathises more with the Japanese in their present efforts than I do, and no one despises more than I do the opinion that characterises every forward movement of the Japanese as monkeyish (a favourite term amongst many foreigners), or as merely imitative; but I would not be content with singling out Japanese as examples of progress to the disadvantageous comparison of other nations, as the Chinese, for instance. There is an impulse towards civilisation in China of as true, if not, indeed, of stronger beat than that which has sprung up in Japan. A Chinaman is as capable of solid attainments as a Japanese, and his commercial integrity is far in advance of that of the over-praised Japanese. While the possession of a line of steamers (plying along the coast and to Shanghai) by Japanese is pointed to in terms of excessive laudation as a marked instance of civilisation and advancement, the purchase by the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company of the fleet of the S.S.N. Co.'s steamers at Shanghai, and the extended operations of the C.M.S.N. Co. are passed over with slight comment, though the movement originated with Chinese, and continues to be carried on successfully by them. It is distressing to me to see in many of the London newspapers of the day allusions to China and the Chinese, in terms such as "almond-eyed Celestials," "Cousin of the Moon," when speaking of the Emperor, and a hundred phrases which imply a sort of contemptuous liking or disliking, as the case may be, of a people that are singularly intelligent, hard-working to a degree, and capable of very great enterprise.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The Daily News Correspondent writes under date of April 26th:—

By your last paper I notice the serious aspect of the Turko-Russian affair. I learn that a telegram has been received at the Russian Legation, announcing the moving of Russian troops, so that fighting may now be in actual progress. I suspect you may have the same. It will be interesting to note the influence which the attitude of Turkey, in defying (practically) the European Powers, will exert on China. I have heard it intimated that a change was already thought to be perceptible in the aspect and conduct of the officials. The political status at Constantinople is doubtless known by the Government here; and it is quite possible that high officers may reason thus: "If little Turkey can take such a stand, what may not we do?" However, where so little is known, it is perhaps not wise to conjecture, for China never does what one thinks should or might be done in any given case.

Have you ever visited Peking? If not, then, "don't!" I do not wish to be heterodox, and run against the prejudices of that large class of good people who want to see everything "and use the rest of creation." Still, I say "don't"—unless you want to, and can get yourself insured against accident to life or limb, against dust and mud, for one never knows whether a day may bring forth a wind or rain storm or both; and unless a life policy is carried a stranger may be smothered or drowned. It would be some relief if he could choose his own way of meeting his fate. Unprecedented at this season, and unheard of "within the memory of the oldest inhabitant," several quite heavy showers have fallen recently, and the temperature is quite as merciful as the circumstances will permit, in extreme and sudden changes. The wheat is looking well, and these spring rains must increase very much the prospects of a fine harvest.

TIENTSIN.

The correspondent of the Shanghai Courier writes under date of April 21:—

The tail-cutting mania has made its appearance here, and several cases are reported, but no proclamation has yet been issued. An Imperial Festival—so called—which was to have been held on the 16th, 18th, 20th, and 22nd of the current Chinese month, in honour of the T'ien Hong Kung, or Goddess Mother, has been ordered to be abandoned by the Che-fu, although widely circulated notices of the same have been issued. The reason assigned is the bad year and starving poor, but the connection is not obvious. I must suppose that the mandarins are desirous of economising the sums which are usually lost, by allowing certain classes of merchandise sent to or received from places in the immediate neighbourhood of Tientsin to go free of duty, on the occasion of such festivals, in consideration of the purchasers and sellers being engaged in religious duties. The same drought which prevails in Chihli is said to have occurred in the more fertile province of Shansi, where there has been great destitution, and the price of children has fallen to a sum merely nominal.

CHEFOO.

A balance sheet showing the receipts and expenditure of the Shantung Relief Fund up to the 19th April has been published. Messrs. Cornabé and Co., of Chefoo, who acted as honorary treasurers, had received up to that date Tls. 22,245, out of which Tls. 16,871 had been expended or remitted to the interior leaving a balance of Tls. 5,374, in hand, to meet future requirements.

The Celestial Empire has the following:—

We have received distressing private accounts from a populous and hitherto prosperous district of the south-west portion of Chihli. Our letters say the miserable people have died of starvation in great numbers, that thousands of country-people are endeavouring to subsist on a mixture of tree-bark, dried leaves, millet-stalks, potatoe-vines, grass and weeds, that most, or some say all, the seed corn for this year was eaten in the past winter, so that the earth will bear no crops in June next, that the people are utterly pauperised, and that fowls, ducks, pigs, oxen, sheep, are not to be seen in large villages, which even in 1875 were fairly well to do. The starving wretches have had the additional affliction of epidemic disease, and our correspondents say that very few cases of recovery occur, as the famished bodies quickly succumb to the attacks of fever. The accounts we receive prove to us that China is undergoing in many of her provinces a terrible visitation of famine and plague, the like of which for magnitude and horror the world has but rarely seen. We take up letter after letter from natives and foreigners, all giving the same dismal testimony, and the Governments, Imperial and Provincial, are powerless to deal with the accumulation of calamity. We have reason to fear that even if the coming harvest should be good, the distress will rather increase than diminish until the end of June. In most parts of Chihli, in some part of Shantung, the growing crops so far promise well, although in many cases large tracts of fields have been injured by unseasonable weather during the past fortnight.

NEWCHWANG.

The Shanghai Courier's correspondent, writing under date of the 27th April, gives the following particulars of a dreadful tragedy enacted in the district of Hai-chung, about forty-five miles to the north-east of this port, in the beginning of February. At Chuang Ti Wo (boat-dock), a small village inhabited by fishermen and small junk people, some conversions to the Roman Catholic faith took place a year ago, or rather an old man and his son, on their visit to Newchwang (thirty miles from the port of that name), were received as members of the religion they had adopted. The rest of the villagers held to the faith of their forefathers. One day the two converts fired off crackers in honour of a holy picture over the kang (brick-bed-place), and they knelt down to adore the Saint represented before them. As they were kneeling one of their cousins or brothers (for I believe natives call such relationship by the latter title) rushed into the room with a hoe or some other instrument of husbandry, and nearly severed the head of the younger man. The father ran off for assistance, and laid his complaint before the magistrate, but when he got back to his house he was told that his son had been dragged to the Joss-house, and then immolated. Not satisfied with one murder the villagers, led by two uncles or relatives, having demanded that the old man (over seventy years of age) should give up his new religion, on his refusal to do so tied him to a donkey with a rope round his neck, and dragged him to the Joss-house, the poor fellow being strangled before he reached so far. The hearts of the two martyrs were searched for, as it was said they had been stolen by the evil spirit, and finally a hole being made in the ice the bodies were thrown in. All this happened on the 2nd February, and, strange to say, the authorities have not done anything towards punishing the murderers, nor have the bodies been recovered, or any inquest been held. Such venal conduct must render the lives of all who choose to become converts very insecure, and unless the matter be taken up pretty quickly very serious results may be the consequence, not only to the natives, but to foreign priests also.

HANKOW.

The Shanghai Courier says :—

We hear from Hankow that prices of tea in the country are reported to be still declining. There is a further fall of 15 per cent. on the cost of the new leaf at Yung-low-tung in the Sung-yang district, and 20 per cent. in the Ning-chow district; so that, on the whole, leaf is 40 to 45 per cent. cheaper than last year. This looks as if tea were about to have its turn at last; and as the country people are obviously willing to sell their produce at moderate rates, it only remains for foreign buyers to exercise caution and self-control in order to secure profitable results. The moderate exchange and cheap freights are all in their favour. So far reports as to quality speak well of the coming crop.

WUHU.

A letter from Wuhu, dated the 22nd April, says :—Wuhu is necessarily a dull sort of place at present, but if the community, which now consists only of Consular and Customs officials, increases at all, it will not be a bad place, especially as the climate is tolerably good. The people are very gentle and polite. I seldom hear the epithets usually applied to foreigners. The river is rising rapidly, at least it seems so to me, though it may not appear so to a more experienced eye. The houses that lined the river when I arrived here first are being gradually removed out of the way of the water.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 6th May; no later mail from London had been received.

The races have been the chief subject of public attention during the week of which the present mail brings the news, and the general intelligence is accordingly somewhat scanty. The weather, with the exception of one day, was fine, and all went off very satisfactorily, excepting that it was unfortunately impossible to procure a band, there being no man-of-war in harbour of sufficiently high rating to possess that luxury.

The effects of the extra tax imposed some time since upon the wheelbarrow men, by the Municipal Council, appear likely to be more serious than was expected. A large exodus has at all events taken place from the foreign settlements. This fact may perhaps cause some misgivings as to the judiciousness of the tax.

The North China Herald states that a petition has been presented by certain Chinese to H.B.M.'s Consul, seeking to recover compensation from the steamer Haining, belonging to the China Coast Steam Navigation Company, for having run down a junk on her last voyage but one from Tientsin. It appears that between Chefoo and the North-East Promontory the Haining was in company with the China Merchants' Company's steamer Fungshun, and the steamers were so near together that the junk people appeared bewildered as to which course they should take. It was about nine o'clock at night, and the weather was clear. Both steamers, we hear, altered their helms to go clear of the junk, which, however, also altered its course, and attempted, as usual, to cross under the bow of the Haining. The result was a collision, both vessels being damaged. The Haining had a hole knocked in her bows, while the bow of the junk was smashed to pieces and the hull appeared also to be damaged. The junk people asked to be taken on board the steamer, and apparently without an examination as to the probabilities of the junk being kept afloat for any length of time, half of them were taken on board the Haining and the other half on the Fungshun. They were brought forward to Shanghai, and proceedings against the Haining were at once instituted. It was currently reported in Chefoo that the junk was afloat for two days after the occurrence, and that if her crew had remained by her she would, in all probability, have been saved.

From the Herald we also take the following items :—

A Naval Court, to inquire into the circumstances of the wreck of the British barque Serpent, on the Shalutien shoal, in the Gulf of Pechili, has been held before Commander Church, of H.B.M.'s gunboat Curlew. The circumstances of the wreck, now well-known, were fully gone into, and the captain of the Serpent, Mr. Abel, was reprimanded, but not deprived of his certificate. We hear that the Serpent, as she lay on the shoal, was sold by public auction to Mr. James Watt, a pilot at Taku, for the low sum of $30. With difficulty he managed to tow the hull into Taku, where it is to be placed as a pontoon.

Some time ago a passenger by one of the outgoing China merchants' river steamers placed his bag on the bed in his stateroom, and went on deck for a stroll. On going below again, after the steamer had started, he found the bag had been stolen. Among other things, it contained a watch, Bible, Letts's Diary, and a packet of eleven letters addressed to residents at Chinkiang. Complaint was in due course made to the police, and a search resulted in the discovery of the Bible and some other of the articles hidden in a hole in the city wall. The watch was found at a pawn-shop, and this led to the apprehension of the thief, who was recognised as an old hand. The remainder of the property, including the letters, is still missing. The prisoner was sentenced, at the Mixed Court, to 200 blows and three months' cangue.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Morriss lost his race-pony Sultan. He was suddenly felt to swerve badly, while taking his morning canter, and the rider had hardly time to free his feet from the stirrups before the pony fell dead. The cause of death was, we believe, rupture of an aneurism.

After the interest that has been taken in the operations of the crows in building nests on the P. and O. flagstaff, it may be worth mentioning that a pair are now trying to establish themselves on the flagstaff in the Consular compound. They have chosen as a foundation the crosses of the weather-vane, and have made great progress with their work, the nest being already formed. It is "generally believed" that they are the same pair that had their nest blown off the P. and O. staff a week or so ago, and their perseverance deserves to be successful.

We have lately received from a piscatorical rambler, some beautiful small fish which were caught with the fly within a very few miles of Shanghai. We think they are of the trout species from their form, although they lack the spots. Though small in size, they were very delicate in flavour, and quite free from the muddy taste which is usual in Shanghai fresh-water fish.

An orchid show has been going on during the week in the so-called Tea Gardens in the City.

It is curious what a number of Liu-ch'iuan sailors seem to get driven on to the Chinese coast. Nearly every month some one of the Governors of the coast provinces reports that a crew have been picked up in his territory and are being cared for according to rule, preparatory to being sent home. The Gazette of the 15th April relates two such incidents. One boat load was picked up by some Chinese fishermen in the neighbourhood of Chusan, and taken by them to Foochow, where they are being maintained at the extravagant rate of a pint of rice and six cash a day, until they can be sent back. The adventures of the second party were more startling. They sailed from Napa for the Meiaco Sima Islands in May, 1876, but were driven in a gale to the coast of Korea, from whence they drifted down to the mouth of the Yangtsze, when their vessel became a total wreck. Having swum ashore, they were taken charge of by the local authorities and sent to Soochow, where they arrived in October. Kept there four months, for no apparent reason, unless to give the officials the gratification of feeding them on the regulation pint of rice and 6 cash per diem during that period, they were eventually sent through Shanghai to Foochow, where they are also waiting an opportunity of being sent back to Napa.

The coming Tea Campaign is laconically indicated by the Daily News of the 5th May as follows :—

"Sixteen chaazes and two bank managers took their departure for Hankow this morning, by the steamer Shanghai."

FOOCHOW.

The Foochow Herald gives the following :—

The Courier line between this port and Amoy has, we notice, been re-established since the 1st inst.

Mr. Pedder having left for Europe per steamer Yesso, Mr. Everard assumed temporary charge of the British Consulate on the 1st inst.

Tea picking commenced in the adjacent district of Pehling on the 25th ultimo, being a few days earlier than usual. The crop is reported to be a good one, and district prices under last season's range.

A Malay sailor, evidently a runaway, arrived a few days ago from Amoy. He travelled overland, without either money or food, and was entirely dependent on the charity of the natives. According to his own statement, he started from Amoy for Swatow, and, travelling without guide or compass, reached this port after thirteen days on the road.

An instance of communal justice was witnessed by a party of foreigners a few days ago in the Mei Tau Temple at Pehling. A man suspected of having maliciously destroyed a number of tea plants was seized by the country people, examined before an improvised tribunal of village elders, and duly convicted. The prisoner was given the option of another trial at Foochow, before the constituted authorities, or of punishment on the spot. He decided upon the latter, and was accordingly suspended by one thumb at about a foot from the ground. The man was seen by our informant in this position for nearly a quarter of an hour, in a fainting state, and evidently suffering great agony.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 12th May; the P. and O. mail from London March 30 arrived out on the 6th May.

Since the departure of the last mail nothing of salient interest has occurred in the colony. The arrival of the new Governor has called forth the usual visiting and other complimentary ceremonies; and a reception in honour of Her Majesty's birthday was announced as on the tapis.

A somewhat curious right of way case has come forward in the Supreme Court. The parties were Chinese on both sides, and the action was brought to recover the sum of $200' damages alleged to have been sustained in consequence of defendant's having obstructed plaintiff's right of way; and to procure an injunction against defendant, restraining him from interfering with the right of way. The property in reference to which the dispute has arisen is situated in Lascar-street. The backs of plaintiff's and defendant's houses abut on a narrow lane. In this lane defendant had built party walls and placed other obstructions, which, however, have been removed and are not now in dispute. The question before the court was as to whether plaintiff is entitled to have steps from the end of the lane in order to connect it with Ladder-street. It was contended for the plaintiff that he was entitled by his deed of conveyance to a right of way and free ingress and egress to and from the lane, also that steps had existed up to November last. The contention for the defendant was that by the deed plaintiff was only entitled to free ingress and egress between his property and the lane, and not between the latter and any other thoroughfare. Ultimately, after giving the matter a patient hearing on two days, the Chief Justice recommended that it should stand over, with a view, if possible, of enabling the parties to effect a compromise.

The death of Charles Wotton, a fireman on board the Candia, has occurred suddenly. It appears he had been suffering from heart disease for some time, and on the afternoon previous to his death he was on shore. While walking along he was suddenly seized with an attack, and fell. He was taken to the police hospital, where he died shortly after admission.

An accident of a serious, though fortunately not fatal, character, but which reflects but little credit upon the energy and promptitude of the local officials concerned, has taken place. At about half-past four o'clock on the afternoon of May 9 a large portion of the north verandah of the American Consulate fell. Early in the morning Mr. Bailey, the Consul, noticed that it appeared insecure, and, apprehending that some catastrophe might occur, communicated with the owner of the house. A Chinese contractor shortly afterwards came and said he would see to the matter, without delay, but with the exception of a few bamboo poles being put up nothing was done. At two o'clock Mr. Bailey sent to the Government Inspector of Buildings, requesting that some one might be sent to inspect the premises, stating at the same time that he was in hourly expectation of some portion of the building falling. No one arrived, however, until after four o'clock, when the inspector came and made an official examination. He had not left the verandah five minutes before it fell with a loud crash. The United States flag, the staff of which was affixed to the verandah, was of course brought down with a run, and considerable damage was done in the garden below. Fortunately no one was injured. Mr. Bailey had taken the precaution of warning his domestics not to go under the unsafe part or allow others to do so, and the prudence of this step was made manifest by the result. At the time of the accident Mrs. Bailey was sitting between two windows fronting on to the verandah, and was much alarmed, as the first impression naturally was that the whole house was going. Although the wall has not given way it is considerably cracked both inside and out, and the windows are much loosened, though not a pane of glass was broken. The accident was confined to the American Consulate, but the verandah of the adjoining house, the French Consulate, has been shaken, and will no doubt require repair. The cause of the accident is unknown, but it would appear to arise from some defect in the building rather than from unsoundness of the material, as there is no symptom of white ants or dry rot in the woodwork. Probably the foundation of one of the pillars was not firm.

The Daily Press observes, in connection with the above matter, that it would seem that if persons are in "hourly" expectation of a catastrophe, and apply to a Government official in the matter, they may expect to see him in a few hours. The difficulty of getting Chinese to do a thing quickly is even greater. Had the place been shored up the accident could not have occurred.

We believe it is a fact, though, perhaps, not generally known, that no interpreter with a knowledge of mandarin Chinese is to be found in this colony. With the exception of one gentleman, who is about to leave Hong Kong permanently, not a soul in the place is competent to act as interpreter between his Excellency the Governor and any Chinese officials who might happen to visit the colony. This is certainly not as it should be. That a British colony within a mile of the mainland of China should be unprovided with an official capable of acting as interpreter between the Governor and any mandarins he may have occasion to see is very awkward and not very creditable to the colony. It is strange that the desirability of having some one acquainted with the mandarin dialect at hand in case of such a contingency seems never to have occurred to the Government, but it is probably owing to the fact that hitherto the Chinese officials passing through Hong Kong have been accompanied by interpreters. But it will not do to calculate upon this being always the case, nor is it consistent with the dignity of the Government of the Colony that it should be dependent for mandarin interpretation upon strangers. The matter is not of very urgent importance, perhaps, but it is one that should be seen to without any undue delay.

We have received the Customs Gazette for the quarter ending December, 1876. The total collection of dues and duties for the quarter was Tls. 3,016,024, as compared with Tls. 3,023,211 in the corresponding quarter of 1875. The total is made up of the following figures :—Import duty, foreign Tls. 522,680, native Tls. 18,227; export duty, foreign Tls. 1,411,974, native Tls. 156,376; coast trade duty, foreign Tls. 133,604, native Tls. 26,335; opium duty, foreign Tls. 535,376, native Tls. 23,929; tonnage dues, foreign Tls. 51,169, native Tls. 3,104; Yangtsze river steamer coast trade duty deposits, foreign Tls. 69,837, native Tls. 3,939, and transit dues Tls. 62,568.

We note the rather sudden departure of Mr. F. S. Huffam, Deputy Registrar of the Supreme Court, by the steamer Hankow, via Hankow, for England, on a short leave of absence, after twenty-three years' service under the Government of this Colony and twenty-seven years' residence in Hong Kong. Mr. Huffam was Acting Registrar from the time of Mr. Alexander's death to the arrival of the Hon. C. B. Plunket, and has certainly fully earned his holiday.

(FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The north-east monsoon has at length broken up, and given way to south-west winds. This change of season has, as you may easily imagine, been attended with frequent thunderstorms and very heavy showers of rain. Indeed, so great has been the fall of rain as to cause the various creeks by which the country on the north-west of Canton is intersected, to overflow their banks and to inundate all the neighbouring plains. This natural irrigation of lands, which are to be tilled for the cultivation of rice crops, is a source of much joy to the farmers. The minds, however, of agriculturists and of Chinese in all ranks and conditions of life have been much occupied during the past month in repairing and worshipping the tombs of their ancestors. Thousands of people have proceeded daily from this city to near and distant cemeteries, in order to propitiate by prayers and offerings the manes of the departed dead. This annual pilgrimage to the tombs of ancestors on the part of Chinese families or clans has been scrupulously observed for many centuries, and, judging from the vast numbers who, on this occasion, took part in such a singular proceeding, the interest in the ceremony is evidently unabated.

The Cantonese are blessed, at present, with excellent magistrates. Thus, for example, the Viceroy, who is named Lau-Pun-Yat, is a man of very high principles, and rules well the two southern kwangs or provinces of this great and densely populated empire. He has latterly been very much occupied, having, since November last, been called upon, not only to discharge his vice-regal duties, but those also which appertain to the all-important office of Commissioner of Customs. The Commissioner of Customs, or the Hoppo, as he is more generally called, had to repair to Peking, of which city he is a native, in order to spend one hundred days in mourning for his mother, who, in October last, died at an advanced age. He returned to his post at Canton on the 29th ultimo, per s.s. Pau-Tah. His arrival and debarcation were announced by salutes fired in honour of those events from various gunboats. Two new native officials have recently arrived here. Of these mandarins one is named Taai-Tchu-Cho. He holds the office of Chuung-Hip, or General of the Cheetoi or Viceroy's troops. The other is a member of the clan or family Hu. He is also a military mandarin, and holds under the Footai, or Governor, an office styled Yau-fu. These new-comers are said to be very efficient officers. The Cantonese have recently been much engaged in celebrating festivals in honour of two of their most popular deities, namely Paak-Taai and Tieu-Hau. Of these divinities the former is regarded as the "Great God of the North," while the latter is esteemed as the tutelary goddess of sailors, and of all, in short, who have their business on the great waters. Idols in honour of these two mythological worthies were carried in procession through all the principal streets of the city. These processions were formed in a great measure of bands of music, bannermen, grave-looking elders, and boys and girls. The boys and girls in question were so attired as to represent heroes and heroines of a past age. The dresses which they wore on the occasion, being of costly textures, gay colours, and magnificently embroidered, added greatly to the splendour of the scene. The procession in honour of Paak-Taai was so long as to require an hour to pass any given point. Plays were also performed in honour of these heathen deities, in temporary theatres erected in front of certain temples. And here it is my painful duty to record a most melancholy accident, which occurred in the theatre especially set apart for dramatic representations in honour of Paak-Taai. Owing to the crowded state of the theatre, the wooden supports of one of the galleries gave way, and fourteen persons were in consequence, crushed to death.

Two sets of prisoners have recently been made to undergo the extreme penalty of the law on the common execution-ground of this city. The first lot consisted of two malefactors, one of whom had been convicted of opening a tomb and despoiling the corpse which it contained of several valuable ornaments. The second batch numbered not less than forty-two criminals, some of whom had been found guilty of piracy, and others of burglary. They were, one and all, quickly despatched, falling beneath the blows of the executioner as grass before the scythe of the mower. Three nights ago a large fire occurred in the vicinity of the execution-ground. When extinguished it was ascertained that seventy-eight houses had been consumed. There was, also, I am sorry to add, a loss of life on the occasion, two men having been killed by the falling of a wall.

Two very grave criminal cases are now occupying the attention of the judicial authorities of this city. The first of these cases may be described as follows:—A bride aged seventeen years, who resided at Kwong-ling-uen in this province, having formed a criminal intimacy with a youth named Ng'-Akwei, the younger brother of her husband, resolved, with the aid of her adulterous and incestuous paramour, to put her husband to death. This diabolical purpose the two grievously-erring ones unfortunately succeeded in carrying into effect, and they are now, consequently, undergoing daily very searching examinations before the tribunal of the Provincial Judge. Death by a lingering process under the hands of the public executioner evidently awaits this guilty pair. The other case is that of a man named Chaong-Achee, who is fifty-four years of age, and who dwelt in the western suburb of this city. He is accused of having violated the chastity of a little girl aged nine years. Of the guilt of this man there is apparently no doubt, and as the punishment merited by a crime of this nature is death by decapitation, his days are numbered. Let me now conclude my remarks on these important police cases by observing that on the 8th instant sixteen malefactors, chiefly pirates, were beheaded on the common execution-ground of this city.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present French mail brings advices from this port to the 19th May; the P. and O. mail from London April 13 was received on the 14th May. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

We are glad to learn that progress is making with the scheme for the new Exchange Rooms, Chamber of Commerce, and Singapore Club buildings. The Government have executed a lease conveying to Messrs. Gulland and Adamson on behalf of the members of the Chamber of Commerce and Singapore Exchange the piece of ground on which the building is to be erected in Fort Fullerton, adjoining the Post-office, for a period of ninety-nine years, at the quit rent of $150 per annum. Plans for the building, submitted by Mr. W. D. Bayliss, have been adopted by the Building Committee. The cost of the building has been estimated at $30,000, with an additional $5,000 for contingencies, and of this amount $10,000 has been already subscribed by the mercantile houses constituting the Exchange and Chamber of Commerce; $10,000 more is proposed to be raised by additional subscriptions in bonds of $100, bearing interest at 6 per cent., and the balance will be obtained by a first mortgage on the property at 7 per cent. The annual income from rent on the building is estimated at $4,080, and the expenditure at $3,700, and there will thus be left a small annual balance to pay off the bonds or redeem the mortgage.

The ceremony of laying the foundation stone of a mission house connected with St. Andrew's Mission, on a piece of ground off Stamford-road, was performed by H. E. the Administrator, who was accompanied by Mrs. Anson and Miss Anson. A number of residents witnessed the proceedings.

A solemn requiem High Mass for the repose of the soul of the Italian General Nino Bixio—whose remains were found lately in Atchin, and handed over to the Italian Consul to be forwarded to Italy for interment—was celebrated at the French Roman Catholic Church. Among those present at the ceremony were the Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Hon. the Attorney-General, Colonel McLeod, H.M.'s 74th Highlanders, commanding H.M.'s troops, Straits Settlements; Major Eden, Major Lloyd, Captain Walshe, Mr. T. H. Anson, Private Secretary to his Excellency the Administrator; Mr. Maxwell, the Italian, German, Spanish, and Portuguese Consuls, Mr. Hermens, as representative of the Dutch Consul General, and a number of Dutch military officers in full dress uniform.

The Tanjong Pagar Dock Company, we are glad to say, have rewarded the men of H.M.'s 74th Highlanders in a handsome manner for their services during the first night of the great fire at the wharf. In addition to granting them a sum of money to cover all the expenses to which they had been put to repair the damage done to their clothing, each sergeant engaged at the fire has been awarded a gratuity of $5, and each private $1. We understand the Company intend to reward the police also for their services on the occasion.

Mr. Inspector Miller has been dismissed from the police force for misconduct, the authorities having satisfied themselves of the justice of some complaints made against him.

We regret to announce the death of the Right Rev. M. E. Le Turdu, who, for some years past, was Vicar Apostolic of the Malayan Peninsula, and who, for thirty years, was connected with Roman Catholic Missions to the East. Intelligence of the death of the Right Rev. gentleman, which occurred in Paris on last week, reached here by telegram, and was received with great regret by the large circle of friends to whom the deceased prelate had endeared himself by his piety, works of charity, and amiable qualities. A solemn requiem mass for the repose of his soul was celebrated this morning at the French Roman Catholic Church.

Messrs. Powell and Co. began the auction of the coal salved from the Tanjong Pagar fire on the spot, and had sold some five or six thousand tons at various prices, when the sale was put a stop to by a sudden squall and downpour of rain.

We are informed that the Chinese in this Colony contemplate starting a newspaper which will discuss and advocate their views on all public matters. This is another symptom that the Chinese, who form such an important element in this community, are keenly alive to their own interests, and have not been unmoved by, or unwatchful of recent legislation. There can be no objection to the advent of an organ which will represent their views, and we have no doubt its expressions of opinion will meet with every consideration in official circles. We trust, however, that the promoters of this undertaking understand and appreciate fully the difference between the use and abuse of the freedom of the press.

We take the following new notifications from the Gazette:—

Mr. James Irving has been appointed Surveyor of Steam-Vessels in Penang in place of Mr. Small.

Mr. J. M. R. Magalhaens has been appointed Municipal Commissioner, Penang, vice Captain Satterthwaite, R. E., absent on leave.

The Secretary of State has confirmed the leave of absence to the Honourable W. W. Willans, for twelve months with half salary.

A Marine Notice regarding the Orissa coast, Bay of Bengal, is published.

The School Returns for the month of March in the three settlements are published.

Mr. J. K. Birch, Collector of Land Revenue, Penang, notifies that a portion of the ground in the old Government Brick Fields, Penang, will be sold at auction at twelve o'clock P.M., on the spot, on Tuesday, the 29th May, 1877.

Captain Ord, Acting Postmaster-General, advertises that the Trustees of the Savings Bank are prepared to lend money at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum on approved security.

Mr. Bell, Chief Inspector of Police, has left for Europe on three months' leave of absence.

Captain Walshe, Acting Inspector General of Police, has, we are informed, appointed, Mr. Inspector Richards, a very diligent officer, head of the detective department of the police force here in the place of Mr. Miller. Mr. Inspector Smith of Penang has been appointed to Mr. Richards's late position, in charge of the A division of Police at the Central Station.

Jewellery, diamonds and money, to the value of $100,000, were, the Rajah Mahdie reports, stolen from his house in Short-street. The police are making inquiries into the circumstances of the case, but the thieves have not yet been discovered.

Major Gray, Superintendent of Prisons, and successor to the lamented Lieut. Dent, has written an elaborate report, which contains some valuable suggestions with reference to prison discipline in the Straits.

CASUALTIES.—The New York Journal of Commerce of June 9 says:—The Daniel Marcy, from Manila to this port, has been lost in Gaspar Straits, crew saved. Nantes, June 21, the Leonie, from Glasgow to Ilo Ilo, which put into Brest, leaky, had discharged 300 tons cargo on June 16, and was no longer making water, from which it was supposed that the leak was in her upper works. Rio de Janeiro, June 21, the Strassburg, from Liverpool to Batavia, has put in leaky she will discharge for repairs.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Gibraltar, passed, June 19, Antenor (str.), Shanghai for London; 20, Ulysses (str.), China for London; 16, arrived and cleared, Tertia (str.), from Maulmain for Antwerp; Cape Town, May 22, sailed, Roseneath, for Batavia.

MISSING SHIP.—The Royal Family, of Liverpool, Fowler, which left Bassein on October 23 last, for the United Kingdom, with rice and teak, has not since been heard of.

CHINA AND KASHGAR.

The Times says:—Some further information has at last been received throwing light on the events that are occurring down to the end of March in the very heart of Central Asia, where Yakoob Beg is face to face with the Chinese Army which has undertaken the reconquest of Kashgar. A Russian Embassy was despatched last October to the Emir, who had, however, departed before its arrival for the eastern portion of his dominions, in consequence of rumours of Chinese victories on the borders of Kansuh. After residing a month in the city of Kashgar, the Embassy set out on its journey after Yakoob Beg, and passing through on its route the towns of Aksu and Kucha, reached Kurnja, where the Emir then was, on the 25th of January. It received a most flattering reception at his hands and remained at his head-quarters at Turfau for several weeks. On the 18th of February it commenced its return journey, and concluded it in safety on the 18th of April, when it entered Tashkent. In this march of nearly 950 miles each way, the greater part of the territory of Yakoob Beg was passed through, and exceptional means for acquiring information was at the disposal of the Russian officers. Captain Kuropatkin, who was intrusted with the charge of the Embassy, has since his return contributed to the Turkestan Gazette an account of the army which the Emir has collected round Turfau, and of which but for this interesting statement we should know nothing authentic. The picture he draws of this force is anything but favourable. Instead of having under his command an army of 50,000 men, as had previously been asserted, his main force at Turfau is estimated at but 8,500, while at various other points along the frontier there are only 17,500 more. Of these 10,000 are Doungans, who are the same as the Dungani or Tungani, the Mahommedan rebels of Kansuh, and Captain Kuropatkin represents them as not only badly armed, but also untrustworthy. The Kashgar force proper is, therefore, according to this Russian account, scarcely 16,000 men. Even in their equipment, the stories told of his troops being armed with breechloaedrs seem to have been much exaggerated, for our informant says that when he saw them only 2,000 were armed with such weapons, the remainder possessing only flint locks, match-locks, and falconets of various degrees of usefulness. It is only proper, however, to point out that Captain Kuropatkin on his return journey met several supplies of breechloaders being sent to the front. Yakoob's artillery is also said to be not so formidable as would appear at first sight from its number. The breechloading guns are without any value through the want of proper ammunition, and his other cannons are either of a greatly inferior or of an obsolete character. Of the condition of the Chinese Army we are far better informed than we are of that of Yakoob Beg. It is not a force, it must be remembered, that has its laurels yet to win; its main body, viewed by the light of its recent successes, may be styled veterans. It has approached the Tian Shan as the conqueror of Urumtsi and Manas, and as the avenger of the massacres of its countrymen thirteen years ago in Kashgar. Its recent capture of Manas was alone no mean military achievement. The siege was conducted in accordance with the principles of modern warfare, and the gallantry with which the breaches were stormed would not have been unbecoming in European soldiers. Its General, Kin Shun, has in all his arrangements proved himself to be competent to undertake great enterprises, and not at all inclined to risk the result by being allured into premature action. The fall of Manas destroyed the last vestige of the Tungain revolt, which for more than thirty years had devastated the North-Western Provinces of China; and this victory left only one more object to be accomplished to effect the long striven for restoration of the Chinese Empire to its former limits. On that final task the Chinese are now engaged, and General Kin Shun is collecting all the forces within reach to sweep through the passes of the Tian Shan Mountains on the Army of Kashgar. Captain Kuropathine says that he is also offering lucrative employment to such as will desert to the Chinese, and that, in consequence of this proclamation, there have been serious defections among the Emir's forces. But the Chinese are not trusting to diplomatic measures as the chief means whereby the campaign is to result victoriously, for no preparation whatever seems to be omitted to insure success. While the communications with the interior are being facilitated, and the troops armed with improved weapons sent to the front from Lanchefu, the chief town of Kansuh, we have also heard that a loan has been raised for the special purpose of increasing the efficiency of the army operating against Eastern Turkestan. In numbers there cannot be less than 50,000 men collected in the neighbourhood of Guchen, the Chinese head-quarters, and very possibly there may be a great many more. It will not be long now before we shall be receiving definite news of the conflict round Turfan.

THE HANDEL FESTIVAL.—The Handel Triennial Festival at the Crystal Palace begins by the rehearsal to-day, and will be continued on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday next week. The Crystal Palace Company has done a great service, not only to the memory of our most illustrious composer, but to the musical taste of the public, by these festivals. Nothing like them has ever been attempted in this country, and probably with the exception of some extraordinary doings at Boston and the Wagner Festival at Bayreuth, no such musical performances have ever taken place. The vast size of the building, the huge orchestra, and the immense number of the performers make a combination which could perhaps be adapted only to Handel's music, and could only take place in England. In the Crystal Palace the solos are well heard; but the real grandeur of the choruses was never fully appreciated till these festivals provided a vast orchestra and some thousands of performers.

PROFESSOR NORDENSKJOLD'S great expedition, for which a vessel has already been chartered at the price of 150,000 crowns, is to leave Gothenburg in June, 1878. It is to circumnavigate the whole of Asia through the Polar Sea, the Behring Straits, along the east and south coast of Asia, and to return to Europe through the Red Sea and the Suez Canal, in the autumn of 1879. King Oscar has contributed 50,000 crowns towards the expedition. The principal expense of the expedition will be borne by Mr. Dickson, a merchant of Gothenburg.

The Messageries Maritimes steamer Sindh, with the present inward mail, arrived at Marseilles on the 17th inst. She brings 140 passengers and a general cargo, including 3,857 packages of sugar, 24,097 packages of tea, 371 packages of yarn, 139 packages of sundries, and specie valued £10,296 for London, which part of her cargo will be forwarded to its destination per company's steamer Ganges, due in London on or about the 3rd July.

The directors of the Messageries Maritimes have ordered their agent at Aden to forward the passengers and crew of the steamer Meikong to Suez by the first mail steamer; from Suez they would proceed to Alexandria by rail, and on reaching Alexandria they would embark on the company's first steamer for Marseilles.

THE NEW PORTS AND THE CHINA MERCHANTS.

NOTHING can be more striking than the want of alacrity, which has been displayed by the merchants in China with reference to availing themselves of the new ports which have been (or are to be) opened under the Chefoo Convention. For years past the cry has been that greater facilities for trading are required, and now that some instalment of what has been demanded has been granted, the China merchants appear to be but little concerned in the change, and hold back in a manner which is in marked contrast to the eagerness displayed on the opening of the river and northern ports in 1860. Perhaps the lesson then learnt is in reality at the bottom of what at first sight appears to be a great inconsistency. With enthusiastic ideas as to the indefinite powers of extending trade, the merchants then rushed with alacrity to the new ports, and spent thousands in opening agencies, purchasing land and building houses and warehouses, only to reap a trade feverishly excited and paying for a short time, but destined to lead to serious loss and disappointment. The trade after a short period was found to be steadily drifting into the hands of the Chinese, whose local information enabled them necessarily to conduct it with much more effect than Europeans could do, while the comparative inexpensiveness of the native Hongs also gave them a great advantage. Although, therefore, the trade became established at the new ports and their opening tended thus to further our commercial interests, looked upon in their largest aspect, the gain to the foreign merchants on the spot was not by any means so large as had been anticipated. This fact, combined with the generally unfavourable nature of trade of late years, may to a great extent account for the want of alacrity which is spoken of in the China papers; but undoubtedly the circumstance is due in some degree also to the uncertainty which must generally be felt as to the effect of any such step, so long as it is not known definitely whether the Chefoo Convention will be ratified. While this remains doubtful, considerable risk of loss must be faced in establishing agencies or making arrangements for business; but apart from this circumstance there is reason to believe that at the present time the feeling among commercial men connected with China in favour of establishing houses at new places is by no means so enthusiastic as might be supposed, considering the strong advocacy which has from time to time been made of that measure.

So far as we can gather from the opinions of those well able to judge, the new ports will be tried but very cautiously, and great care will be taken to avoid the error which proved so disastrous before, of making large investments in property with the idea that a business springing up from exceptional causes will prove of a permanent and reliable character. No word of warning is needed upon this point. Experience of the past has been too bitter and its bearing too plain to make it at all likely that the errors of 1860 will now be repeated. Indeed, the danger would appear to lie in a contrary direction, and the idea may be jumped at that the benefit of opening new ports has been greatly over-estimated. This, however, is not strictly speaking the case. What has been over-estimated is the immediate advantage likely to accrue to foreign merchants in China, not the general benefit to our trade with that country. Whether the traffic between the large centres of import and export be conducted by foreigners or by Chinese, there can be no question that a larger amount of business will be done, in precise proportion as points of trading contact are increased. The manner in which this principle works, though obvious to those acquainted with the details of Chinese commerce and of the system of inland levies and "squeezes" to which it is subjected, is not so easily grasped by even very well informed people at home; and it is important that the true merits of the matter should not be misunderstood. The terms of our treaties with China as to the exemption of goods from taxation beyond the amount of the commuted inland dues are never likely to be respected at any great distance from a centre of trade to which we have access by treaty, and hence, even if the opening of a given new port do not lead to the establishment at it of more than half-a-dozen foreign firms, an important point is gained, as our having the right to go to it will prevent the local officials from imposing upon Chinese traders burdens in the form of taxation which they would be unable to impose upon Europeans, and the continuance of which would necessarily result in the advent of foreigners in larger numbers to the port in question—which is precisely what the Chinese officials in an ordinary way desire to avoid. It would, therefore, be an error to conclude that because the facilities for trade at the new ports may be only slowly availed of, they are not of a valuable character in their bearing upon the ultimate prospects of our commerce with China. On the contrary, the fact that they are likely to be only sparingly availed of in the present instance is rather a subject of congratulation than otherwise, as it shows that our merchants in China are prepared in the present day to look carefully before they leap. With care and circumspection a business may doubtless be developed at them, which will prove advantageous to merchants locally; and even though, as past experience shows, the bulk of the coast and river trade, wherever it springs up, is destined to find its way into the hands of the Chinese, there can be no question that the opening of new ports, except under very exceptional circumstances, will have the effect which has always been anticipated from it, of both directly and indirectly doing away with the restrictions which ordinarily stand in the way of commerce in China, and which our treaties with that country are designed to remove.

A CORRESPONDENT in Canton gives an interesting account of some important criminal proceedings which at the time he wrote were attracting attention in that city. The terrible nature of the crimes committed, and of the punishment to be inflicted—in one case that of being cut into 10,000 pieces, or, in other words, slowly sliced to death—are both illustrative of Chinese life and civilisation. They are, the one, the natural accompaniment of the other, barbarous punishments having ever had the tendency rather to induce than to restrain crime. It is to be feared that it will be many years before a reform in this direction can be expected, and so long as such barbarity continues Chinese civilisation cannot be regarded otherwise than as still at a very low point. The absurdity of the demands at times made for removing the protection which we enjoy under the exterritorial system in force in China while Chinese jurisprudence remains what it is, is apparent when facts such as the above are borne in mind, but unfortunately they are too frequently overlooked by many people who undertake to argue upon this and kindred subjects.

THE case of DE BUSSCHE v. ALT, to which we drew attention in our last, came on before Vice Chancellor HALL on the 18th inst. The claim arises out of the sale in Japan of certain steamers by the defendant on behalf of the plaintiff, the latter alleging that defendant received from the purchasers money in excess of that for which he rendered account sales, and that he was liable for the full amounts received for the vessels, less commission and charges. The answer of the defendant traverses the statement of liability for the full sums received, and also contains a plea to the effect that the nature of the transaction was known to, and approved of by an agent who was sent to Japan to look after the plaintiff's interests in the matter. Some lengthy documentary evidence, consisting of the correspondence going to establish the facts, was put in. The case is of great importance in its bearing upon other transactions in Japan similar to the one now called in question.

WE regret to record the loss of one of the Messageries Maritimes mail steamers. The Meikong, having on board the mails due here on the 9th proximo, was wrecked at Ras-a-foon, near Cape Guardafui, at the entrance to the Bab-el-Mandeb Straits, on the 17th inst. The steamer Glenartney reached Aden on the 20th with the crew and passengers, but the mails are lost, the wreck having been abandoned. The Meikong left Galle on the 10th, with seventy passengers, 197 bales silk, and 8,045 packages sundries for Marseilles; 185 bales silk, 13,390 packages tea—supposed boxes shipped in Hong Kong on or about May 26, 971 sugar, and 1,199 packages sundries for London. The Meikong was comparatively a new steamer, of 3,176 tons and 500-horse power, and was under the command of Captain Foache.

WE are glad to learn that during the academical year which has just closed there has been a fair attendance of students at the lectures on Chinese given at Oxford by the Rev. Dr. LEGGE, the Professor at that University. One of the students will, we believe, be going out shortly to a mercantile house in China. Others have been attracted to the lectures by their general interest in philology. We trust that the Foreign and Colonial Offices may speedily adopt a system for enabling students to obtain instruction at Oxford, in connection with appointments as interpreters in China and the Straits, as we suggested when the Chair was first established.

A RUMOUR has gained some currency to the effect that the second Chinese Minister is about to proceed to Constantinople. It has been also stated that the Chinese Government are negotiating for the purchase of two ironclads now building here for the Turkish Government.

THE appointment of Baron VON SODEN as German Consul at Hong Kong has been gazetted.

THE CHINESE ENVOYS.

The Chinese Envoys were present at the reception given at the American Minister's in honour of General Grant, and on Wednesday they met the Prince of Wales at the same place. The Second Minister, H.E. Liu, went to Epsom on the 13th inst., and both Envoys were present at the Caledonian dinner, H.E. Kwo occupying the seat of honour on the right of the Duke of Buccleuch. They also attended a reception by the Earl of Salisbury, and went to a garden party at the Duke of Argyll's. On Saturday last they visited the East and West India Docks, accompanied by Sir William Baynes, and other members of the committee, and were shown over the warehouses, hydraulic presses, and other objects of interest. They were taken to and from the docks, from the Speaker's stairs in a steamer specially provided for the purpose.

A portrait of H.E. Kwo has appeared in Vanity Fair, which sagely observes that he is a mandarin of the Red Button, but not of the Peacock's Feather. This is no doubt near enough to accuracy as information on China matters goes, only the peacock's feather is not an indication of a mandarin's grade, but is conferred as a special honour, like the Companionship of the Bath. The Law Times has waxed very facetious at what it calls the "good joke" of the Chinese Envoys having in leaving one of the Courts when they visited them shaken hands not only with the Judges but also with the Usher. We believe the statement is really unfounded; but supposing such a terrible error to have been committed, it is rather difficult for the lay mind to perceive the great joke in a Chinaman mistaking one European for another.

MISSIONARIES AND MORALS IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—The letter signed "T" in your issue of the 4th inst., is such a very unamiable production that it deserves, I think, a reply of a different nature from that which "Old China" has seen fit to give. Passing over the very extraordinary sentence that it is to be regretted that "Sabbath-breaking in China is to be deplored"—Sabbath-breaking being, moreover, such a vague term as to be inadmissible without a definition—permit me to state that European life in China is, although generally extravagant, by no means uncivilised and unrefined; it is on the contrary, rather over-civilised and over-refined. In fact, the majority of European residents in the East lead a life which is, from an ordinary European point of view, above their station, and which, in nine out of ten cases, they are unable to keep up at home; I, however, fail to perceive any great amount of wickedness in this. It savours, perhaps, of folly; but so does the action of a missionary gentleman, for instance, who marries on a small salary, and becomes the father of a great many more children than he can conveniently feed and decently educate; a state of affairs which is often seen and which is decidedly to be deplored. Our common aim is happiness, the pursuit of which is hardly, in our present state, possible without a certain amount of selfishness. We all live in glass-houses, and should beware of throwing stones.

If gentlemen engaged in mercantile pursuits in China had greater facilities for marrying and settling I suspect a good deal of the extravagance which "T." deplores would wear off quickly; but circumstances are very much against them. The majority go out to China quite young, and work hard for many years before they are able to get the proverbial "run home," a period generally too short to admit of courtship and matrimony. Many return to China slightly disappointed at what they term their bad luck, and seek to forget their disappointment in work and social pleasures. I admit that some men in China "go to the bad"—I know a few myself—but the percentage is smaller than perhaps "T." imagines, while the general morality of European residents in China compares favourably with that of the same class of individuals at home. "T." may object that this is mere assertion, and attach no importance to testimony other than clerical. If so, let him ask the opinions of military and naval chaplains; he can find many who, I feel convinced, will bear witness of the genial, and in a moral sense perfectly satisfactory social life which exists in China. By such inquiries he would, moreover, find that a missionary as such is no more excluded from the society of European residents in China than a clergyman in this country, who understands what social life enjoins, is excluded from good society. It all depends upon the individual.—I am, &c.,

Literature, Science, &c.

The approaching Caxton Celebration, which is to take place on the 30th inst., has been the chief subject of general interest among literary circles for some time past. It is expected that Mr. Gladstone's oration on the occasion will be something very great, the theme being one well suited to his great powers as a speaker, and his extensive acquaintance with literature and art.

A new edition of D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation is announced by Messrs. Longman; and a work of some interest to be entitled New Ireland, by Mr. Sullivan, M.P., is to appear this autumn. It will contain an elaborate review of the changes made of recent years. The New Testament Committee of Revisers have held their seventy-first session. They have proceeded with the second division of the Acts of the Apostles.

Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield. London: S. O. Beeton, 39, Bedford-street.—This work, a portion of which was written before Mr. Disraeli became Earl of Beaconsfield, will be read with very general interest at the present time, Its object, which is well fulfilled, is not to produce a dissertation, but to give a complete account of Lord Beaconsfield's career, so that every reader may have the means of forming his own opinion. The speech, in which Mr. Disraeli sat down amidst the laughter of the House of Commons, and said the time would come when they would hear him, is given, and is of interest as showing that this is not, as has been supposed by some, merely an invention of the historian.

Wei-Ch'i, or the Chinese Game of War.—Under the above title, an interesting paper (published a short time back in the Temple Bar Magazine) has been written by Mr. Herbert A. Giles, of H.B.M. Consular Service. Wei-chi, which has been popularly called Chinese chess, on account of its bearing a distant resemblance to that game, has long been thought far too difficult to be understood by Europeans; but though it is undoubtedly complicated, Mr. Giles has not only succeeded in understanding its mysteries, but also in explaining them in a clear and very amusing style. The invention of Wei-chi is attributed to the Emperor Yao, who flourished 2,000 years ago.

Keramic Art of Japan.—The fifth part of the above work, which we have noticed from time to time, has been issued by Messrs. Sotheran, and fully keeps up to its very high standard of excellence. The engravings in the present number (in common, in fact, with all that have appeared) are master pieces, the refined colouring and drawing of the designs on the various objects illustrated being brought out to perfection. The work when completed will be simply invaluable to all interested in Japanese Art.

The Report of the Deputy-Master of the Mint for 1876.—The present Report of the Master of the Mint is of an interesting character in a general point of view, besides containing the usual amount of technical information. A valuable print of old coins is given, and it is noticed that the design of modern coins is in almost all respects inferior to that of coinages of former times. It is noticed that the consignments of coin packed during the year for transmission to the Colonies in aid of Treasury chests were of the total nominal value of £234,129, as against £284,807 in 1875. and consisted of £185,000 in British gold coin, £11,050 in British silver coin, and £38,089 in Mexican dollars sent to Hong Kong and the Straits Settlements.

It is understood that Miss Marianne North's Sketches of Tropical vegetation are about to be exhibited at the South Kensington Museum. Miss North has long been known to the scientific world as a distinguished amateur artist and an indefatigable traveller. The sketches—which are, in fact, finished studies in oil-colour—are 510 in number, and are at this moment being mounted, framed, and catalogued at the expense of the Government. They chiefly delineate the trees, plants, and fruits of Teneriffe, the West Indies, Ceylon, Java, Japan, Borneo, the Brazils, California, &c., &c., and were entirely executed on the spot. As a whole, they probably represent the most remarkable work of the kind ever executed by a single hand.

The catalogue of the Arabic MSS. in the Library of the India House, made by Professor O. Loth, of Leipzig, has appeared. This collection, containing 1,050 numbers, is chiefly important for Mohammedan law, philosophy, and theology, and in some respects also for poetry.

The editorship of the Economist, which has not been filled up since the death of Mr. Walter Bagehot, has now been jointly undertaken by Mr. Lathbury and Mr. Inglis Palgrave.

The Contemporary Review for July will contain an article on "Rajah Brooke and Borneo," by Mr. Gladstone.

THE EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The tenth ordinary meeting of the above Company took place on the 21st inst., John Pender, Esq., M.P., in the chair. The report showed that the revenue for the six months ending 31st March, 1877, amounted to £224,634 16s. 7d., from which was deducted £52,951 17s. 10d., the ordinary expenses of the Company, leaving a balance of £171,682 18s. 9d. Of this amount, £24,331 18s. 0d. has been absorbed by special expenditure during the half-year, £800 for bad debts, and £1,504 1s. 5d. by income-tax, as shown in the accounts, leaving £145,046 19s. 4d., which, together with £2,958 13s. 3d. brought forward from the preceding half-year, left a balance of £148,005 12s. 7d. From this balance £6,960 was payable for interest on debentures, and £16,094 11s. 6d. for interest to 31st March, 1877, at 6 per cent. per annum on the preference shares, in accordance with the terms of issue. During the half-year £46,212 10s., an interim dividend of 1¼ per cent. on the ordinary shares, had been paid, and a final dividend on these shares of 2s. 6d. per share, to be paid on the 14th July next, making, with the three previous payments on account, a total dividend for the year of 5 per cent. was recommended, leaving £32,526 1s. 1d. to be carried to the reserve fund. The Board had applied £100,000 from the reserve fund to the reduction of the cost of cables, &c., instead of issuing further capital as originally intended to replace that amount heretofore expended in new works. The reserve fund was thus left at £121,611 6s. 1d., represented by securities and cash. The several sections of the Company's cables continue in good working order, with the exception of the Falmouth-Lisbon Direct Line, which was interrupted in February last near to Falmouth, and the Company's new repairing ship is now engaged making the necessary repairs. The interruption, however, does not interfere with the regular transmission of the traffic. Since the last general meeting the directors have received the definitive concession and decree of the President of the French Republic for the establishment of the new cable between Marseilles and Bona (Algeria), which was referred to in the last report, and an agreement has been concluded with the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company for the manufacture and laying of the cable. It is expected that the line will be completed in a few weeks.

The Chairman, after going through the details of the accounts, noticed that the costs of repairs had been heavy, and were doubtless larger than might be wished; but this resulted apparently from the nature of the ground upon which one of the cables lay. The other was only at a short distance, but, being upon a better bed, kept in good order. The difference resulting from this cause was such that there was good reason to hope that as knowledge of the nature of the beds increased the cost of repairs would be much diminished. The Aden duplicate cable was in good order. A resolution was to be submitted to the meeting to authorise the laying of a new cable between Bona and Malta, and this would have the effect of duplicating the whole of the system from India. With respect to the system of duplication, the Chairman pointed out that it was of the utmost value, as, in the event of an interruption, loss resulted not only from the cost of repairs but also from the loss of working time. The duplication which had been effected had also, from another cause, proved of even more value than was anticipated. The working of the Indo-European line had been suspended in consequence of the outbreak of the war, and the traffic had, therefore, come into the hands of the Eastern Telegraph Company. He might mention that they had always been upon the most friendly terms with that Company. He did not believe in competition which would unduly cut down prices, and he hoped that by co-operation they would not be allowed to fall below what would offer a fair dividend to the shareholders. The general prospects of the Company were good. With India an increased traffic might be looked for with the revival of trade, especially in grain, which article was becoming increasingly important, India being able to send grain to England, which would pay at anything over 40s. English capital was also now more largely employed in India, this being found a better field of investment than sending it to foreign countries where it had not been found to be profitably employed. With Australia there was also every prospect of increased telegraphic communication, provided the Government there would co-operate in introducing lower rates; while there was no doubt that before long a line to the Cape Colonies must also be laid down.

With these remarks the Chairman moved the adoption of the report. This resolution, being seconded and carried, and the resolutions authorising the construction of the line between Bona and Malta, and the payment of the dividend as recommended, and a further resolution empowering the Board to create and issue £200,000 Five per Cent. Debentures having been also passed, the meeting separated with the usual compliment to the chair.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JUNE 19.

The great slowness with which the operations are going on in the East, especially on the banks of the Danube, is regarded here with much dislike. Every one had entertained hopes that after the example of Germany, the present war would be carried on by Russia in such a manner as to make sure of a quick course, and that peace, and with it more settled circumstances in the mercantile world and more confidence, soon would return; but now it becomes more and more plain that the present war will become a protracted one, and that trade and industry still will have to suffer a long time to come. Emperor William, who has quite recovered of his indisposition, departed on Friday last for Ems, his annual summer residence, for some weeks, and has arrived there on Saturday, the 16th of June. At Ems the Emperor met with his brother, Prince Carl, returning from his trip to Italy and Egypt, and with her Majesty, the Empress Augusta. The members of the Royal family dined together on that day, and afterwards Prince Carl departed for Berlin and the Empress for Koblenz.

On the 13th of June the Grand-Duke of Hesse Darmstadt, Lewis III., has died. The Duke was born on the 9th June, 1806, and is succeeded by his nephew, Lewis IV., born in 1837, and married to Princess Alice of Great Britain and Ireland.

Herr von Kendell, the German Ambassador at Rome, went this week to Vienna, in order, as the Government journals say, to join there with his wife, and to consult a famous physician of that town. "But in other circles the meaning prevails that gentleman being gone to the capital of Austria in order to confer with Count Andrassy and the plenipotentiary of Russia about mutual measurements against the Pope and the Vatican.

In consequence of great disturbances of telegraph-traffic during stormy weather our German authorities have decided to lay an underground cable between the largest cities, and these works have already begun between Berlin and Hamburg, and are completed to Ludwigslust in Mecklenburg, about the half-way to our town. A lengthening of the mentioned cable is intended to Khiel, on the Baltic.

On the 14th of this month an election of a member of the Reichstag has taken place at Berlin in the so-named Sixth Election County, and the struggle between the Liberals and Socialists has been rather a hard one, the latter being victorious as their candidate, Mr. Hasenclever, has been elected with a majority of nearly 1,200 votes. In the Fifth County of Berlin, in which a similar election had to take place yesterday, Monday 15, the two candidates were Carpenter Kapell (Socialist) and Dr. Zimmerman (Liberal), and the latter has been elected.

The boards of several railway companies of Westphalia have decided on a reduction of coal-freights to Hamburg, Bremen, &c., if this coal is despatched by extraordinary train. In consequence of this reduction ships coming to our town with transatlantic goods are now able to find fuel as frieght at any time.

The Anglo-Deutsche Bank held an extraordinary meeting of her shareholders last Thursday, which has been of a very agitated character, as the proposed winding-up of the establishment was the order of the day. A considerable number of shareholders were present, and after a long debate the further existence of this establishment was voted by 13,252, against 7,831. As you will remember, the mentioned banking establishment has been a child of the so-named "gruender period," the time after the Franco-German War, and as rather all engagements at the bank have been of a ruinous character for the shareholders, a winding-up would have been the best way for them if this could be done in a short time, but by forced sales of the property now in hand the proprietors would lose rather all; therefore the majority of them decided for a further existence, as all losses are now written off and the present position may be taken as a healthy one.

The successes of the Russian torpedoes on the Danube have anew given inducement to many civil engineers and scientific men for new inventions. As reported from Copenhagen, an invention in this regard has been made there, which, if it should prove practicable, all at once would make all the fleets of the world, and even the most formidable ironclad a mere toy. The inventor is to construct a boat, which by moving under the surface of the water is able to fix torpedoes to the bottom of any ship without being seen, and thus blow the attacked vessel up into fragments, without even the slightest presentiment of the coming catastrophe being felt by any on board. The diving vessel is to last fully twelve hours under water, thus being able to come up again at a long distance from the place of disaster. As reported, the inventor has offered his invention to the Danish Government, but not having agreed with the latter, is willing to offer his destructive invention to some great European Power. It must be remembered here that similar inventions have been made before, without ever having been found practicable.

The Hamburg American Steamship Company has reduced the expeditions of its West Indian boats in such a manner that in future only one boat every month will leave here on the usual route to St. Thomas, &c., instead of the former two boats per month; certainly a good arrangement, as the steamers of the Company on this route hitherto never have yielded any profit.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The total demand on our Produce Markets has only been of a consumptive character during the past week, and transactions therefore have shown no considerable extent. The rate of discount at the Imperial Bank is five per cent., but money in the open market is obtainable at a rather lower rate.

COFFEE.—Holders maintained their high rates and the margin between these and the offers come forward has prevented any speculative transactions. Quotations for Java quality m.1.05 to 1.50 per ½ kilo.

SUGAR.—Brown qualities have been in more demand during the period under review; 16,000 bags brown Java, 2,800 bags unclayed Manila and 720 bags yellow Zanzibar have been sold for delivery or otherwise. Quotations are: Manila brown, clayed, m.29 to 31; do. unclayed, m.24 to 25; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 31; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34; Batavia, white, m.34½ to 36; do. yellow and grey, m.31½ to 34; do. brown, m.24½ to 31; Siam, Benares and China white, m.32 to 36; Zanzibar, brown and yellow m.28 to 33; China. brown and yellow, m.23 to 32 per 50 kilo.

RICE.—The supply of broken qualities is small, and the demand has also been a limited one; 9,000 bags arrived per "Louise" from Bassein have changed owners already afloat.

TEA.—At firm rates the following lots have been sold; 881/4 boxes and 1,290/8 boxes Congo.

COTTON.—In consequence of a better tendency prices went slowly higher. Among other lots of American provenience 50 bales Rangoon have changed owners at m.0.45.

SPICES.—Nutmegs, prime quality are quoted m.2.80 to 3.10. Mace, prime quality, m.2.35 to 2.45. Ginger is firm, Bengal m.27½ to 28; Cochin, with small stock and advancing in value, quotations m.63 to 85. Cloves are in good demand, Zanzibar quality m.136 to 137. Pepper is quiet, Singapore quality, m.37 to 37½; Penang m.35 to 35½.

EXCHANGE.—London, three months, m.20.36 to 20.30 per £.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

The past week has been a curious one for the Stock Exchange. Political news of any importance has not transpired, and therefore the tendency in general has been a firm one, but several times when news of minor importance came to hand a set of speculators tried to press values downward, but with rather little effect, as quotations very soon improved, and showed very distinctly the good disposition of the Stock Exchange. There exists no believing of a soon peace, but the meaning prevails that after the first decisive blow on the theatre of war negotiations will come forward, the more as Serbia keeps neutral and Austria therefore has no reason, at least for the present moment, to interfere in any respect. Whether this view of the case is a right one can only be shown by the future in the meanwhile the Stock markets are influenced by it. Quotations are:—

SHIPPING.

The spring rush being over, shipping on our river goes on at a midling scale. To the northward, up in the Gulf of Bothnia all the harbours are open now, and even the port of Archangel, in general the latest of all, no longer is obstructed by ice. At Cronstadt, a fortnight ago, so many vessels had accumulated that the port was no longer able to harbour them, and as lighterage was wanting many vessels had to wait for weeks for their cargos, and many claims for demurrage and refused demurrage no doubt will ensue. Of arrivals from the Far East we can report the Evelina, Samuel, from Bassein; Feliottas, Davies, from Rangoon, and Louise, Ramsen, from Bassein; of departures, the Fritz Reuter, Kopper, for Australia; Peter Godeffroy, Wendt, for Porte Adelaide; Joh. Wickhorst, Heyenga, for Hiogo; Adolph, Hupfer, for Shanghai, and Cordelia, Williams, for Batavia. The Edw. P. Bouverie, Evans, has arrived from Rangoon at Bremen. As on the berth for Far East are to be named:—Hesperia, s.s. for her usual route, to Singapore, &c. (to leave on the 25th of June); Louise and Georgine, Josau, for Singapore vid Penang; Conrad Hinrich, Scheuler, for Singapore; Palma, Binge, for Bangkok; Walter Siegfried, Holp, for Manila, and Niagara, Wischhusen, for Hong Kong.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JUNE 21.

The mortal remains of H.M. the Queen were interred yesterday at Delft with many demonstrations of sorrow and respect. Queen Victoria was represented by the Duke of Teck. The Bourse was closed.

The annual meeting of shareholders of the Netherlands-India Trading Bank took place yesterday. From the report I gather that, though the capital had been augmented to twelve millions, the profits made had been so large that a dividend of f.22.50 per share (equal to 9 per cent.) is available for distribution. On the 1st of April an agency was established at Samarang under the management of Mr. J. Walraven, and it has realised a net profit of f.40,000. Bills of exchange were discounted in Java to an amount of seven millions, and these operations had been effected without losses. Sugar had been consigned to the extent of 363,000 piculs, and the Company had further sold 40,000 pic. coffee, 900,000 kilograms tea, three-and-half millions kilograms tobacco, 6,000 pic. spices, and 8,000 pic. rice. Vanilla had been for the first time imported by the Company. The meeting passed the report, Mr. A. R. J. Cramerus was re-elected director, and as Commissaries were appointed Messrs. F. H. Bunge and R. Daniel Wolterbeck. The two vacant seats at the board in Batavia were given to Messrs. E. Boutmy and M. A. van Walcheren. Approval was expressed of the report of Mr. J. J. van Santez.

ARRIVAL.—June 18, at Hellevoet, from Samarang, Medea.

Monetary and Commercial.

In the Tea market there is little alteration to report, the dulness which has existed for some time past being unabated. There would seem, however, to be an undue apprehension of the market becoming largely oversupplied, as it must not be overlooked that only 10,000,000 lbs. from all quarters have been imported during the past three months, against a consumption of 45,000,000 lbs., while the stock of China Congou is not more than 35,000,000 lbs., and is admitted on all hands to consist chiefly of common to fine quality, it being an undoubted fact that good to finest Congou is really scarce, so that the new Congous will arrive to a bare market, and not only will Russia and other European countries draw their supplies from London, but the latest figures relative to the export bear favourable comparison to those of last year, say to 16th June, 1876-7; shipments were 40,000,000 lbs., to the Continent 4,500,000 lbs., against, according to Reuter's telegrams, to 16th inst., 29,000,000 lbs. to London, and no shipments whatever to the Continent. According to the latest advices at the different shipping ports a quieter feeling appeared to have set in, and it is quite certain good third and second crop teas, lately selling here at 8d. to 10d. per lb., must cause a decided check to production, for the Chinese cannot manufacture the tea for the foreign markets at these figures, and it is not likely buyers will be found to continue season after season shipping at a dead loss. The first crop is reported to cost from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. less than for some seasons past, and it is satisfactory to note this sign of healthier prospects. The Loudoun Castle and Gleneagles have arrived at Suez but their Teas cannot, under almost any circumstances, be on show here before the 5th or 6th proximo; the Glenartney is reported at Aden, so that her two predecessors will have about ten days', at least, advantage, and entire control of our market.

The tone of the Silk Market, as evidenced by the public sales, is somewhat better, and prices are now about on a par with what they were before the rise which took place a short time since, and was subsequently lost. The following quotations at the sales will give an idea of the present state of the market, say:—2 Beautiful Woman, 17s. 7d.; 3 do., 17s. 4d.; Red Peacock, 17s. 5d.; Black Lion, 17s. 2d.; 4 Dragon, 17s.; 1 Dancing bear, 18s.; 2 do., 17s. 4d.; 3 do. 16s. 8d.; 4 do. 16s. 1d. Taysaams were generally rather easier, especially, long reels which sold for 10s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. In Japans very little has been done. Cantons were rather stiffer. The latest advices from Italy state that the Silk crop this year is estimated at about 7 per cent. over that of last year. The first shipment of the new season's Silk from Canton, 400 bales, has been lost in the wreck of the Messageries Maritimes steamer Meikong.

The annual report of the Silk Association of America, which has just been issued, contains a valuable review of the fluctuations in silk from 1857 to the present time. The deficit in the European crop last year is stated to have been as much as two-thirds of the whole.

During last week the total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London was 3,240,048lb., of which 2,061,558lb. was for home consumption, 592,142lb. was removed coastwise, 530,520lb. was exported, 53,041lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 2,787lb. was for ships' stores. During the same period the sum received as duty was £51,539. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week:—Coffee, 499,489lbs.; cocoa, 61,653lbs.; tobacco, 361,593lbs.; cigars, 15,374lbs.; wine, 141,649 gallons; brandy, 27,451 gallons, and rum, 23,694 gallons.

In the Produce Markets the dulness continues, affecting nearly all articles, with the exception of Coffee, which has met with an active demand, under the influence of unfavourable reports regarding the Ceylon crop, and has risen in value. Sugar is quiet, and lower in value. Gambier, Hemp, Pepper and Tin have also declined. Other articles are quiet, but steady.

The annual report of the Ceylon Company, Limited, states that considerable profits have been realised by the Ceylon branch of the company's business during the year ending on the 31st March last, but the directors regret that the unfavourable result of the operations for the same period in Mauritius prevents them from recommending the declaration of a dividend. There is a balance of £64,821 to be carried forward.

At the meeting of the Eastern Telegraph Company, Limited, the Report was adopted, and the directors were authorised to duplicate the cable from Bona to Malta. A resolution was also passed, authorising the creation and issue of £200,000 Five per Cent. Debenture Bonds.

The directors of the Assam Tea Company propose to distribute a dividend of 25 per cent. on the 10th prox., which, with 10 per cent. already paid, makes 35 per cent. for the year.

The Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation has declared a dividend of 16 per cent. on the capital stock for the half-year ending at Midsummer. The Alliance Marine Assurance Company has declared a half-yearly dividend of 6s. per share on the consolidated shares.

The directors of the Maritime Insurance Company (Limited) have declared an interim dividend for the current half-year at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

India Council drafts to the usual amount of 26½ lacs (say £265,000) were tendered for at the Bank of England on the 20th inst., and were allotted at last week's minimum of 1s. 8 9-16d. per rupee, all tenders at that price for bills receiving in full, but those for telegrams on Bombay obtaining only 50 per cent. of applications. Calcutta obtained £150,716, Madras £14,284, and Bombay £100,000.

The price of Bar Silver is lower, a limited amount having been sold at 53½d. per oz. standard. Mexican Dollars are also lower, having been disposed of at 54½d. per oz.; there is, however, some amount held for higher rates.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—We have no improvement to report in our market, but the smaller quantity offered without reserve at auction has tended to steady prices, and in a few instances they showed a slight advance on the low rates established last week for common to fair kinds of Congou. Privately business continues very limited, the trade endeavouring to work off their stocks in the face of the large supplies of new season's Teas now close at hand. Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings show no change; common to good common have sold at a shade firmer prices; fair kinds remain as before; medium to good and fine show no change. In Pak Lin kinds the sales made have been at last week's prices. Black-leaf kinds: Common to good common have been well maintained; fair kinds sell slowly at about previous prices; medium to good, at auction, have supported last week's rates; fine show no change, and to close accounts of this season the prices accepted are comparatively low. New-make kinds: There has been some inquiry for fair to good kinds from 1s. to 1s. 2d. per lb.; further supplies of new season have been put on the market to-day. In Oolongs and Souchongs the only transactions have been at public sale at prices much the same as those of last sale. Scented Teas: Canton kinds both of Caper and Orange Pekoe remain dull of sale at former prices. In Foochow kinds business is limited by the small supply on offer. Green Teas show no improvement the bulk of the business continues to be at public sale without reserve at low and irregular prices. The public sales have been small, comprising only 10,981 packages, nearly the whole of which have been sold without reserve. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows, viz.:—

	1877. lbs.	1876. lbs.

SILK.

The market has undergone an unfavourable change, and prices of all descriptions have again given way. Deliveries, on the other hand, are better than they were last month, being from 1st to 20th inst. inclusive—China, 1,233 bales; Canton, 385; Japan, 125; Bengal, 44; total, 1,787 bales.

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Circular says:—The periodical public sales are concluded. The quantity offered was 160 bales Bengal, 1,600 bales China, 550 bales Japan, and 600 bales Canton Silk, with about 30,000 lbs. English Thrown Silk. About two thirds of the Raw Silk, and the bulk of the Thrown Silk, was printed to be sold without reserve. The total was thus smaller than has usually been offered, many holders preferring to wait in the hope that in the uncertain issue of the European crop something may yet turn up to help them. The result is perhaps better than might have been anticipated from the long-continued depressed state of the trade, but prices were very irregular—scarcely in any case exceeding recent quotations, and too generally falling short of them.

Native Ceylon has advanced to 86s. 6d. for good ordinary on the spot, and a large business has been done for arrival, but details have not transpired. The closing prices are, Plantation, triage 82s. to 93s., common grey to fine coloury small, 94s. to 101s. 6d., low middling 102s. to 105s., middling 105s. 6d. to 107s. 6d., good middling to fine middling 108s. to 111s. 6d., dull to fine bold 112s. to 118s. 6d., pea-berry 105s. to 113s. The only sales of other East India have been 165 bags Penang at 79s. 6d. to 80s., and 500 bags picked Bally Singapore at 78s. per cwt. The Dutch Trading Company's next public sale is announced for the 27th instant, when 108,500 bags Java will be offered.

CHINA STRAW PLAIT.—At auction 303 bales met a limited demand, and about one-half sold at the following rates, which show little change from last sales' prices; white coarse wide sorts, £6 17s. 6d. to £8 7s. 6d.; low medium to good medium, £10 5s. to £12 5s.; good narrow, £16 to £18; mottled, 2 lots coarse, £6 per bale.

CAMPHOR is steady; for arrival 100 tubs Japan per Jumna have been sold at 95s., and on the spot 50 tubs at 100s. per cwt.

CUTCH.—Privately small sales of Pegu have been made, including flag BB at 24s. 3d., and 50 boxes Elephant at 25s. per cwt.

COIR YARN.—The public sales, at which a fair supply was offered, were characterised by an absence of demand, and only about one-third found buyers. Of 90 tons Ceylon offered 10 tons sold, medium £28, fine even £35.

COCOANUT OIL has been steady. Cochin is quoted £42, Ceylon in pipes £37 15s., puncheons £38, and hogsheads £38 10s. to £39.

COTTON.—The activity noted last week has subsided, renewed dulness has prevailed, accompanied by small transactions, and the great part of the advance quoted last mail has been lost. Closing quotations are:—Tinnivelly 5d. to 5⅛d., fair to good; Western Madras 4⅞d. to 5¼d., fair to good; Northern ditto 5⅛d., good; Broach 6d., good; Bengal 4⅞d. to 4¾d., fair to good fair.

GUM COPAL.—606 bags hard Manila (from Rotterdam) bought in at 30s., except 86 bags blocky, which sold at 21s. 6d.; 5 cases fine soft yellow ditto sold at 26s.

GAMBIER.—There is less activity, but holders are firm. Retail sales of whole bales have been made at 20s. 3d. At auction 1,025 bags 64 bales cubes were bought in at 29s. 6d. to 30s., pressed 26s. 6d., except 70 bags rather blocky damaged, which sold, 1st class at 24s. 3d. to 25s.; 200 bags damaged cubes sold, 1st class and rather blocky at 25s. per cwt.

HEMP.—A very dull tone still prevails for Manila, and prices show a further downward tendency. The small supply at the periodical auctions met few offers, and was all bought in at £27 10s. to £30, except 20 bales, which sold at £29 10s. A few sales have been made privately at easy rates, on the basis of £29 for really fair.

HIDES.—Singapore Tanned Hides have been sold at a decline of ¼d. per lb., viz., average 13⅝lbs., first class at 8½d.

Privately about 500 bags have been sold, chiefly Singapore, at 3⅝d. to 3 11-16d.; also about 500 bags Penang, consisting chiefly of damaged, price not reported. White: At auction a total of 382 bags at auction went off slowly at rather lower rates; 161 bags Singapore sold without reserve at 6¼d. to 6⅜d. for fair, and 6½d. to 6⅝d. for fine; of 221 bags Penang 75 bags sold at 6d.

ORCHELLA.—52 bags Ceylon sold at 45s. to 46s.; and 114 ballots good flat Ceylon at 49s.

RICE.—Extreme quietude has prevailed in the market during the week, and scarcely any business has occurred on the spot. Sales of 4,500 bags Japan have been made at 10s. 6d. prompt one month, and 1,000 bags Japan have been sold at 10s. 6d. cash. The floating cargo per Granville, 886 tons Rangoon, February sailing, has been sold during the last day or two at 9s. 4½d. open charter.

SUGAR.—Early in the week there was rather more inquiry at the decline established last week, but as holders became firmer little business was effected. During the last few days the demand for all descriptions has again been limited, and the tone of the market at the close remains dull, prices being barely sustained. The following have been the sales of East Indian descriptions:—On the 15th inst. 360 baskets Native Penang ex a previous auction, sold at 20s. 6d. By private contract 500 tons Hainan sold at 20s., being 1s. lower. ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Quietness has continued to be the predominant feature of the market, buyers doing little beyond urgent requirements, but prices have been little affected, excepting where the encumbrance of large stocks has led to slight concessions. The tone at the close has verged upon dulness, the over-estimate of the sales of cotton during the week having had a prejudicial effect, and very little business has taken place in either yarns or goods. Producers do not quote less, but there is a tendency to easier prices in most quarters.

THE MISSIONARY SCHOOL BLACKHEATH.

THE foundation stone was laid in 1856 by the Earl of Shaftesbury. The building was intended to accommodate seventy-five pupils, and was opened in 1857. The cost was £7,000. The Institution became a decided success; the number of boys rapidly rose to seventy-five, and in addition to these there were in attendance as day pupils twenty of the sons of gentlemen of the neighbourhood, it being thought advantageous that the missionaries' children should mix freely with boys born and brought up in England. For some years past there has been a growing difficulty in obtaining a sufficient income to keep the Institution in working order (probably in consequence of a very general impression that one or two of the Missionary Societies supported the School), so that it has been found needful to reduce the number of pupils to fifty. A meeting of subscribers was lately called to consider the expediency of closing the School. The result, however, was a vigorous effort to raise the necessary funds to carry it on efficiently. The appeal was warmly responded to, and £1,000 was obtained. The debt has been paid off, some necessary repairs effected, and the hope is that the Home and School, so valued by our noble band of missionaries, will be raised to a state of efficiency equal to that of its best days.

The Committee is happy to have as the present Head Master the Rev. Edward Waite, M.A., a gentleman of high literary qualifications, while Mrs. Waite is a true mother to the boys. There is an efficient staff of masters assisting Mr. Waite, and every confidence is felt that such an education is being given as will afford entire satisfaction both to the parents and the subscribers. The Institution is wholly unsectarian in its character. The total number of boys received since 1852 is 307. Of these 176 were the sons of missionaries of the London Missionary Society; Baptist, 75; Presbyterian, 23 Wesleyan, Episcopalian, and others, 23.

The School is not intended for merely secular instruction; the spiritual interests of the boys are carefully attended to; they are diligently instructed in the truths of Holy Scripture, their conduct constantly watched over, and the whole of their school life pervaded by Christian influence. The Committee are aware that the character of education in general has been much improved in recent years, and being anxious not to fall behind any similar institution, have tested the progress of the boys periodically by Cambridge University Examiners and otherwise, with very satisfactory results. They desire to stimulate the diligence of the boys by offering for competition at least one scholarship—or by what shall be equivalent to a scholarship. Some of the lads show excellent capacities, which would justify the highest opportunities of culture.

The terms on which pupils were originally received were £15 per annum. The charge is now £18, which, considering the increased cost of provisions, &c., barely equal to the £15 of former times.

The Committee respectfully and urgently solicit the annual assistance of all friends who are able to help the Institution by their contributions. They cordially thank the liberal contributors to the Special Fund above referred to, and beg again to remind them and other friends of the School that it is entirely dependent upon the payments of the parents, and upon voluntary subscriptions, there being no endowment of any kind, or any other source of income, with the exception of an Annual Donation from the executors of a deceased friend to which, however, there is no legal claim.

Subscriptions received by Dr. Mullens, London Missionary Society; Rev. Joseph Beazley, 13, Paragon, Blackheath; A. H. Bateman, Esq., Devonshire House, Blackheath, S.E.; or by the Agents of this Paper at the ports of the Far East.

Summary of News from the Far East.

The cry from China is still that of misery and distress caused by the famine in the North. The accounts from Shantung and Chihli are again of a most harrowing description. A correspondent at Tientsin says that the famine in these regions is becoming more terrible in its ravages every day, and will continue to do so until the first crop of rice is produced. The Government aid unfortunately stopped just when it was beginning to be most needed. A further illustration of the improved tone in the intercourse between our representatives at Peking and the Chinese officials has been given by a communication from Prince Kung, to the effect that his own private residence and those of the other members of the Tsungli Yamen (the Chinese Foreign-office) will be open at all times to friendly visits from the members of the foreign diplomatic body at the capital. This is an undoubted proof of an improvement in the manner in which the representatives of foreign nations are regarded; as hitherto, although friendly relations were maintained by many of the ministers with the more important Chinese officials, this was looked upon in a purely personal light, and was not recognised as having any connection with their official intercourse, which was always kept within the limits of the strictest etiquette and formality. Li-Hung Chang had a narrow escape at a review which took place at Tientsin, when a number of shells exploded in his immediate neighbourhood. It is stated that the Chinese Government are at last about to take steps to develop the large coal resources of the country, and that three gentlemen were shortly to proceed up the Yangtsze to "prospect" on their behalf. The opening of the new ports continues to go on quietly. Messrs. Baker and Gill have arrived at Chungking, and have settled there without any trouble or disturbance. The difficulty at Ichang has quite subsided, and all is satisfactory at that place. From Hong Kong the most important news is in connection with the chop-dollar question. The Chinese complain of the amount of discount demanded by the banks on receiving chopped coins, and desire that weight of silver shall be adopted as a basis of transactions. The foreign firms oppose this concession, and have sent a memorial to the Governor on the subject. A violent thunder-storm took place on the 17th May, when the lightning struck a building near East Point.

From Japan the news concerning the civil war still continues very doubtful. Reinforcements had been demanded by the 7,000 troops sent to Kagoshima. The Government still continued its policy of keeping back the news, and native messages were again stopped on all the telegraph lines. Kido, one of the most trusted of the Mikado's advisers, was dangerously ill. The new National Bank was to be opened on May 20th. A rumour which had gained currency to the effect that the Minister of Finance was about to proceed to Europe to negotiate a loan is now stated to be without foundation.

From the Straits Settlements we learn that the Queen's birthday has been celebrated with the customary rejoicings at Singapore. There had been no event of importance either in the Settlements or the Native States.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 9th May, and we have advices via San Francisco fourteen days later, viz., to the 23rd May. The French mail from London, March 23, arrived out on the 10th May, the following P. and O. mail of March 30 was received on the 13th May, and the French mail of April 6 arrived out on the 21st May.

As usual, the accounts from the seat of war are of a conflicting and doubtful character, and the public, both native and foreign, are to a large extent in the dark as to the actual course of events. With respect to the main body of the rebels, who retired from before Kumamoto, they appear, according to the Japan Herald, to be holding their ground in the fastnesses of the mountains and in many places have achieved victories over the Imperial troops. Some reports even said that they had been joined by a fresh body of men from Satsuma. Even the 7,000 troops which were despatched to Kagoshima are not at their ease, and had demanded reinforcements, the rebels being encamped only a few miles from the town, in the neighbourhood of which skirmishes were taking place. The outskirts of Kagoshima have been burnt by the Imperialists. Meanwhile a small outbreak has taken place in Oita ken, and the news from Tosa is not reassuring. Itagake was commanded to disband the local militia he was raising, and to come to Kioto. The latter order he complied with, and, it is to be presumed, presented his petition for representative government; but he retired again to Tosa, and no news had been heard of the disbanding of the freshly-raised bands. The Government were again despatching reinforcements to the south-west, the last steamer taking 1,900 men, part of which are for Tosa. It is supposed to be the untoward turn which circumstances have taken which has interfered with the return of the Mikado to Tokio. Everything was arranged and publicly announced, when a notification was issued stating that the journey was postponed, the vague reason "on account of circumstances" being given.

The Yokohman Spring Races commenced on the 16th May; the weather was fine, the attendance of foreigners was very fair, but that of the native element was far below the average.

From the above-named paper we take the following items :—

The two Trans-Pacific Steamship Companies are making great efforts to secure the command of the American tea-carrying trade. This trade has of late years undergone several changes, amongst which the continued development of the Suez Canal traffic must not be overlooked. Thus in the season 1875-76 the shipments by the different routes were roughly as follows :—

San Francisco	lbs. 6,780,000
Suez Canal	„ 1,950,000
Sailing Vessel	„ 9,570,000

whilst in the season just concluded the relative proportions were :—

San Francisco	„ 5,750,000
Suez Canal	„ 4,400,000
Sailing Vessel	„ 6,230,000

It will thus be seen that while the Suez Canal traffic more than doubled, the other two routes show a large falling off. With a view of retaining the trade thus slipping from their grasp, the P. M. S. and O. and O. Companies have determined on offering shippers further facilities, and with this view have mutually made arrangements to run an extra steamer during the height of the tea season. With this object a steamer will leave San Francisco about every twelve days until September 1, whilst from Hong Kong they will run at an interval of seven to ten days until October 1. No doubt shippers will welcome this increased service, but we imagine that the feelings of their corresponding clerks, &c., will be exactly the reverse, as they are not at all likely to welcome an additional monthly mail. In the present day one never seems to get rid of these ever-recurring visitors, and we are tempted to sigh for the days of long ago, when two mails per month, via Shanghai, comprised our postal facilities with the outer world. The companies, however, despite of this, deserve great praise for their efforts to study the trade of the port, and we hope that they will find the speculation a lucrative one.

All the ports of Kagoshima being carefully guarded by Government war vessels, it is not surprising that the greatest anxiety is felt in the capital about the proceedings of Itagaki (ex-sangi), who calmly assures inquirers that the men he is raising in Kochi ken are simply to protect the province against stragglers who might come over from Kagoshima. In the first place, Itagaki now holds no Government appointment, and, consequently, if such an absurd proceeding as the raising of men for protection in Kochi ken were at all necessary, then officers of the Government would be appointed to perform this duty; but in any case Itagaki would have nothing to do with it whatever. Furthermore, whether the men raised by Itagaki (the Rishisha of Kochi ken) have actually presented a petition to the Government for a representative assembly or not, there can be little doubt that to procure this is the ultimate object of these men being brought together, and it is now feared on all sides that Itagaki is about to follow the steps of his colleagues, Yeto Shimpei, Mayebara, and Saigo Takamori, all of whom rose to exalted positions in their country from sheer force of merit, and when we reflect how little this country can afford to lose the services of such able men, we cannot but regret that drawing the sword is the only way they have of proving to the Government how great are the grievances of the people whose cause they have espoused. Since both Itagaki and Goto have resigned their positions, there is now no influential officer of Tosa in the Government, though this powerful province largely assisted to overthrow the Shogunate, and to re-establish the Mikado's temporal power.

It is now said that owing to the increased labour thrown upon the Finance Department by the Kagoshimi rebellion, the pensions of the kuazoku and shizoku will not be capitalised until August or September, instead of June, as was previously stated, and we are informed that yen 150,000,000 will be paid away in bonds, and over yen 80,000,000 in cash. The recipients will be made contented for the delay of two months, by having a liberal interest paid to them for waiting. The Government cannot afford, however, to trifle with them in this matter too far. The expenses of the rebellion will be in a measure paid for, because all the Kagoshima samurai therein engaged will forfeit all claims for pensions, whether capitalised or not, from the Government. Therefore, the amount to be paid away by the Government will be much less than was estimated last year.

The German and French Ministers, with their suite, visited the Japanese Arsenal at Koishikawa, Tokio, on the 13th inst., where they examined the premises, and complimented the Japanese officers connected with the establishment upon the excellent manner in which everything was managed. Before leaving they were hospitably entertained at a banquet given by the Government.

The New National Bank established by the kuwazoku will be opened on the 20th inst. The directors are Mori, Tokugawa, Yamaguchi, Kuroda, and Ikeda.

Our import market shows but a limited amount of business. In Silk, owing to news from Europe, some little activity was shown, but the rise in prices has had the effect of checking transactions. Large settlements have been made in Tea, and prices have declined. The quality of the new crop is said to be superior to that of last year.

The Echo du Japon of 16th May contains the following : "The French Mail of this morning took away one of the most honoured, most esteemed and most popular of our fellow residents, Mr. E. Piquet, the former silk inspector to the house of Messrs. Walsh, Hall and Co., who returns to Europe after a residence of fifteen years in Japan. The departure of Mr. Piquet leaves a blank in our community which will not readily be filled. The correctness of his judgment and his wide experience constituted him a competent authority on questions of public interest, in which he was always ready to take his part. Whenever it was necessary to find some one who would devote his time and his best energies to such questions, popular choice immediately selected him as the man who would shrink from no task, however arduous. Mr. Piquet possessed many firm friends in Yokohama, who will feel his loss deeply. The Japan Mail found in him, on all that pertains to commercial statistics, more especially with regard to the article of silk, an assiduous and conscientious collaborator whose authority was unquestionable, and that journal will keenly feel his loss, as will the Silk Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

TOKIO.

The Tokio Times, referring to the Nobles' School, says :—This promising educational foundation, to which we called attention several weeks ago, is now nearly in condition to begin active work. Examinations for admission are already in progress, and in a very few days instruction will informally commence. Since we saw the building in the early spring a great change for the better is manifest in the general appearance of the school, both in-doors and out. The rooms have a very comfortable look, and seem moreover to be well adapted to the purposes designed. From the cupola a fine view may be obtained of the city. The grounds surrounding the edifice are rapidly assuming those characteristic beauties of Japanese horticulture for which the country is so widely famous.

The scholars, for the present, are to be taken from the kuwazoku alone, though, as we stated in our former article, the advantages of the institute will ultimately be afforded to all. At present about one hundred are to be admitted, and this number will be increased after further accommodation. They will represent all classes now eligible, of both sexes, and ranging in age from six to twenty. Work on the dormitories has only been begun, and it will be autumn before any large attendance can be provided for. On this account the school will not be formally opened till toward the close of the year, when it is supposed that the occasion will be honoured by the presence of the Imperial patrons of the foundation.

Thirteen teachers have been engaged to supply immediate needs. Of these, twelve are graduates of the Tokio Normal school, who will instruct in accordance with the theories there inculcated. The other gentleman has been connected heretofore with the Mom Bu Sho, and will pay more particular attention to advanced pupils. The question of the employment of foreign instructors is under consideration, and several names, prominent in educational circles, are spoken of in connection with such engagements; but any announcement at present would be premature.

It has been stated by Japanese, and copied into foreign, papers, that the cost of the whole school, with building, grounds, apparatus, &c., will amount to one hundred and thirty thousand yen. This seems to be rather an exaggeration. The cost of the main edifice, complete, has been twenty-eight thousand yen, and it is not probable that the entire expense incident to the full equipment of the school will bring the total beyond one hundred thousand yen.

OSAKA.

A correspondent of the Hiogo News writes:—

Whatever may have been the effects of the Southern Rebellion at the other chief centres of population, hitherto we have been very quiet at Osaka. And were it not for the incessant click of the sewing-machines of the out-workers in the employ of the army contractors, and the omnipresent blue-gowned and white bandaged convalescents in every street, these might be mistaken for "piping times of peace." In fact, owing to the cessation of the bugling which before the war was so pertinaciously practised in the military quarter, the vicinity of the Castle is much quieter than it was three months ago.

Last week, however, was by no means a quiet one. One day a policeman was, so it is reported, killed by some soldiers in the Matsushima, and on Saturday a still more bloodthirsty deed was perpetrated. At a late hour, five men armed with swords broke into the house of one of the numerous pawnbrokers who live in the Honden, the well-known thoroughfare to the south of the Concession. Many of these so-called pawnbrokers are reputed "fences," but this one was known as a miser, and was credited with possessing considerable wealth. Be this as it may, the savage intruders, on his refusing to disclose the whereabouts of his hoard, cut him down, killing him on the spot. Another man who was living in the house barely escaped with his life, being slashed about the head and body in a dangerous manner. All that the ruffians succeeded in getting was 38 yen, and it was the smallness of the amount which made them so savage.

The statement of passenger and goods traffic on the Kobe-Kioto Railway for the week ending May 13, 1877, is as follows:—First class, 80; second class, 705; third class, 36,298; total, 37,083. Amount received for passengers, yen 10,704·95; for luggage and parcels, yen 38·395; for goods, yen 443·564; total amount, yen 11,532·464. Corresponding period of last year, yen 5,189·502.

CHINA.

PEKING AND TIENTSIN.

The Viceroy Li has had a narrow escape at Tientsin from wounds or perhaps death. He was inspecting a battery of horse artillery armed with Krupp guns. After witnessing the usual manœuvres, which were creditably performed, a few rounds of percussion shell were fired across the marshes which lie between the city wall and the great arsenal, when the wind suddenly shifted and a cloud of dust arose. The Viceroy gave orders for the exercises to be stopped, and for the battery to return to quarters. He then went to a shed for shelter. He had scarcely reached the shed when a percussion shell exploded, and in an instant all the rest of the ammunition, about forty twelve-pound shells and the same number of cartridges, each weighing a pound and-a-half, also exploded. Six men were blown into small pieces, and over forty artillery men were wounded. We hear some of the wounded men have since died. The affair caused much sensation, but it has been kept as secret as possible. It is said that the disaster was brought about by some mismanagement of the delicate percussion apparatus attached to the metal fuse.

The famine in the destitute regions is becoming more terrible in its ravages every day, and will continue to do so till the earth has time to produce its first crop. The Government aid stopped just when it was beginning to be most needed. The poor refugees who came to Tientsin were sent away in March, to destitute homes, and in many cases to unsown fields (for they had no wheat to sow last autumn), and no seed for the spring sowing. Many of them, after being carried through the winter, have been left to perish at the last.

From the Lau Ling district there comes the most distressing account of the terrible ravages of disease, consequent upon the famine. Rev. Mr. Hall, writing from thence, begs for more aid, and speaks of some most heartrending scenes he has witnessed. Other places are equally destitute.

We learn from Peking that Prince Kung has issued an official notification to the effect that his private residence, as well as the private residences of his colleagues in the Tsung-li Yamen, will in future be open at any time to friendly visits on the part of the representatives of the Treaty Powers in the Capital.

Mr. Eli T. Shepard, late U. S. Consul at Tientsin, has resigned that post in order to accept an appointment in the Japanese Foreign-office.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 13th May; the French mail from London March 23 was received on the 7th May, and the following P. and O. mail of 30th March arrived out on the 11th May.

A Naval Court, to inquire into the circumstances of the wreck of the British barque Serpent, on the Shalutien shoal, in the Gulf of Pechili, has been held before Commander Church, of H.B.M.'s gunboat Curlew. The circumstances of the wreck were fully gone into, and the captain of the Serpent, Mr. Abel, was reprimanded, but not deprived of his certificate. The Serpent, as she lay on the shoal, has been sold by public auction to Mr. James Watts, a pilot at Taku, for the low sum of $30. With difficulty he managed to tow the hull, as already announced, into Taku, where it is to be placed as a pontoon.

The China Navigation Company's steamer Tientsin was aground throughout the whole of one day just below the Harbour Master's jetty. She left the Company's Wharf about one o'clock in the morning, bound for the North, and when in the usual channel, opposite the Hongkew Wharf, a thick fog came on, and suddenly she gave a sheer and ran hard and fast aground at the place indicated above. A portion of her cargo was lightered, and she floated off.

There was an unusually large attendance at the meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society, and an unusually interesting set of papers. Dr. Macgowan read a short but very suggestive note on the alleged use of opium in China during the Yuen dynasty, a theory which rests upon the testimony of an old book whose title Dr. Macgowan had been unable to discover, but which figures upon the Chinese Index Expurgatorius. According to this authority, the cultivation of opium had been encouraged by the Mongol Emperors to such an extent that when Kao-tszu, the first Emperor of the Ming dynasty (Hung-wu) came to the throne he implored Heaven in a most solemn and impressive manner to help him root out the growing vice. The responsive omens are said to have been favourable; but under the régime of the Tsings the growth of opium is represented as having again sprung up and increased. It will be noticed that the insinuation here is the reverse of complimentary to the foreign dynasties, and the book was interdicted in consequence. Unfortunately, however, for the prosecution of the inquiry, the book cannot be traced—or has not been, hitherto; but, as the meeting agreed, Dr. Macgowan's little paper offered the very interesting though of course not conclusive suggestion that the odium of introducing opium into China does not, after all, rest with the Honourable East India Company. Dr. Edkins then read a most valuable essay upon the variation of the compass as observed in China during the 9th, 11th, and 12th centuries. Dr. Ross, of Moukden, gave an account of some very remarkable superstitions which are current in Manchuria.

Messrs. Baber and Gill reached Chungking on the 8th April. They have engaged a house, in which they seem comfortably settled. There had been no hot weather up to date (April 14), and winter clothes were still in vogue. Very little sun, but a great deal of mist and fog. Letters and papers were reaching them regularly. The voyage up was not marked by any adventure of importance, and occupied sixty days from Hankow.

The first merchant steamer for Ichang, the Ta-yew-fêng, left Hankow on the 22nd April, and arrived here again on the 3rd May, without having met with any accidents on her journey. The Tunsin left on the 3rd May for the same port, with Mr. Warrick, the C. N. Co.'s Agent at Ichang, on board, and a hulk, which is to be that gentleman's dwelling-place, in tow. H.M.S. Sheldrake followed on the 5th May with Mr. W. King, H. B. M. Consul, and Mr. Octavius Johnson, Consular Assistant.

The Celestial Empire announces that all the finer kinds of tea prepared specially for the Russian market, and known as Karavansky Tchai, will this year go to Europe via the Urals, and no direct shipments will be made to Odessa. The purchases to be made in Hankow in the coming season for Russia will be much smaller than usual; the losses suffered by importers in the past two or three years have been prodigious, and the unsold stocks are large. We hear of Moscow merchants giving as limits 50 per cent. of the absurd prices current in May, 1876; so that it is certain some moderate counsels have reached Hankow, but not before they were wanted. A Russian correspondent speaks of even 40 per cent. being a common loss on last year's teas, and we have not heard of a single shipment being profitable to its owners.

A petition has been presented by certain Chinese to H.B.M.'s Consul, seeking to recover compensation from the steamer Haining, belonging to the China Coast Steam Navigation Company for having run down a junk during a recent voyage from Tientsin.

The new Taoutai pro tem., Liu, has been paying a round of visits among the foreign Consuls. He is described as having a rather European cast of countenance, and as speaking the mandarin dialect with a pronounced Ngan-hwuy brogue.

The Kweichow correspondent of the Courier writes that the extraordinary powers lately granted to the Governor-General are causing a great deal of anxiety to the principal military officials who took part in the late insurrection, and it is feared they may rebel against the Imperial rule once more.

There have been some heavy thunderstorms at Kweichow. The lightning struck the Powder Magazine, which exploded, and did considerable damage, and it is feared some lives have been lost.

Two proclamations have been issued by the Governor of Soochow. One was intended to abolish the opium dens which abound in the city, and the other prohibits the use of small cash.

It was rumoured there were three gentlemen in the settlement who are about to proceed up the Yangtsze to "prospect" for coal mines on behalf of the Chinese Government.

The Rev. Canon Scott has read himself in at the Cathedral of Holy Trinity, and was formally instituted and assigned a stall by the Dean.

The last news from Ichang was that everything was quiet, and all seemed going on satisfactorily.

The North China Daily News has the following on the opium trade :—

So long ago as 1838 the Chinese Government of the day found itself unable to take any effective measures against the use of opium in China. In Captain Hall's "Cruise of the Nemesis," published in 1844, we find the following remarks :—"The more numerous were the edicts which were issued against it, the greater did the craving for the forbidden luxury, amounting almost to a national mania, go on increasing day by day. And if the great despotic ruler over hundreds of millions of people, whose very word was law, still found himself totally unable to exclude the drug (even under the severest prohibitions) from his own palace, is it to be wondered at that all his strongest measures have failed in withdrawing the mass of the nation from the temptation?" Since that time the cultivation of opium has become one of the staples of Chinese industry; an enormous capital is invested in the traffic, and the Government itself draws no inconsiderable portion of its revenues from the drug. Customs dues, and likin, and growers' taxes are levied in all the provinces, not as a matter of private caprice, but under Imperial or provincial regulations; and by a scale of differential duties sometimes amounting to as much as 50 per cent. in favour of Chinese opium, the home-grown is openly fostered as against the imported article. Now if the Chinese Government of 1838 found itself, with all its efforts, utterly unable to check the use of opium even in high places, is there any hope that the Government of 1878 will render any more effective opposition? Since 1838 the cultivation has widely spread, its legality has been officially recognised, and the legal status of the growers and dealers acknowledged. In 1838 matters were in a transition state, the growth and traffic were both denounced in high quarters, yet no effective steps could be taken in the face of the general desire for the drug. Do the anti-opium agitators desire to restore the state of affairs then prevailing at the Court and throughout the Empire? It would be well that they should mind what that state was before urging further their opposition to the present condition of matters. If they do not desire to restore affairs to their then condition, of what avail is their crusade against Indian opium? We know on the best authority that the imported drug forms but a small proportion of that used in China, and that the native supply could readily accommodate itself to the demand were the entire import cut off.

Yet even so partial, or rather utterly ineffective, a measure towards the end put forward as the sole raison d'être of the Anti-Opium Association could not be carried into effect without disturbing, not only the revenues of British India—and entailing the ruin of those whose connection with the trade is perfectly honest and honourable—but also enormous vested interests having no more connection with the trade than the ordinary interdependence of commerce. If the growth of opium, again, in Bengal were to be interdicted, would the British Government have any show of reason or justice in forcing on the dependent native states a similar prohibition? Yet, unless the growth of opium in native states were put an end to, even the small measure of stopping the supply from Bengal would be utterly ineffective towards the end in view. Again, if the British Government hesitated to commit the monstrous injustice of robbing the dependent states to forward the chimerical ideas of a body of philanthropists, it would still be on the horns of a dilemma. Either it should continue the transit dues as they are, in which case it would still be deriving a revenue from the drug, or, in case of its abolishing those dues, it would be directly encouraging a trade which it is asked, on moral grounds, to suppress. On all sides, therefore, difficulties arise in marking out any line of policy which would recommend itself to practical men who at the same time were desirous of abolishing or modifying the trade. Those which we have touched on have left out of view the commercial aspect of the question; but this is no less worthy of due consideration, and should naturally have suggested itself to those mercantile men who have allowed their names to appear in connection with the organisation.

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail extend to the 19th May; the French mail from London April 6 arrived out on the 12th May.

The old difficulty resulting from the abominable habit of the Chinese of "chopping" dollars has turned up in a somewhat serious form. The banks, to protect themselves against dollars defaced in this manner, that is having the names of the various Chinese hongs through whose hands they pass indented upon them till their faces are often entirely destroyed, have refused to take any but clean dollars, except at a considerable discount. Against this the Chinese, who are themselves the origin of the trouble, now protest, and they ask that weight may be adopted as the basis for money transactions, irrespective of coinage, or the mutilated condition of the dollars. The foreign firms are on the whole opposed to any such concession, and a memorial, addressed to the Governor, and giving expression to this opposition, has been sent round the colony, and received numerous signatures. It is evidently issued in opposition to the one from the Chinese community, advertised a few weeks ago. Now that the question of a coinage has been referred home, and the Chinese Government seem to be contemplating the establishment of a Mint (an event which is bound to happen sooner or later), it is to be hoped that the vexed questions of currency will soon receive a solution. The China Mail, referring to the subject, says that from facts in its possession it is only fair to say that the framers of the memorial before us do not do the framers of the memorial from the Chinese community justice when they intimate that it mainly emanated from "certain opium merchants and others." It believes that the opium merchants had no more to do with the production of the memorial than other classes of Chinese merchants. Referring to the Blockade Question the Mail says that many conjectures have naturally been indulged in since the arrival of the new Governor, as to the views he will take on the various public questions in this colony, that are still sur le tapis. The inaugural speech of his Excellency was in every way a promising one, but of course he did not tell us in it what his ideas are in regard to, for instance, the Blockade Question, the Praya Reconstruction Scheme, and the Special Fund, or the Water Scheme. It is more than probable that his Excellency did not possess any opinions at all on these subjects at the time, and had he ventured to manufacture a few for the occasion, he might have found himself at some future day in the uncomfortable position of having to repudiate them. We hear, however, that his Excellency is likely to fully meet the views of the community with respect to public works. In regard to the Blockade Question it may prove serviceable if we give a brief sketch of the existing position of the matter :—At the present moment the residents in Hong Kong are awaiting the appointment of the commission provided for the Chefoo Convention, and which is to consist of a British Consul, an officer of the Hong Kong Government, and a Chinese official of equal rank.

From the China Mail we also take the following items of news :—

Before proceeding with the usual business of the Supreme Court on the 18th May the Hon. the Attorney-General moved the admission of Mr. Ng Choy on the rolls of the Supreme Court to practise in the Courts of the Colony. He had filed the certificate of identity and two affidavits, one by himself, and the other by Mr. Francis, as to his being the same person as described in the certificate of call. The learned Attorney-General had much pleasure in moving for the admission of the first person of the applicant's race who had become an English barrister. The Chief Justice then said: I have looked through the papers and am satisfied that they are correct. They are not absolutely necessary in the present motion, as Mr. Ng Choy is well-known here, and is so notorious—I mean the word in its good sense—and I have, therefore, much pleasure in admitting him on this motion. I am glad to see a Chinaman seeking to run in a race the most highly intellectual in the world. I am glad to see that a Chinaman who has been educated at St. Paul's College, and who for years acted as interpreter in the police court, has become a member of the English Bar. In England every office becomes open to talent without favour or affection. A distinguished American statesman has become and now is an ornament to the English Bar. All the Bar would gladly hail the time when a Chinaman shall distinguish himself as much as the eminent counsel to whom I have referred. I have seen stranger things happen. I have much pleasure (addressing Mr. Ng Choy) in admitting you.

We observe that the new Chinese Insurance Company, called the On Tai, notifies that it will commence business on and after the 13th May. The rates charged and the bonus returned will be the same as those current in the foreign offices here. The first call of the subscribed capital of the Company is to be paid in on or before the 12th May, after which date interest will be charged at the rate of 33 cents per $1,000 each day, or nearly 12 per cent. per annum.

A thunderstorm of some severity passed over the city on the 17th May, and some little damage was caused. The lightning struck the China Sugar Refinery at East Point, the point of contact being the original belfry of the late Mint, situated just behind Mr. Dickie's house. Fortunately no further damage was done beyond the shattering of one of the belfry pillars and the breaking of a few panes of glass. No one was hurt, though the incident naturally caused considerable alarm. The lightning also struck a native junk anchored off the Harbour Master's Office, splitting the main-mast nearly to the deck, and cutting the upper part of it right off. The junk was loaded with native pottery, and a considerable portion of it has of course come to grief. Strange to say, although there were a number of people employed on board of her, not one was injured.

The following account of the average amount of bank-notes in circulation in Hong Kong, during the month ending 30th April, is published in the Gazette:—

Banks.	Average Amount.
Oriental Bank Corporation	$267,522
Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London & China	844,452
Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China ...	380,905
Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation...	1,898,380
Total	$3,391,349

We note the arrival from Swatow of Mr. H. A. Giles, of H.M. Consular Service, who proceeds to Canton as Vice-Consul at that port. He relieves Mr. C. T. Gardner, who goes to Shanghai, after several years' residence at Canton, where his high character has gained him many friends.

The Spanish Government has recently created at Amoy a Consulate General for China, and Mr. Ortuno has been appointed to the post. We may add that Mr. Ortuno was H.C.M.'s Consul in this Colony from 1867 to 1872.

Gambling is said to be very rife in Shum Shui Po and Chungchow Island, in Chinese territory, and Colonel Lai, the Commandant at Kowloong City, under whose jurisdiction these places come, has issued a proclamation, threatening the gamblers with severe punishment.

The following notifications appear in the Gazette:—That his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor has appointed provisionally and until further notice the Hon. C. B. Plunket to act as Official Trustee. Her Majesty's birthday shall be kept in this Colony on Thursday, the 24th May. Ships conveying Chinese passengers under the provisions of Ordinance No. 5 of 1874 will not be allowed to carry them on the upper or weather deck between the 1st June and 15th October inclusive.

The remarks which were made by H.E. Kuo at the deputation from the Anti-Opium Society have been the subject of some criticism in the Chinese press. The Mail says with regard to them :—

There was one little argument against opium-smoking advanced by the Chinese Envoy to England, when the deputation from the Anti-Opium Society waited upon him, which was certainly ingenious, and, we believe, original. "Now that the Chinese Government has taken the step of sending envoys to England, and intends sending representatives to other countries," said Kwo, "it is not likely that the people will remain at home, but will spread over the world, and if they continue to indulge in opium smoking the vice will spread with them. It is therefore important to take steps to stamp it out. It would undoubtedly be a bad thing for England if her curse of drink were supplemented by that of opium-smoking, but it scarcely follows that Englishmen or any other nationality would be so ready to adopt that evil. Opium-smoking seems to have special allurements for Chinamen. In India, where the drug is chiefly produced, we hear little or nothing of the evils of opium-smoking. It is at the same time interesting to note that such a high Chinese official as Kwo, who is probably not so far advanced in his ideas as many of his official confreres, is convinced that his countrymen are destined to spread all over the world. There was a time when no Chinese was permitted to settle beyond the borders of his own country, and even now, we believe, there is a law in force forbidding the transportation of offenders beyond Chinese territory.

FOOCHOW.

Mr. C. E. Porter, an American citizen, formerly a pilot of this port, was brought into town on the 6th May, a prisoner in the custody of Chinese soldiers, having been arrested by Chen, the chief of the Committee of Foreign Trade. It appears that Mr. Porter entered into a contract some time previously with a company of native fish merchants to go outside Sharp Peak, on the Company's fishing grounds, to superintend the protection of their nets,—the Company having lost much property through the thievish propensities of neighbouring lawless fishermen. It is asserted that some trumped-up charge made to the Chinese authorities in the interest of these piratical fishermen led to the arrest of Porter, together with some natives who were employed with him. Instead, however, of immediately handing over Mr. Porter to the custody of the United States Consul they conveyed their prisoner through the Foreign Settlement to the Yamen of the Trade Committee in the City; but in the meantime the United States Consul called upon the Committee to deliver Mr. Porter to him—pending an inquiry into the case—and this was promptly done.

The twentieth vessel built at the Mamoi Arsenal was about to be launched. Some interest is taken in this vessel from the fact of it being the first composite craft that has been constructed at the establishment in question. It has, moreover, been built entirely by Chinese.

We hear that a tiger cub is on exhibition in the Settlement. It was caught in the Ting Chow Prefecture of this province on the borders of Kiangse, and presented by H.E. the Fantai to Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co.'s Compradore.

The Futai has returned from Formosa, after an absence of several months. His Excellency is in bad health, and unable to transact official business.

The s.s. Conquest, being the first trading vessel from Wenchow to this port, arrived here on May 6, and returned to the same place on the 8th.

Mr. Pedder, late officiating British Consul at this port, has left for Europe.

MAY 18.

In consequence of the very heavy rains which have recently fallen the Canton or Pearl river has overflowed its banks, and caused thereby in many parts of the country through which it directs its course considerable damage to several newly-planted rice-crops. The current is so strong as to sweep almost everything before it. Thus, for example, on the 14th instant, a sampan when in the act of conveying passengers to the river steamboat Ichang was dashed by the violence of the waters against the paddle-wheel of the steamer in question and capsized. Four persons who were in her, one of whom had, not more than a week ago, been married at Hong Kong, met with a watery grave. Again, a small steam-launch belonging to the Mandarins was a few days since carried by the force of the current against H.M.S. Fly, and upset. Once more, during a very severe storm with which this city was visited yesterday morning, two boats came into collision, and ten men, I regret to add, who were serving as seamen on board one of the craft in question, fell into the river and were drowned. This melancholy accident occurred in close proximity to the Custom-house. Further, on Wednesday last, a ferry boat, while crossing from the Honam to the Canton side of the river, was struck by a squall and upset. Of the few passengers which she contained, one, a youth of nine years of age, was drowned. It is also reported here that not more than ten days ago a very small hamlet, which was situated near to Shek-Wung on the banks of the eastern branch of the Canton river, was literally swept away by the rolling waters. Not less than fifty persons are said to have perished on this occasion. The U.S. gunboat Ashuelot is here. Yesterday she was visited by his Excellency the Viceroy of the two southern Kwangs, who, on leaving her, was honoured by a salute of three guns. H.M.S. Fly returned to Hong Kong on Monday last.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Siam Advertiser says .—

When the present Minister of Foreign Affairs was an officer in Petchaburi much of the taxes of the province was used in making roads, and in opening up the province generally, and the town of Petchaburi in particular. It was a favourite resort of Phra Chaum Klaw, the present King's predecessor and father. The King built a palace on a mountain there, and invested money in improving the market. Several prominent officials built country seats, and the place was a pleasure resort. It has lost its prestige in this last respect, but perhaps has] lost none of its value as a productive progressive province.

It seems now to be taking the lead in progress in opening up advantages for school education, both in the male and female departments, and in laying the base of sound education by spiritual instruction, which is conspicuously blessed by the great head of the Church. No other town has gone before the Presbyterian Mission there in missions to the Siamese. The missionaries at Petchaburi have attended to their own specific work in a spirit of faith and fidelity, and God has blessed them. They have recently received a token of the King's favour. He has donated to the mission a thousand ticals ($600) towards completing their school buildings. The donation will be an admirable investment for the progress of Siam. The Presbyterian Mission has expended tens of thousands for the good of Siam. It is meet that the Siamese should help them in their arduous and consecrated labours.

BORNEO.

SARAWAK.

The following intelligence is extracted from the Sarawak Gazette of the 19th May :—

On the 5th May H.M.S. Moorhen, with his Excellency the Governor of Labuan on board, anchored in the river opposite the Astana, on a short visit to Kuching, remaining to the 9th May. A State dinner was given on the 8th to Governor Ussher and the Captain and Officers of the Moorhen, and the Gazette expresses the hope that such visits may be frequent in the future.

H.I.M.S. Christoforo Colombo, Captain Count Canevaro, arrived in Sarawak waters on the 15th May, but, from her great draught, could not go up the river further than Pinding. On the 16th their Highnesess the Rajah and Ranee paid a visit on board, and were received with a salute of twenty-one guns and the usual honours. The salute was returned on the morning of the 17th, the Italian flag being hoisted at the flagstaff across the river. Count Canevaro and the officers of the Christoforo

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 27th May; the French mail from London, April 20, was received on the 21st May. We take the following items of intelligence from the Straits Times:—

Her Majesty's birthday was observed as a holiday in the Government offices on Thursday, the 24th May. In the morning H.M.'s 74th Highlanders paraded at Tanglin Barracks and fired a feu de joie. During the day all the flagstaffs and the shipping in harbour were gaily decorated with flags. In the evening H.E. the Administrator and Mrs. Anson held a reception at Government House in honour of the day, which was numerously attended, and which was followed by a dance and supper, the band of H.M.'s 74th Highlanders being present. Owing to mail exigencies, the banks and mercantile offices held the previous day as a close holiday.

All is quiet in the Peninsula, so far as the public know, and a deadly dulness, savouring much of Penang or Malacca, seems to have overspread officialdom, which seals up intelligence more effectually than red-tape or sealing-wax, about all matters small and great, although perhaps there is really nothing to tell about anything. The chiefs of Perak are still awaiting the decision as to their place of deportation; and the chief event may almost be said to be a robbery to the extent, it is said, of $100,000 worth of jewellery and other property from the residence of the late State prisoner—but now liberated on his own recognisances—Rajah Mahdie, of Salangore fame. The impression is spreading that, from ignorance, considerable injustice has been done to this chief, and that he is a man of straightforward manly character, of no mean abilities, besides being of no hostile disposition towards British supremacy, although he did order the Pluto and Rinaldo to be fired upon in 1871. He is of the blood royal of Salangore, being, it is said, a maternal nephew of the late Sultan, and, as such, having a strong claim to the Sultanship, in accordance with ancient Menangkabow, that is, Malay custom. He has always been consistent and pertinacious in maintaining his rights, and he certainly has shown his good sense by yielding to superior force and keeping good faith with Government, while still sticking stoutly to what he conceives to be his own rights.

The war in Europe between Russia and Turkey occupies a good deal of attention, and its incidents, as briefly told by Reuter's telegrams, are watched with keen interest by the whole community, including the Natives, more particularly the Mohammedan portion. It is almost needless to say that the general sympathy is with Turkey, and it is a fact that the part England may play in it will have considerable effect throughout the Peninsula.

The Dutch Extradition case, which has been alluded to in several previous summaries, is still undecided; H. E. the Administrator, assisted by Captain Walshe, investigated the matter, and decided that the Arab trader must be given up to the Dutch authorities, provided an application, which is to be made by counsel on his behalf to Acting Chief Justice Ford on his return from Penang, is unfavourable. Meanwhile, the trader is in custody.

The hotel accommodation of Singapore is shortly to be increased and improved. A large three-storied hotel is to be built for Mr. C. Emmerson in Beach-road, next Raffles Institution, and facing the sea, and it will be ready in the course of a year.

Market Reports.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Business had been again limited. Yarns 16/24 continued in fair demand, especially the lower spinnings, and 28/32 were apparently attracting more attention. Grey Shirtings were very dull, and prices easier. Indigo Shirtings had somewhat improved, but Turkey Reds were still very neglected. Velvets continued fairly saleable at a slight concession. Woollens generally were very inanimate, Mousselines and Blankets being the only goods for which much demand existed. There had been no improvement in Metals; business had been exceedingly small, holders refusing the low offers made HIOGO-OSAKA.—The Chamber of Commerce Circular says:—Business in most departments has been confined within the narrowest limits, and the tendency of prices is still downwards. Cottons: Shirtings continued depressed, holders generally refusing to accept the low offers made. The demand for T-Cloths and Grey Drills has also subsided. Black Velvets are weaker, while large sales of Turkey Reds and Victoria Lawns have been made at, however, lower prices. Woollens and Worsteds: Plain Orleans are still neglected. Assorted Lustres have, however, been in some request. Cloth continues in demand for Government requirements. Black Lastings and Italians have sustained a further decline. Large deliveries of Mousselines have taken place, at slightly lower rates. Metals are dull, at unchanged rates.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Cornabé and Co.'s Circular says:—There has been no material alteration in the tone of our market, which remains in a very depressed state. In Cotton Goods we have nothing of interest to note. The transactions during the month have been unusually small, and at low and unremunerative rates. Metals: The receipts of Lead have not been excessive, but the market is quiet, with prices much the same as last quoted. Iron remains unaltered.

HANKOW.—The business passing had been very small. Cotton Goods.—Grey Shirtings: The only sale reported consisted of 500 pieces 8½lbs. Cloth "Lion" chop at Tls. 1.36 per piece. Lead was unchanged in value, and a small business had been done at Tls. 5.90 per picul.

SHANGHAI.—Piece Goods: Without much improvement to notice in manufactures there had appeared more desire on the part of buyers to operate. The prices offered for English fabric were still in most cases lower than Manchester cost, but good American Cottons had been more sought after. 8-4 lbs. Grey Shirtings Dewhurst's "Eagles" maintained previous quotations, and sales of sound had been placed at Tls. 1.88, a parcel mildewed being reported settled at Tls. 1.84. "Horse and Jockey" were still valued at Tls. 1.68, but commoner grades were all lower, and for them no very reliable quotation could be given; 6 and 7 lbs. were unchanged in value, and in very little request. Some inquiry had been made at the close for cheap Heavy Shirtings at about Tls. 1.90 to 2.00 per piece, but the selection of quality for this price was difficult. White Shirtings over 64-reed had been asked for, and some business effected at previous quotations. T-Cloths attrated little attention, and sales had been on a lower basis of value, 7 lbs. 15 × 15 from Tls. 0.92 to 1.00.; ordinary 7 lbs. Mexican at Tls. 1.12 to 1.15; good at Tls. 1.20, and best "Hand" and "M.T." chops from Tls. 1.35 to 1.37½ per piece, a few best 8 lbs. changing hands at Tls. 1.65 per piece. Drills, ordinary English 14 lbs. had declined fully 1 mace in value, but American Drills had been wanted and found buyers from Tls. 2.70 to 2.80 per piece. In Fancy Cottons there was little business passing, trade with Japan and through Hankow being curtailed. The business in Woollens and Worsteds had again been concluded entirely at auction, where prices were ruling rather in favour of buyers. There had been very little business transacted in Metals; prices remained unchanged. Lead was steady; and well assorted Nailrods were in better request. There had been a quiet market for Coal with reduced rates, and but little demand for any description.

HONG KONG.—There had been no improvement in the market, and only a retail business, confined apparently to absolute requirements, had been transacted. Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Piece Goods.—Transactions in nearly all articles had been small, the only demand of any importance having been for Mexican 7 lb. T-Cloths which had been moderately bought at a slight reduction from former figures. Grey and White Shirtings had been slow of sale at low rates. Drills and Sheetings had been neglected. Woollens.—Camlets are in demand, but holders are asking prices which preclude business. Spanish Stripes are somewhat inquired for, and best 12 lbs. Blankets are scarce and wanted. Metals.—A further slight improvement is quoted in Lead, but dealers are now not inclined to buy at the advanced prices. Tin Plates are weak. Steel is in moderate request. Yellow Metal is neglected at lower prices. Quicksilver has undergone no special change, and the only business done has been speculative re-sales. Coals.—The only sale has been a single parcel of 1,000 tons of Cardiff at 41s. to arrive. The market has been quiet for all kinds, and Cardiff is now the only description for which there is any inquiry. Rice.—From Canton reports have been received that serious damage is likely to result to the crops from the heavy rains and floods, and in consequence considerable excitement has been displayed here, and prices of both Siam and Saigon grain have materially advanced, the market being strong at the close.

CANTON.—In Lead there had been but little doing, but the market was firm at the following quotations: Mixed brands and L.B. $8.30 to $8.35, and W.B. $8.35 to $8.40 per picul. Quicksilver was quoted at $60 per picul.

MANILA.—The Piece Goods market had become much quieter, and dealers appeared to be disinclined to enter into further operations of any extent, the retail business being also exceptionally dull. Values of Plain Staples in some cases had given way a little, several large parcels having been forced on the market at very low rates. Printed Goods continued to arrive in large quantities, and rates had suffered a further decline, while Coloured woven wore a shade firmer.

SINGAPORE.—The market for Manchester goods remained very quiet in the early part of the the fortnight, but during the closing week there had been more inquiry for some of the principal staples; holders had met the demand very freely by a reduction in values, quotations generally were weaker, supplies had been heavy and stocks were increasing. Grey Shirtings had continued dull, business being confined to sales of 8¼ lbs. ordinary quality at $1.70 to $1.65 per piece; the sales of 7 lbs. and 6 lbs. had been very trifling. Grey Supers and Maddapollams in little inquiry. Business in T-Cloths larger, but values had given way. A moderate business had been done in Grey Yarns, chiefly in No. 40's, lower rates being taken; Nos. 24's and 30's had been in limited request, a few sales reported. Turkey Red Yarn had been moving off more freely, favourite marks had been placed at previous rates. Dyed and Printed Goods unchanged. Metals without improvement.

PENANG.—There had been a moderate demand for the principal Staples during the fortnight, and sales had been effected to a fair extent. Grey Shirtings: Fair sales of 6 lbs. at $29, 7 lbs. at $32, and 8¼ lbs. at $35 to $43, according to quality. 45-inch 9 lbs. placed at $41. Grey Supers: Sales of 5½ lbs. at $35½. Grey Madapollams: No sales. Grey T-Cloths: A fair business done in 6 lbs. at $24 to 31½, and in 7 lbs. at $28 to 28¾. Sales of 7-lbs. Mexicans at $32 to 33½. Grey Yarns: Small sales of No. 40 at $103. White Cambrics: Fair transactions in 50s at $22½ to 24½, and in 15/16s at $22 to $25, and $29½ for finer quality. Woollens in very little inquiry.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—During the earlier portion of the interval there was a comparative absence of demand, and willing buyers were able to effect settlements on favourable terms—as low as $30 to $32 per picul being accepted for fully "fine" to "finest." Subsequently business became very general, so much so that arrivals were not sufficient to meet the requirements of buyers—the demand, moreover, running chiefly on Teas for price—until, at the close, barely "fine" Teas had fetched $30 per picul, with apparent great firmness on the part of natives for this grade. Fully "finest" to "choice," on the other hand, which were at first most eagerly sought after, could be bought rather cheaper. At the close the quality of arrivals, so far, compared very favourably with last year's, and it was hoped that the improvement would last throughout the season. The export to date had reached 246,591 lbs., against 268,625 lbs. in correspounding period last season. Quotations were: Fine, $30 to 32 per picul; Finest, $33 to 36; Choice, $38 to 42; Choicest, $43, and upwards.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The first "Garden" parcels were offered on the 5th May, and found buyers at prices ranging from $39 to $47 per picul. Since that date the market had been active, and rates had steadily declined. Settlements for the season to date were 5,500 piculs, against 4,000 piculs at the same time last year. Stocks were estimated at 1,000 piculs, consisting almost without exception of fine to choicest grades.

AMOY AND FORMOSA.—Latest advices from Tamsui report the opening of the market there for Formosa Ooloongs by the settlement of about 4,500 piculs of Tea at the following rates, duty paid in Amoy: good cargo $30/31; superior $33/34; fine $37/38; finest $42/44; and choice $46/52 per picul. The weather had been favourable for the picking of the leaf, and the quality of the spring crop was thought well of. About 3,200 packages native-packed Tamsuis had been placed on the Amoy market for sale, but many of them were not desirable having been very hastily prepared, i.e., insufficiently picked of flake and objectionable leaf, and only about half fired. Notwithstanding these objections, settlements had been made to the extent of 2,000 packages, said to be for the American market, at $39/40 for fine; and $48 duty paid for fully finest, showing a good advance upon rates ruling in Tamsui. Amoy Ooloong.—A muster of one chop had been placed on offer grading superior cargo. Until the arrival of more samples from the country no opinion could be formed upon the quality of the crop. The supply was expected to show a considerable increase upon that of last year, as there would be very little of the leaf made into Congou.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Report says:—We have had an active market in Tea during the past fortnight, the chief attention having been paid to the New Season's Scented teas. Congous: A moderate business has been transacted, but no decline in prices has taken place; settlements have been chiefly confined to medium grades. From Macao heavy shipments are reported, and they comprise a good many teas of very common quality. Scented Teas: Since the first shipments were made per Ulysses on the 8th inst. an active inquiry has existed for Scented Capers, and a very large business has resulted at full prices; we quote fair to medium Tls. 20 to 25, good medium to fine Tls. 26 to 29, finest and choice Tls. 30 to 34 per picul. Scented Orange Pekoes have also been in good demand; "new make" kinds have attracted most attention, the quality of "long leaf" teas offering little inducement for operations at the prices asked by teamen. Of the settlements given below more than one-half consists of "new make" kinds; these have been taken at Tls. 19 to 21 for fair, and at Tls. 26 to 33 for medium to finest; prices for "long leaf" sorts have ruled from Tls. 25 to 30 per picul. Prices as compared with those ruling at the opening of last year are quite a tael higher for all medium grades of Capers, while for fine and finest teas rates are slightly lower. Pekoes have also opened at higher prices; "long leaf" and medium descriptions of "new makes" being one tael, and common and fair "new makes" Tls. 1½ to 2 per picul dearer than last season. The remarks made in our last report regarding the quality of the crop have been fully borne out by a further acquaintance with the teas. Musters put forward of late show no improvement upon those first shown, and prove that the crop of Capers is certainly inferior to that of last year both in leaf and liquor. Scented Orange Pekoes must also be considered not so good as the previous season, the leaf after infusion being very indifferent and much mixed. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Congou, 5,400 boxes at Tls. 22 to 32 per picul; scented caper, 62,000 boxes at Tls. 20 to 34 per picul; scented orange pekoe, 10,100 boxes at Tls. 19 to 33 per picul.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Upon the receipt of telegrams, advising unfavourable weather in Europe, a sudden inquiry sprang up, and relatively large settlements were made. Dealers immediately raised their asking prices by about $50 per picul, and business had, in consequence, since fallen off. At the close, a good many rejections of Hanks were being made. Oshiu silks, offering the best assortments, had been principally dealt in. Arrivals had been small, and stocks were reduced to 1,100 bales. The settlements during the interval had amounted to 350 bales. Prices paid had been Hanks No. 2½ 21s. 8d. to 22s. 4d., No. 3 20s. 3d. to 21s. 4d. Oshiu, good 18s. 10d. to 20s. 7d., Kakeda, good 21s. 8d. to 20s. 3d., Hamataki, common to medium 16s 5d. to 17s. 6d.

SHANGHAI.—The only transactions had been some shipments of Rereels to America on Chinese accounts, and some trifling purchases of R.R. Haineens and Tsatlees at Tls. 350 to 360 for good market classes. There had been a firmer disposition apparent amongst holders of Silks with any pretension to quality, and a small speculative demand was current with natives. As the stock was almost bare of fair quality Tsatlees and in Rereels the selection was becoming limited. The latest advices from the country regarding the new crop report the worms progressing very favourable and mulberry leaves rising in value.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon's Circular says:—Previous expectations of an abundant and satisfactory "first crop" cannot now be entertained, as the continual downfall of rain has done more damage than was anticipated. Judging from the few "hank samples" shown on the market, the thread is less fine, and colour less dingy than was at first expected, but it is yet early to give a definite opinion of the crop. Native accounts are still conflicting regarding quality, but they fairly agree as to the probable yield, viz., 1,000 to 1,200 bales. For Bombay a small contract of Long-reels is reported at $385 per picul, and some portion of it may perhaps be made ready for this outgoing steamer. Chinamen wish to contract at a parity of $360 per picul for No. 4 Tsatlee, but no doubt some considerable reduction would be ceded if a firm offer was made. In Re-reels there is no business doing. The stock of old season's staple is computed at 150 bales Tsatlee, and 100 bales inferior sorts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Copper: Settlements of 924 piculs, chiefly on Chinese account, are reported; prices for rough and slab were higher, and there was but little on offer. Camphor: Deliveries had comprised 750 piculs, at an advance on last quotations. Wax: Purchases had been made on a trifling scale, amounting to 140 piculs only. Tobacco: Settlements, 1,500 piculs. Stocks much reduced, and prices somewhat firmer.

HANKOW.—Rhubarb: One settlement of Shensi reported at Tls. 36 per picul. A fair quantity had arrived. Musk: Several boxes had arrived, but only two had been settled on this market, one Szechuen at Tls. 86 and one Yunnan at Tls. 105. Hides had advanced about m.8 per picul, and there was a fair inquiry by Natives at Tls. 7.2 to Tls. 7.6.

FOOCHOW.—The sales had been T-Cloths 7 lbs., 400 pieces at $1.72 per piece; ditto 8 lbs., 250 pieces at $2.32 per piece; lead, 1,700 pigs at $8.50 to $9.00 per picul.

CANTON.—Drugs and Spices: Cassia Lignea is quoted at, for New Season's, $10.20 to 10.25 in mats, $10,50 to 10.55 in boxes, for Old Season's $10.45 to 10.50 in mats, $10.75 to 10.80 in boxes. Sales of "New Season's" 700 piculs. Stock 2,000 piculs. Sales of "Old Season's" nil. Stock 7,000 piculs. Cassia Buds, Stock exhausted. Star Aniseed, $26 to 27. Rhubarb, No. 2, $55 to $60. Alum, $1.85 to 1.90 per picul. Camphor, $17 to 17.50 per picul, packed. Sundries: Fire Crackers 73 to 77 cents per box. Vermilion, $33 to 34 per box. Matting, Manhing's Fine contract, White 4/4, 10¼ cents, 5/4, 12¼ cents, 6/4, 15 cents per yard; Red Check, 4/4, 11¼ cents, 5/4, 13¾ cents, 6/4, 16 cents; Double Extra Imperial, white 4/4, 13½ cents, 5/4, 16 cents, 6/4, 19 cents; Red Check, 4/4, 15 cents, 5/4, 17½ cents, 6/4, 20½ cents per yard. Cargo Ginger, new, in syrup (Chyloong) $3.50 per box of 6 jars, Mandarin, $4.10, Young Stem, $5 70.

MANILA.—Messrs. Smith, Bell and Co.'s Circular says:—A great advance has taken place in sugar and hemp during the fortnight, but coffee has remained much as last quoted. Freights are weaker, and exchange has taken a considerable start upwards. Sugar: Late telegrams have completely disorganised our market, and purchases are only practicable to-day at prices considerably in excess of those ruling in the home markets according to latest quotations. The raw article is now both scarce and dear, and, to make matters worse, prospects for the coming crop in the Manila districts are very poor indeed, as the continued absence of rain is doing great injury to the young plant. We estimate sales during the fortnight at about 85,000 piculs, superior having been taken at $6 per picul and extra at $6.50 per picul. Dealers now refuse to sell at these prices. Unclayed: Shortly after the date of our last a purchase of Taal was entered at $3.25 per picul, and since then buyers have come out at $3.50 to $3.62½ per picul, the market closing firm at the last named price. The arrivals during the fortnight amount to over 30,000 piculs. Ilo Ilo and Cebu advices report a strong upward tendency in both markets. Manila Hemp: $6.50, equal to £27 3s., had been paid for good quality. In course of shipment there are now 8,000 bales going forward to Great Britain and 15,000 bales to the United States. Stocks here, after deducting requirements for vessels in port, we estimate at 4,862 bales, and in Cebu at 9,901 bales, together 14,763 bales. Coffee: The sales during the fortnight have been small, and the demand moderate. Current value is $19.50 to 20 per picul (£75 16s. 11d. to £77 14s. 3d.), at which figures holders are tolerably firm. Cigars: No auction has been held since the 20th ultimo, and it is reported that, in future, auctions will be done away with and sealed tenders admitted instead. The change is not likely to benefit the mercantile community in any way.

SINGAPORE.—The market had been quiet, with a fair demand for most of the principal staples; there had not been much change in quotations, and an average business is reported. Gambier had been in fair inquiry and steady at $4.45 to $4.42½ per picul until the close, when the price was easier and the demand quiet. Cube had been more freely offered, No. 2 quality had been bought at $5.27½ per picul, No. 1 quality was weaker. Black Pepper had been steady at $7¾, with a quiet demand; about 300 tons had been purchased; at the close there was less inquiry, and rates were weaker. White Pepper had been in fair inquiry, prices had been a little more in favour of buyers; purchases of 100 tons reported. Pearl Sago quiet; owing to the high price of Sago flour the manufacture was falling off; no business of importance had transpired. Sago flour further advanced. Tapioca had also risen considerably. The Tin market had remained quiet; supplies had been heavy, about 4,000 piculs having arrived during the fortnight; the price had declined.

PENANG.—Black Pepper: There were purchases of West Coast at 7¼ to 7.45, and Atchin at 7⅛ to 7.30—in all 5,000 piculs. Stock 4,000 piculs West Coast; holders firm. White Pepper: A small lot of good quality bought at $14. Sugar: Basket Sugar had been contracted for at $4. Market firm. No. 1 Penang, no sellers at $6.90; No. 2 in good demand, but sellers refuse $4.50, and require a considerable advance. Gutta-percha: Very scarce. Gum Benjamin: Retail sales of ordinary No. 2 at $16. Supplies of 300 cases T. T. and Co., and 200 cases inferior quality had arrived. India-rubber: Small arrivals taken at 40½. Hides: Buffalo Hides had advanced to 9¼ and were in demand. Small purchases of Cow at 14½.

No single money order will be issued for a higher sum than £10; and, as the Netherlands Government has stipulated that the amount to be remitted by the same remitter to the same payee, is not to exceed £10 during a period of eight days, the public are cautioned that if, in any instance, orders are drawn in excess of that sum, a portion of the remittance will be liable to be detained at the Hague until the following mail. Measures will be taken by the Netherlands Post-office for the issue of money orders in the Netherlands Possessions in India, payable at money-order offices in the United Kingdom.

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE.—The annual general meeting of the Royal Colonial Institute was held on the 29th ult.; the Duke of Manchester, president, in the chair. Sir Henry Barkly, lately Governor of the Cape, was among those present. The report stated that 121 Fellows were elected during the past year, which brings the total number in England and the colonies to about 700. The Council had communicated with the Colonial Governments as to the proposed Imperial Museum for the Colonies and India on the Victoria Embankment, and had received responses from which it might be fairly hoped that if the site on the Embankment were promised conditionally on the Colonial Governments finding funds for the building, they would readily co-operate in the establishment of a museum.

IN celebration of the return of Mr. T. Brassey, M.P., with Mrs. Brassey and family, from their voyage round the world, a banquet was given on the 27th ult. in the pavilion of the pier at Hastings. About 300 ladies and gentlemen sat down, the Mayor, Mr. Alderman Gansden, presiding. Sir U. J. Kay-Shuttleworth, Bart., M.P., and Lady K. Shuttleworth were among the assemblage. In responding to the toast of the evening, Mr. Brassey gave some interesting particulars of his voyage, and spoke highly of British enterprise and prestige.

IN the course of a discussion at the Diocesan Conference at Winchester last week, Lord Henry Scott, M.P., acknowledged the great services which Vice-Admiral Ryder, Commander-in-Chief on the China station, and one of the noblest officers, he said, who had ever stood on the deck of a British ship, had rendered to the Hampshire Penitentiaries, for the rescue and reformation of fallen women.

BY the steamship Antenor, which has just arrived, the Zoological Society has received a valuable consignment of animals, presented to them by Sir Harry St. George Ord, K.C.B., ex-Governor of the Straits Settlements. Among these is a very fine specimen of the black leopard, which fills up a vacant space in the series of the large carnivora now lodged in the lion-house.

THE municipality of Colombo have commissioned the London Stereoscopic Company to paint a life-size oil picture of the Right Hon. Sir W. H. Gregory, the late Governor of Ceylon, to be placed in the Town-hall of Colombo.

MISSIONARIES AND MORALS IN CHINA.

(To the Editor of the London and China Express.)

SIR,—I trust I may be permitted to reply in a few words to your correspondents "D." and "Old China," who take exception to the remarks in my letter of May 23 on the comments of missionaries with respect to the moral and religious tone prevalent in China.

I have already said that I do not myself take extreme views on this subject, and am willing to make some excuse for the absence of much that civilises and refines at home. Your correspondent "D." takes exception to this expression, and states that life in China is rather over-civilised and refined than the contrary, and then goes on to explain what his ideas of civilisation and refinement are. I will not lengthen this letter by entering into an elaborate disquisition on this somewhat difficult subject, but will only say that my intention was to allude to something very much higher than any "refinement" which can come within the category of material luxury or living above one's station. To my mind what is thus indicated appears rather in the light of vulgarity. What I meant to allude to was the strong influence of the circumstances which surround everyone at home; his family connections, the respect he owes to his parents, his sisters, his more valued friends and acquaintance, the general religious and orderly tone of the community and other similar elements which must affect all to some degree and some few it may be hoped to the extent of making them wiser, better, less selfish, and less self-indulgent—in a word, more Christian men. These elements it is to be deplored do not exist in China as they do here, and to this extent some excuse may be pleaded for shortcomings which it is impossible to ignore. Your correspondent "D." puts his finger upon the weak point in saying that "if gentlemen engaged in mercantile pursuits in China had greater facilities for marrying and settling" a good deal of the "extravagance" would wear off quickly, but he adds "circumstances are very much against them." Is this not arguing in a circle? Are not the "circumstances" just this very extravagance itself? Remove that, and there is no reason why peopleshould not "marry and settle" in China as well as in other places, and this is precisely what every well wisher of Anglo-Chinese Society must desire to see brought about.

As to the remarks of "Old China," they are so extremely sound that they practically amount to nothing. Nobody will deny that there is a great deal to be deplored at home as well as in China; but "two blacks do not make a white." I hardly think that as a rule, missionaries are as prone to exaggeration as "Old China" represents. He should not forget that unchristian life presents itself, and I trust ever will present itself in a more serious aspect to their minds than to those of other people; and that if they at times speak strongly it is because they feel deeply. Those whose business it is to administer the Gospel know, perhaps, better than anyone else the weaknesses of human nature, and can make excuses for them; but they are apt to look more seriously upon short-comings, when they find them accompanied by a spirit of self-sufficiency and pride which will find an answer to the most temperate denunciation of the most obvious transgressions.—I am, &c.,

THE FAILURE OF SILK IN 1876.

The Fifth Annual Report of the Silk Association of America gives the subjoined account of the failure of the European crop of silk last year, which will be read with special interest at the present time:—

The first notes of warning had been uttered as early as April, and the statement was confidently made in May that the wet and chilly weather had diminished the European crop of silk. The warning was at first totally unheeded, buyers being far more keenly alive to the causes which had so long depressed the market than to the rumours that favoured a rise in prices. But before June opened these rumours had taken the more definite shape of alarming facts. It was known that the unusual frosts in April had checked the produce of leaves, and that wet and chilly weather which supervened had extensively destroyed the silkworms. The prices of raw silk were not advanced, but a few of the bolder operators made speculative purchases, and the market stiffened, notwithstanding the unpropitious state of trade in manufactured goods. For at least a fortnight the opposing considerations balanced the European market. About the middle of June the deficiency of the Italian crop was estimated at 50 per cent.; that of France was known to be in far greater proportion, so that its yield of raw silk was calculated as low as one-tenth of the usual quantity. The same cause—cold and wet weather at the season for harvesting the crop of silk—was effective in both countries, producing disease and death among the silkworms and reducing the amount of silk spun by the survivors. Simultaneously advices were received by telegraph from Shanghai that the Asiatic crop was deficient 10 to 15 per cent. The importance of this will be seen when it is stated that the shipments of silk from China to Marseilles had very nearly tripled between 1873 and 1876. Shortly after the receipt of these advices from Shanghai there was a break in the telegraph that make it impracticable to transmit, from France to China, orders appropriate to the altered condition of affairs. The net total change in the silk supply of the world, on July 1, 1876, as since ascertained, was as follows:—

Total supply of	For 1875-76. Bales.	For 1876-77. Bales.	Decrease.
Full-sized silks*...	93,986	94,300	nil.
All sorts	177,150	127,150	28 per cent.

A great rise took place in July. It was stimulated by large speculative purchases and an extraordinary excitement among buyers. During June and July this rise amounted to 30 and 50 per cent. on European silk, 50 and 55 on China silks, 50 to 80 on Japans and Bengals. The deficit of European production was ascertained to be two-thirds of the whole. The deficit of Asiatic silk was shown in a falling off of export from Shanghai. A further great rise of prices took place in August; and the record is one of advance even through September. The whole advance (Lyons quotations), from the end of March to the end of September, was as follows:—

Italian raws, 2nd class	110 per cent.
Brutia	95 „
Hanks, No. 2	150 „
Tsatlee, all round	97 „
Kahing	87 „
Italian organzines	70 „

The average advance on all sorts may be roundly stated as having exceeded 100 per cent.

It must be admitted that the market was in a perilous condition. The stocks of both raw silk and manufactured goods were large at the beginning of the year. Several of the causes of diminished consumption which have been referred to were in full development at this period. In this country, for instance, the contraction in the expenditure of all classes of the people—the rage for economy—was at its utmost.

Abroad, the silk manufacturers had greatly damaged their home market by carrying the practice of weighting silks to the most extreme limits, so that the complaints of consumers went outside the avenues of trade and reached the public ear through the newspapers. A correspondent of the London Daily News describes the fraud, and says that he has seen at Lyons 12 ounces of silk dyed and weighted up to 52 ounces. This statement is, indeed, quite within limits, as it is not uncommon for French dyers to make 80 ounces from one pound of silk. Silk dresses, another correspondent declares, are so inferior in quality and durability to those of ten years ago that in self-defence ladies have had to adopt other material for their dresses. It is specified, more particularly as to the wearing quality of these loaded silks, that "they split, grease, or turn rusty." The manufacturers themselves were conscious that their goods had lost popularity, though they attributed the change to fashion alone. But it was clear beyond all question that so weak a market for manufactured products was ill calculated to sustain the mountain of speculation in raw material that was piled upon it. While the fever lasted, however, the market for goods sympathised with the upward movement, and their prices rose continuously, though there could have been no reasonable hope that a free demand which had been refused to the goods while they were cheap would be accorded to them when their prices rose 50 per cent. or more.

In short, the condition of the trade invited calamity. In October the revulsion came. It was precipitated by rumours of war, which rapidly assumed an alarming character. The market for raw silk yielded readily, though the fall of prices was slow; but the manufacturing interest of Lyons was seized with a panic. At least half the looms were stopped. An army of working people were thrown out of employment, and while the early reports were said to have exaggerated the distress, there can be no question that the whole silk industry of France was plunged in trouble. On the one hand there was not enough concession in the price of raw silk to make manufacture profitable. On the other, Europeans hesitated to buy silk goods while war was impending, and Americans bought sparingly because of the unsettled condition of business while the Presidency was in dispute. The importance of this industrial crisis was recognised by the authorities, and measures of relief were taken. A sum of f. 200,000 was assigned to the relief fund by the Lyons Municipal Council and f.50,000 by the corresponding authority of Paris.

The extent of the distress among the silk workers of Lyons has been made the occasion of a political dispute in France. While it is charged that on the one side the reports of distress were exaggerated, it may be the case on the other that they were underestimated. It is probably not true that gangs of workmen, unemployed, wandered from street to street, soliciting work or alms. But there can be little doubt that a large proportion of the looms ceased running, and that about half of the working-people were thrown at least temporarily out of employ. Some relief was also brought by liberal orders for such classes of silk goods as are consumed in Government offices and buildings under the national control. In December also there were some concessions made by the holders of raw silk, which helped the manufacturers; speculators especially who were heavily burdened, after trying the English market in vain, sold certain descriptions of raw silk at a reduction of 15 to 20 per cent. Afterwards there was a slight rally of prices both for raw silk and for goods, the advance of the former being 10 per cent. for European and the finest Japan.

The crisis in the silk industry of Lyons had more than an abstract interest for American manufacturers. It prompted speculative shipments of goods to this country, there being a chance that the market would prove less unsettled here than in Europe. The deterioration in goods had not hurt foreign reputations here so much as it had abroad. Moreover there was a chance of being able to pass the goods through our Custom House with little recognition of the fact that during the crisis they would sell for a higher price in France than was stated as their value in the invoices.

* By full-sized silks are meant all raws from 17 deniers upwards. By fine-sized silks are meant all raws from 10 to 16 deniers.

Throughout the world, other silk markets promptly sympathised with that of Lyons, and followed it quickly both as to unwonted excitement and depressed reaction. In China the high prices brought silk to the shipping ports much earlier than customary. Consequently while the export from Shanghai was about the same as in the two preceding years—say 65,000 bales from June to March—the amount remaining at that port was enormous; at last advices it was 15,000 bales, as against 1,500 in 1876 and 2,800 in 1875. It may be mentioned, however, that a large proportion of this excess is not desirable silk. The export from Canton has been about 20,000 bales to March 14th, being little different from that of 1876, and exceeding 1875 by about 5,000 bales. At Hong Kong there is an excess of stock, compared with 1876, of 1,000 bales, of which a third is of inferior character.

Shipments direct to the United States from Chinese ports did not altogether reach the excessive amount of 1876, but surpassed the more moderate figures of 1875. The following are the direct shipments from June to March:

Shanghai	3,571	6,249	3,546
Canton	3,154	2,576	2,344
Bales	6,725	8,825	5,890

The Yokohama market displayed similar scenes of animation and dulness. While the speculation was at its height, eager buyers were seen at unexpectedly early hours in the morning going about to secure bargains and purchasing at extravagant prices, so as to anticipate their slower rivals who invariably found the market bare at later hours. The average annual export from Yokohama is about 14,000 bales. Under the pressure of the past year's demand it rose between July 1st and March 28th to more than 20,000 bales, leaving a stock of 1,500 bales at that port, as against 300 bales last year. It is probable, according to the Japan Mail, that the annual export of 14,000 bales from that country leaves from 6,000 to 8,000 bales for Japanese home consumption.

THE OPIUM QUESTION.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in reviewing Mr. Fry's paper on the above subject in the Contemporary Review, to which we recently called attention, says:—Without desiring to enter upon a vindication of the opium monopoly, we cannot but think there is lack of a common-sense practical statesmanship in the extreme views advocated by Mr. Justice Fry and the Anti-Opium Association. In a true partisan spirit, he can see only the moral consequences of indulgence in opium, and even these are not very fairly estimated. If we look to the great vice of northern nations it appears indisputable that the evils of drinking within these isles are immeasurably greater than those which have hitherto been traced to opium-smoking. We have at home more crime and vice, more wrong from waste of substance and violence, more injury to the national industry and wealth of the nation than can possibly be identified with the consumption of opium in China. This truth is altogether overlooked; and yet the degree and kind of injury wrought by the abuse of opium enters essentially into the question of moral wrong, which it is the object of such writers to affix on all concerned in supplying the drug. It has never yet been proved by any trustworthy or sufficiently enlarged field of statistics that opium-smoking does habitually or must necessarily destroy health and so enervate the constitution that its continued use in increasing quantities is inevitable. We know this statement is reiterated by missionaries, some of them practicing medicine in China, but we have never seen any satisfactory evidence that such is the fact. That these observers have truly and honestly described what fell under their own observation we do not question; but how many thousand cases have come under their notice? and what proportion do these bear to the total number of opium-smokers in China? No doubt thousands of such cases there are where the constitution is undermined and the worldly fortune of the victim ruined by excess in the use of opium. But how far does this apply? Wine and gin and beer kill their thousands every year in these isles, and ruin the health and fortune of many more; but what should we say of any foreigner who, describing the abuse of Cognac and French wines, held the French nation or Government responsible for the mischief occasioned by habits of intemperance? There are 30,000,000 of people here. In estimating the real magnitude of the evil we ought to know what proportion of these consume ardent liquors, and of these how many suffer in health or fortune. The same inquiry should certainly not be neglected when we are dealing with a nation numbering over 300,000,000. How many of these can possibly be slaves or victims to the habit of smoking in excess by means of Indian opium is of course easily ascertained, because we know to a chest how much is annually imported into China. And how many out of the three hundred millions can 80,000 chests debauch? Something infinitesimally small if compared with the proportion of our own population brutalised and impoverished by excess in drink. Of course it is not so easy to ascertain how much opium is annually produced in China, and for some portion of the evil produced by this, as we have fostered the habits we may not unreasonably be held more or less responsible. But the Chinese grew opium before we traded with their country. Nor were we the first foreigners who introduced opium from abroad, but the Portuguese. This merely by way of parenthesis, and for the removal of error. We are to a certain extent, no doubt, responsible for the rapid increase in the consumption of opium, both of foreign and native growth. We are responsible in a double sense, as the actual producers and manufacturers of the drug, and for having used our superiority in war to compel the withdrawal of all fiscal prohibition. These things being freely granted, we still disagree with the writer of the article in the Contemporary as to the ascertained perniciousness of opium smoking; and secondly, as to the policy incumbent on the Indian (British) Government in regard to its participation in the trade.

Upon the statement recently made by Dr. Ayres, the Colonial Surgeon in Hong Kong, the Pall Mall says that—As to the necessarily pernicious effects of opium-smoking, after hearing so much on the missionary side, it is but fair to hear other medical evidence, and adds that opium has been ascertained to contain a principle akin to quinine in its effect as a curative for malarious fevers. Is it quite certain that in the mud deltas of Chinese rivers, under a tropical sun, opium may not be a prophylactic of great value and power—with a population living almost exclusively on rice and fish, not always of the freshest, and vegetables made putrescent to heighten their flavour?

Naval and Military.

The fifth and last of the new armoured gunboats which have been lately constructed for the German navy has been launched at Bremen. The new vessel is to be christened the Scorpion. Her sister ships—all of which are already afloat—are the Wespe, the Viper, the Biene, and the Mücke. Of these the two former were launched in 1876, the two latter in the early months of the present year. The gunboats are of 1,000 tons displacement, are driven by engines of 700 indicated horse power, and can steam nine knots an hour. They are built of iron, and are armoured with plates 203 milimetres, or very nearly eight inches in thickness, and carry each one heavy gun of 30·5 centimetres, or about eleven and a-half inches, calibre; throwing a 680 lb. projectile and consuming a charge of 150 lb. of powder.

The Temeraire ironclad left Chatham on the 25th ult. for its steam trials, but it does not seem to have gone far when the machinery connected with its steering apparatus gave way, and it had to return to harbour. It will take a fortnight to make the necessary repairs. In the meanwhile another trial has been made, hand steering-gear being employed. The trial was a perfect success. Six runs were made, the average speed being between 14½ and 15 knots, there being no hot bearings, and everything going smoothly. The Constructor of the Navy and other Admiralty officials were on board. The vessel will be got ready for commission to join the Mediterranean fleet, and will be ready for sea about the first week in August.

It would appear that sanguine hopes are now entertained of H.M.'s ship Vanguard being raised from her long submerged bed, near the Kisch bank. Captain Coppin, who has recently ratified his contract with the Admiralty, commenced work on the unfortunate ironclad last week, and it is said his divers found the ship in a much more favourable position for being operated upon than was anticipated, as she lies nearly upright, and very little embedded. The present intention of Captain Coppin is to lift the Vanguard by passing huge wire cables under her and bringing them up to pontoons of sufficient capability to raise the ship. The first of the cables has, we are informed, been successfully placed under her.

The Queen, at the recommendation of Sir Charles Adderley, has conferred the Albert medal of the second class on Sub.-Lieut. Robert Archibald James Montgomerie, R.N., of Her Majesty's ship Immortalité, as a reward for his gallant endeavours to save the life of a seaman who fell overboard on the 6th of April last. The Immortalité was under sail at the time, moving 4½ knots. The latitudes in which the occurrence took place abound with sharks, and the water was rough, and had not Mr. Montgomerie been a most powerful swimmer he would have had little chance of his life.

In the recent bestowal of honours on the occasion of the fifty-eighth anniversary of Her Majesty's birthday, an officer from the navigating ranks of the Navy—Capt. Robert Calder Allen—was among the recipients of the C.B. Capt. Allen has seen service in every part of the world. As master of the Vixen in 1841-43 he was present at the storming and capture of Tching-Kiang-Foo, and subsequent operations in the Yangtsze. As master of the Dido, 1843-45, he served in her boats against the Malay pirates in Borneo, and was present at all the skirmishes that took place.

Lieut.-Col. N W. de Courcy, Royal Marines, who has recently received the distinction of C.B., served with the battalion sent out for service in Japan in 1864-66, and was present at the bombardment of the batteries at the Straits of Simonosaki, the entrance of the inland sea of Japan, the assault, capture, and destruction of the five batteries, stockade, magazines, and barracks on 5th and 6th Sept., 1864 (severely wounded by a musket ball in the left wrist, middle finger amputated; mentioned in despatches, and brevet of major).

Commander Leicester Keppel, of the Avon, has received the full approval of the Government for the steps taken by him a few months since to punish the natives of villages in the Congo who pillaged the American schooner John Nickerson. The commander of the Avon landed some boats' crews and destroyed the huts of the offenders, being fortunate in carrying out this service without lose, although the boats were fired upon.

Messrs. J. and G. Thompson have launched from their yard at Glasgow a gunboat named the Firefly, built to the order of the British Government. She has a tonnage of 400, and engines of 360 indicated horse-power, being identical in all respects with Her Majesty's gunboat Firebrand, which was launched by the same firm about two months ago.

In consequence of the Lord Warden having nearly collided with the Resistance a few nights since, during a dense fog, the Admiralty have under their serious consideration several suggestions as to the course to be adopted by Her Majesty's vessels immediately a fog comes on.

The German squadron, consisting of the four ironclads Kaiser, Frederich Karl, Deutschland, and Preussen, and the despatch boat Falk, under the command of Admiral Batsch, arrived at Malta on the 21st ult. from the Baltic. Their destination is Port Said.

Captain Edward Hardinge, R.N., A.D.C., in command of Her Majesty's ship Challenger, has received the appointment of a Commissioner of Fisheries, and is about to proceed to Halifax, Nova Scotia, to undertake the duties pertaining to the office.

THE RELIEF FOR THE FAMINE IN CHINA.

WITHOUT desiring in any way to depreciate such efforts as have been made by some of the Chinese authorities to relieve the famine-stricken population, it is impossible not to regret the evident want of organisation and of system which has characterised them, nor can the manner in which the Peking authorities have stood aloof be passed over without notice. All accounts agree that little or nothing was done by the Imperial Government in the matter. The old Chinese system of making the provincial and local authorities directly and solely responsible for their own districts has been adhered to, and thus the burden has been thrown upon the very provinces and districts which urgently required aid. In the large and usually flourishing province of Shantung, indeed, no assistance whatever appears to have been afforded by the Imperial Government, and it is impossible, in face of the harrowing reports which have come from all sides, not to feel the deepest regret that so obvious a duty should have been so persistently neglected. In saying this we do not ignore certain difficulties which beset the Chinese in dealing with such a matter, from which foreign nations are fortunately free. The system of divided authority in China is such that co-operation between the Imperial and local officials is rendered extremely difficult, and in a case such as that under notice it may be simply a question whether assistance should be rendered by the one or the other, as if the Imperial authorities showed a willingness to take the duty upon themselves, the local officials would in all probability be disposed to neglect what they could do, and endeavour to shift the burden from their shoulders altogether. Still, while it is only reasonable to admit this fact, we cannot the less deprecate the consequences, and can only trust that the terrible results which have been brought about on the present occasion will be productive of more energy should another famine of the same kind arise.

On the other hand, it is a subject of congratulation that, so far as the relation between China and foreign nations are concerned, good, and that of no small magnitude, is likely to arise out of so much evil. It would perhaps be difficult to have hit upon anything better calculated to remove the prejudices which exist in the minds of the Chinese against Europeans than the opportunity which circumstances have presented to us of showing that we can sympathise with their sufferings and relieve their necessities when occasion requires. The assistance which has been extended to them in all directions cannot fail to be widely spoken of; and we trust that our Consular authorities at the various ports will take such measures as may be within their power to bring the fact into general notice. It will of course not be desirable to do so in any way that may offend the natural susceptibilities of the natives or that may go counter to the golden principle with respect to charitable actions of not letting one's left hand know what one's right hand does. This can safely be left to the discrimination of the various gentlemen who exercise the Consular functions; but some opportunities may very probably present themselves for bringing the matter into prominence, and if such should be the case, it will be to the interests of our relations with the Chinese that they should be availed of. That a sum of over Tls. 22,000 should have been collected and distributed at Chefoo, as we learn by the last accounts from China, is a circumstance in which we may feel some pardonable pride, and it is certain that this practical evidence of the good-will of foreigners must have an immense effect upon the minds of the Chinese people generally, and materially assist towards dispelling the false ideas and adverse prejudices which are so frequently and so insidiously disseminated by the Mandarins and the Literati.

THE LAST BLUE-BOOK ON THE MALAY PENINSULA.

ONE hundred and three despatches—some of them short telegrams, others many pages long—relating to the affairs of the Malay States and the Straits Settlements, have just been presented to Parliament. This correspondence may be substantially described as dealing with four subjects; one of these, that of our future policy towards the Malay Provinces, particularly describes the circumstances under which the Treaty with the Nine States was negotiated, and supplies us with pretty full information; a second topic, nearly as completely dealt with, is that of the organisation, equipment, and maintenance of the police force and the Resident's Body-guard in Perak and Larut; the third matter discussed, but left still unsettled, is the total cost of the recent military operations and the sources out of which that cost must finally be made good, looking to the impoverished condition of the subjugated native States and to the inability of the Straits revenues to bear any fresh burdens at present. One of the main reasons why a decision in this last affair is still unavoidably in abeyance arises from the difficulty in getting a complete and final return of the exact charges to which the Indian Government was put for transport of troops, provisions, and so forth, after allowing full value for returned stores. The fourth matter—and of course by far the most interesting one—treated of in the new volume is the investigation into the circumstances under which Mr. BIRCH was murdered. Very ample details of the procedure adopted are supplied, abstracts and summaries are furnished of the evidence on which the accused persons were convicted, and those who care to refer to an actual report of the trial of the MAHARAJA LELA and his associates are informed that a copy in MS. has been deposited in the House of Commons Library. It is only fair to say that the charges against ex Sultans ISMAIL and ABDULLAH, and against their chiefs and subordinate agents, seem to have been conclusively made out, and that the trial at Larut and the inquiry at Singapore, appear to have been conducted with a fairness, ability, and completeness which leave no room for fault-finding. Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS merits the highest praise for the carefulness and judgment with which he managed these very delicate and difficult undertakings.

It has been affirmed both at home and in the Straits, that MAHARAJA LELA and his companions surrendered to the Tumongong of Johore on the express guarantee that their lives should be spared, and indeed that they should be treated precisely as Sultans ISMAIL and ABDULLAH were treated; and if such an assertion were correct it is obvious that the MAHARAJA has been the victim of gross injustice. The Counsel for the accused—Mr. VAUGHAN—brought this statement in solemn form under the notice of the Court which tried them; but on reference to the Pumongong of Johore the contention is shown in the clearest and most satisfactory manner to be untrue, for not only does the Tumongong give an exact account of the terms on which the surrender was made, but the original agreement signed at the time by the Tumongong's six messengers has been published in full.

Another point which has been urged in exculpation of the Perak Chiefs has not been cleared up in anything like so satisfactory a manner. What we mean will be best shown by the following extract—to be found on page 98 of the Blue-book—from the official summary of the evidence collected by Mr. PLUNKET when investigating the circumstances under which Mr. BIRCH was murdered. Mr. PLUNKET says that "the evidence as it stands shows" (among other matters) "that in May (1875) a deputation "from Sultan ABDULLAH waited on Sir ANDREW CLARKE "at Singapore to complain against Mr. BIRCH with the "object of getting him removed from Perak or having his "powers greatly restricted, and that Sir ANDREW CLARKE, "after receiving the deputation, declined to reply officially "to the Sultan, as his own tenure of office as Governor. . . "had expired, and merely sent him a letter of advice;" "that on June 4 Mr. BIRCH put before the Sultan six notices," one against smuggling, one imposing a tax on boats, another imposing a poll-tax, and a fourth abolishing certain taxes collected by the chiefs on their own account, "and that "Mr. BIRCH gave the Sultan till July 20 to make up his "mind whether he would sign them or not, telling him "that if he did not take care he would soon be put off "the throne by the British Government."

The Sultan after some delay, and "under considerable pressure," did sign three notices, but refused to put his "chop" to them, alleging that his seal was broken. "That "in the month of August several circumstances connected "chiefly with the protection afforded to runaway slaves by "Mr. BIRCH contributed to increase the personal hostility "of the Sultan towards him." To the foregoing quotations we may add that it is now proved more clearly than ever that the Treaty of Pangkore was no voluntary agreement at all, so far as the Perak Chiefs were concerned. They signed it against their will, and when this treaty was followed by the concession of a British Protectorate, on the strength of which Mr. BIRCH posted up his ill-fated proclamation, no one can be surprised at the outbreak of disastrous resentment which followed. Ex-Sultan ISMAIL and his adherents are to reside in future at Johore, under the supervision of the Tumongong, but ABDULLAH and three of his Chiefs are to be deported, and will probably be interned in separate stations at the Seychelles. With regard to our future policy towards the native States, we have often insisted on the necessity for steadily facing the probable contingency that these States will one by one at intervals come directly under British Rule. The present Government of Perak is not satisfactory, and neither English nor Chinese merchants are willing to develop its resources in consequence.

AT the meeting of the Ceylon Company, which took place on the 26th ult., the Chairman gave an encouraging account of the working of the Company's estates in that island. The profits had been small as compared with last year, namely, £40,000 against £74,000. This was owing entirely to the smallness of the crop; but nevertheless the amount had been sufficient to pay all expenses of interest, to cover some heavy losses which had been made in the Mauritius, and to leave in addition a small amount to be carried forward. The Tea cultivation in Ceylon has been progressive and favourable; but the Company have been unable to extend it as much as they could have wished, in consequence of the difficulty of acquiring suitable land. The chinchona plantations have been profitable, and are likely to be more so, as the bark has risen in value and the cultivation is not expensive after once it has been set on foot. The coffee plantations were also progressing, the produce for 1876 being much larger than for the previous year, namely, in the proportion of fifteen to thirteen. With regard to the recent cyclone, the Chairman said they had heard that considerable injury had been caused to property; but they had not yet learnt how far the Company had themselves suffered by it.

WE are officially informed by the Colonial-office that the Secretary of State has appointed Sir WILLIAM JERVOIS, now Governor of the Straits Settlements, to be Governor of South Australia, and Sir W. ROBINSON, now Governor of Western Australia, to be transferred to the Straits. On reference to the Colonial-office List we find the antecedent services of Sir WM. ROBINSON to be as follows:—Was private secretary to Sir HERCULES ROBINSON in the Government of St. Kitts and Hong Kong from 1855 to 1860; president of Montserrat, 1862; administered the government of Dominica from the 5th January to 18th October, 1865; Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Falkland Islands, 23rd May, 1866; Governor of Prince Edward Island, 5th July, 1870, to Nov., 1873; nominated Governor-in-Chief of the Leeward Islands, 1874; appointed Governer of Western Australia, 7th October, 1874.—Sir HARRY ORD, formerly Governor of the Straits, to be Governor of Western Australia. It is unfortunate that the Governor of the Straits Settlements should be so frequently changed, but we believe in the present case the health of Sir WM. JERVOIS did not admit of his return.

WE are glad to notice that the project of Captain SPRYE for the opening of trade in Western China has again come to the front. A special meeting was held in London last week at the office of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, to consider the present incomplete position of the half-completed survey of the above land route for trade with China from Rangoon. The meeting was presided over by the able President of the Association, Mr. SAMPSON LLOYD, M.P., and was specially attended, on invitation, by Mr. W. R. HAIGH, of Huddersfield Chamber; Mr. THOMAS ORMEROD, of Halifax Chamber; and Captain SPRYE. After full discussion, a plan for action, in co-operation with individual Chambers, further to press the completion of the survey on the favourable consideration of Her MAJESTY'S Government, was adopted; and with its cordial acknowledgments to the President for the readiness he expressed to render such Parliamentary assistance as should be in his power, the meeting separated.

ONE of the Hong Kong papers calls attention to the fact that there is no interpreter in that Colony who speaks the Mandarin dialect, so that there might be a difficulty in the event of any of the officials from Canton visiting the Governor of interpreting between his Excellency and the Chinese magnate. It is, however, generally possible to procure the services of some Chinese who speaks both the Canton dialect and the Mandarin, so that in reality the difficulty is by no means so great as appears at first sight. Indeed, an interpreter to serve this end would generally be found among the linguists attached to the suite of any Mandarin of importance. In any case, all that can be necessary is that one Chinaman capable of speaking the Mandarin dialect and also the Cantonese should be engaged in the Registrar General's Office.

A POST-OFFICE notification states that the Money-order system has been extended to the Dutch East India possessions, viz.:—Java, Sumatra, Borneo, Celebes, Madura, the Moluccas, the Archipelago of Billiton, the Archipelago of Banca, and the Archipelago of Riouw. Money orders can now be obtained at any money-order office in the United Kingdom, payable at any place in the above-named districts. In consequence of the admission of the Portuguese Colonies into the General Postal Union correspondence to and from Macao will for the future be transmitted at the same rates as are chargeable to Hong Kong and other places in China.

THE appeal in the case of BENNECKE SOUCHAY and Co. v. the Trustees of AUGUSTINE HEARD and Co. came on for hearing before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on the 28th ult., and ended in favour of the appellants. The case of DE BUSSCHE v. ALT, alluded to in our last issue, was concluded on the 27th, by a judgment in favour of the plaintiff. The full text will be found in another column.

WITH reference to our notice of the proposed Chinese Loan and the statements in the daily papers we understand that nothing will be done until the Imperial Edict authorising the Loan is lodged at the British Legation in Peking.

Literature, Science, &c.

The first volume of Baron von Richtofen's work upon China has been issued by Mr. Dietrich Reimer, of Berlin, and will be noticed at greater length in our next. The book is elaborately printed and got up, and the illustrations are most beautifully executed. Of the intrinsic merits of this work our readers are aware from the high reputation which Baron von Richtofen already enjoys. It is one of the most valuable scientific and general works upon China which has for a long time been issued, and will at once take its rank among the standard works of reference regarding that country.

Among the objects of interest in connection with China to be exhibited at the Caxton Celebration are some specimens of block printing; a Chinese version of the Scriptures, and some Buddhist prayer-books, &c., which have been sent by Mr. Thomas Jenner, formerly of China.

The Geographical Society have issued a circular with reference to the African Exploration Fund, to which we called attention in our last. The object of the Council is stated to be to take their appropriate part in the present great movement to lay open the whole interior of Africa to civilisation and European commerce. Miss Gertrude Jacob is preparing for the press an abridgment of her biography of Sir James Brooke, Rajah of Sarawak. Mr. J. C. M'Coan, late editor of the Levant Herald, is now engaged in writing a new work on modern Egypt, which will shortly be issued by Messrs. Cassell, Petter and Galpin, under the title of "Egypt as It is." "The Khedive's Egypt; or, the Old House of Boudage under New Masters," is the title of a new work which Mr. Edwin de Leon, ex Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, is preparing for immediate publication by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston and Co.

We have received a copy of the portion of Mr. Edward Hertslet's valuable work on our "Treaties, &c.," referring to China, which will be noticed in our next.

The Cornhill Magazine of this month contains a very well written paper, from the pen of Mr. Basil Hall Chamberlain, on Japanese Miniature Odes. The translations, which are given are clever and telling, and convey a good idea of the genius of Japanese poetry generally. Mr. Chamberlain says on this :—

If a moral, a lesson, must perforce be drawn from the works of the classic poets of Japan, it might, perhaps, be formulated in three simple words : "Life is brief." Life is brief. Let us make the best of it; for we know not what comes after, nor if anything comes after. Let us pluck the flowers of spring before they fade; let us hark to the note of the cuckoo, as in the reddening summer dawn, his shadow flits for an instant across the face of the sinking moon; let us love; let us be merry—not wildly or grossly, like the fool of Scripture, but with all comeliness and grace, as befits high-born and cultivated men and maidens. From those that are dominated by such an ever-present idea—albeit that it is less often proclaimed than understood—sadness cannot long be absent; hence the power of their elegies, and the tender grace of their conception of nature. For, be it observed, in ages of faith natural beauties are but little understood or appreciated. How, indeed, can they be greatly valued by men who look upon them as snares and hindrances, turning away the soul from the contemplation of higher and worthier objects? and the remark that it is only in these latter days of lukewarm conviction that we Europeans have really begun to enter into the meaning of outward nature is a trite one. Love nature, love life and enjoy it, would seem to be the burden of the songs of the poets of Japan; but yet they never can forget how soon the life to which they so greatly hold will end, how soon the natural beauties they so dearly prize will—for each one, at least—pass hopelessly away.

The Gospel in China.—Under the above title a new small monthly magazine has been issued, which will doubtless be acceptable to the large class who are interested in the spread of Christianity in China. The present number contains a well-written sketch of the History of Missions in China from 1807 to the Present Time.

The Revue des Deux Mondes has an elaborate article on the Philippines, from the pen of Mr. Edmond Plauchet. He warns the Spanish Government that it is not by terror that Spain can attach to herself the native population of the Archipelago; but, that many concessions to them will be necessary, in order to gain their affection and confidence.

MEETINGS OF SOCIETIES.

At the meeting of the Zoological Society, held on the 5th June, Mr. G. F. Angus read a paper "On a Remarkable Shell from Japan," which he named Thatchera mirabilis.

The forty-third anniversary meeting of the Statistical Society has been held at the Society's Rooms, the retiring President, Mr. James Heywood, in the chair. The number of Fellows was 611 on the 31st of December, 1876, since which period eighty new Fellows have been elected. The Howard Medal of 1876, with £20 added, was awarded to Dr. J. C. Steele, Medical Superintendent of Guy's Hospital, for his essay "On the Mortality of Hospitals, General and Special, in the United Kingdom, in Times Past and Present." The Howard Medal for the present year will be awarded in November next, the subject being "On the Condition and Management, Past and Present, of the Workhouses and similar Pauper Institutions in England and Wales, and their Effect on the Health, Intelligence, and Morals of the Inmates." The subject of the essay for the Howard Medal of 1878 is "The Effects of Health and Disease on Military and Naval Operations." It has been decided by the Council to grant a sum of £20 to the writer who gains the medal. The President, Council, and officers for the ensuing year, as proposed at the meeting, were unanimously elected. The new President is Mr. George Shaw Lefevre, M.P.

The annual meeting of the Society of Arts has been held. Among the points to which attention had been directed during the past year may be noticed the amendment of the patent laws, improved "sanitation," the establishment of the National Training School for Music, and technical education. Special meetings were held during the year for the discussion of the first two questions, and as regards the last a considerable sum of money has been placed at the disposal of the society by the Drapers and some other City Guilds for establishing courses of technical lectures and extending the technological examinations of the society. The report concluded with an announcement of the medals awarded for papers read, &c. The Albert medal, given annually for "distinguished merit in promoting arts, manufactures, and commerce," was awarded to the well-known French chymist, M. Dumas, the founder of the Ecole Centrale des Arts et Manufactures. Among the other recipients of medals were Professor Barff for his paper above referred to; Mr. A. G. Ellis, for a paper on musical pitch; Commander Cameron, for one on African trade; and Sir Douglas Forsyth, for one on trade in Central Asia. A soirée was held in the evening at the South Kensington Museum.

At a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society held on the 25th ult., under the presidency of Sir Rutherford Alcock, a paper was read by Mr. Alfred Russell Wallace on "The Comparative Antiquity of Continents, as Illustrated by Animal Life, Extinct and Living." The Emperor of Brazil was present. Mr. Wallace said the object of the lecture was to establish the antiquity of continents by the examination of living and extinct animals found in each. Making every allowance for the influence of climate on different animals on different continents, he believed the distribution of animals was in main due to the presence of valleys, the surroundings of which confined them to certain districts. A discussion followed, in the course of which the President said it was a source of great pleasure to the society that so loyal a member of it as the Emperor of Brazil should have visited them. He did so when last in England, and his Majesty had always been anxious for the promotion of geographical science. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Wallace, and the proceedings closed.

CHANCERY DIVISION.

BEFORE VICE-CHANCELLOR HALL.

DE BUSSCHE V. ALT.

This case, which was of considerable interest to merchants in China and Japan, has been decided in the above Court, after being over a week under hearing. The counsel for the plaintiffs were Mr. Dickenson, Q.C.; Mr. Wm. Barber, of the Chancery Bar; Mr. J. C. Matthew, and Mr. Pollard (formerly of Hong Kong), of the Common Law Bar; and for the defendant, Mr. Bristow, Q.C.; Mr. Roberts, of the Chancery Bar; and Mr. Willis, QC., of the Common Law Bar. Solicitors for the plaintiff, Messrs. Tatham, Oblein, and Nash; for defendant, Mr. Badham.

The judgment, which was delivered on the 27th ult., is as follows :—

JUDGMENT.

The Vice Chancellor, without calling upon the plaintiff's counsel for a reply, said, after a few preliminary observations :—I have again looked at the letters and the matters bearing upon the point, and the result of that further consideration is only to confirm what I have stated before, and I will only say on this head that it appears to me plain upon the correspondence that there were no specific instructions from Willis and Sons not to sell on credit, and there were instructions from the plaintiff consisting of a number of letters, which at all events did not absolutely forbid a sale on credit, but which previously to the actual transaction of the sale authorised a sale on credit. First of all, the plaintiff seems to have desired, if there was a sale on credit to have had the guarantee of Alt and Company for the payment, but it seems that afterwards he relaxed that and would have been willing to sell on credit, to a limited extent, to an extent within the margin of the actual sale, which took place by the defendant upon having a security upon the vessel about the giving of which it does not appear that there would have been any real difficulty. Now that being the state of things, however, it is right to say that Gilman and Co.'s view that a sale for cash was the proper thing, and they considered as representing their principals—and were quite right in taking that view—that it should be a sale for cash. They did not trust the native princes, although Messrs. Alt and Company had great confidence in them, and thought they would ultimately pay, although they wanted time. That being the state of things as regards the price, the price, as I have said before, was left substantially to the plaintiff to fix. It is not an unimportant consideration in reference to the transaction generally to remember that Willis and Son never authorised any sale, and must not be considered likely to sanction a sale, except for cash, and that Gilman and Co., as their agents, in exercising their judgment, would not be ready to sell as representing Willis and Co. except for cash. I say that is not an unimportant consideration in reference to what took place afterwards, and what, as I conceive, was the proper mode of acting and dealing under such a set of circumstances. It is admitted that it does not appear that Messrs. Gilman and Co. knew the amount that was owing to Willis and Son, and I think it is not an unimportant consideration in point of fact that the amount of the purchase money to be paid in cash for the ship the Columbine formed so large a proportion of the debt owing to Willis and Son. It was quite plain that Messrs. Willis and Son were safe and covered by what would be realised from the ship the Nymph; whatever that ship might produce, it would produce something substantial, no doubt. However, it might be said Messrs. Gilman and Co. did not know what the amount owing on the current account was, and there were some difficulties in communication with Willis and Sons, and getting instructions about it. Therefore, on the whole, I shall deal with the case upon the footing of Messrs. Gilman and Co.'s exercising a sound discretion in considering the sale ought to be for cash, they having to protect Willis and Sons, from whom they had no specific instructions to sell for credit, and that is all, so far as it goes, in favour of the defendant's view of the matter; and as it has been said, and truly said, it does not appear that the defendants were made aware of this particular direction from Mr. De Bussche to sell on credit to a certain extent; therefore, as they had been told, over and over again, that the sale should be for cash, they must have the benefit of that, it not being communicated to them, and as it was considered by them that there must be a sale for cash as far as Messrs. Gilman and Co.'s clients or correspondents were concerned. Now, having said that, I will consider the different points which have been raised on behalf of the defendant. The first and the very threshold of the whole case, is this, the contention on the defendant's part that he is only accountable to Gilman and Co. The position of things as regards that is this Gilman and Co. are persons who took the view that it ought to be a sale for cash. They have taken the view, and supported the view that the defendant was justified in taking the ship at the limit. So far, they agree with him, and they support, in fact, his defence that he was justified in doing that, and in that Mr. Leman justifies it even to the extent of saying that the defendant was justified in doing what he did, having regard to the communication which took place between himself and the members of the firm of Gilman and Co., that is with Lemann and Lavers, for although the answer says that Gilman was also communicated with, it seems to be a mistake on the part of the defendant when he speaks of having seen Mr. Gilman, because it turns out to have been Mr. Frederick Gilman, not a partner in the concern at all, but a clerk. There is a little mistake in the answer in that respect, giving an apparent colouring to Gilman, the partner, having sanctioned what took place. However, Lavers and Lemann both take the view, that what was done was perfectly right, and Lemann took the view to this extent, that, having regard to what had taken place between himself, or between himself and Lavers, that the defendant was justified in taking the course of finding a purchaser on credit, and having so secured himself against loss, that is, excepting the loss which there might be, by reason of the risk of giving credit, having at all events made a bargain which he considered it beneficial to himself to make, and which he was willing to accept, because, of course, he would not accept anything which did not involve, according to his judgment, benefit and advantage and profit to himself. Having first of all done that, having seen himself safe, he says he was then at liberty to become the purchaser. That is the view rather put forward in the second answer, and I cannot help thinking that it was put forward, because Mr. Lemann's evidence would go as far as that, and to meet the case of there being an actual contract; if there was one, for the sale, antecedent to the communication by the defendant to Gilman and Co., by which he took over the ship at the amount or limit fixed. It was to meet that that the second answer was placed and formed in the way that it was; in other words, it was to fit it with the evidence that would be adduced, and as to that there can be no objection, of course. Further investigation had developed that. It had been ascertained how the evidence would come out, and of course the plaintiff, properly enough, put it in that shape. It is subject always to this, that of course it must have been manifest to him, as it must have been manifest to everybody, that a difficulty is created with reference to that by the case having been presented in a different way by the original answer; and, as I said yesterday, the new case made involves to my mind, as to which I will say a word or two presently, a little difficulty, a case of conflicting customs being put forward.

Now it is said that the defendant is only answerable to Gilman and Co., but Gilman and Co., making common cause with the defendant, which one cannot be surprised at, and which I do not at all complain of, support their case. They say they thought, and I do not say they did not think, they were honestly and fairly acting for their principals. Taking that view of the case, it is manifest that it would really only come to this, that Gilman and Co. of course would not enforce their claims against the defendant, even for the plaintiff, their principal. That being so, if it were necessary that Gilman and Co. should in point of form be the actors in calling on the defendants to account, it would only have been necessary that the plaintiff should have taken proceedings for liberty to use Gilman and Co.'s name as against the defendant, a mode and a form which, under the circumstances of the case, I conceive in this Court it was quite unnecessary for him to adopt.

After stating that it was competent for the plaintiff to proceed against the person who had actually, according to his case, got his money in his pocket, the Vice-Chancellor went on to speak as follows upon the question of the custom. The defendant justified his transaction by referring to the alleged custom. Now as regards that alleged custom, I have said already that I think it is not made out, as matter of fact, upon the evidence which has been given viva voce in this case, as well as upon the affidavits. I am now dealing with the custom alleged in the first answer, and I come to the conclusion that such a custom cannot be proved; such a custom must be proved upon the most clear and unquestionable evidence. It is against all the principles of the administration of justice, principles which are founded upon the necessity of rules, such as are enforced in this Court, as between principal and agent, for the purpose of protecting the principal not merely against the actual positive wrong of the agent, but also against those possible wrongs by the agent, which it is so difficult, and almost impossible to ascertain, for it is almost impossible to dive sufficiently into all the motives and knowledge on the part of the agent which it is necessary to consider in considering whether he has acted up to his duty in the discharge of that duty as agent. It appears to me, upon the evidence, the conclusion is the other way. That there was no such custom as that alleged in the first answer, which is the simplest of the two, and as regards the second it is a custom so violent, so incredible, and so unreasonable, that the evidence falls necessarily much further short of establishing that custom than it does of establishing the other. I cannot help thinking, as regards the second alleged custom, that it is one which the Court cannot pay any attention to at all; and, further, as regards the second custom, it is observable, on the evidence, that there are so many things which are necessary to be done, which are inconsistent with it, that it is entirely out of place. I say the statement of the custom and the evidence in relation to it, and the necessity of proving a market price for the article in order to apply it which I consider on the evidence is shown not to exist as regards ships—for that is the conclusion I arrive at—shows it is entirely out of place, and does not arise on the evidence at all. If it did there is not sufficient evidence to bring it within the custom as regards ships, if there was with regard to other things. Now as regards the custom in the first answer. The allegation of it is to be found in the 12th paragraph of the 1st answer. "It is the common practice when ships or other valuable articles of commerce are consigned by merchants residing in England to their foreign agents." Observe this is not confined to any one country. It is:—"To their foreign agents for the purpose of sale for the principal or consignor, to fix a limit or reserved price as the minimum amount for which such ship or other article is to be sold, or as to merchants in Japan, as the minimum at which such may be taken over or taken to and purchased by the merchant." It is, I believe, the fact, that such limit or reserved price is not intended by the principal, or regarded by the agent as relieving the latter from the obligation of disposing of the article consigned to him for sale at the highest price which he can obtain for it, or from the obligation to account for the full proceeds of sale except where he informs the principal or consignor or other, the person with or for whom he is acting, that he takes to it or purchases it at the price named; and now observe, "And such principal or other person agrees thereto, in which case the agent is wholly relieved from any and every such obligation as aforesaid, and has simply to pay or otherwise satisfy the price or sum named like any other purchaser, and deals with and disposes of the ship or other article as he best can and thinks most desirable for himself and his own benefit." At all events, according to that, there should be the assent to the transaction of the principal; "such principal or other person agrees thereto." That is, the principal or the consignor, or other, the person with, or for whom, he is acting shall agree thereto.

Now, that being so, if there was such a custom, it would have been necessary to state that the party communicated with the principal, whomsoever that may mean in this particular case, or to the consignor, or other the person with or for whom he was acting. There must be the assent or the agreement of the principal or other person thereto; but of course such principal or other person agreeing thereto could not agree thereto, without knowing all the circumstances connected with it. That is necessarily involved, and it seems to me that, taking that custom which requires assent on the part of the principal, and considering that to be the case, it is not made out here that the principal or consignor, or other the person with or for whom he is acting, did agree thereto, even if that principal, consignor or other person be taken to be Gilman and Co. as distinguished from the plaintiff; but I should rather be disposed to think that such a custom as that would be construed very strictly, and inasmuch as this taking over could not have been a taking over within that custom, as alleged by Alt and Co. if it had been a taking over by Gilman and Co., the original agents, they must have communicated with their principals, and in like manner there ought to have been a communication and an agreement come to with the principal, that is, the plaintiff, and not merely with the person who was, not in reality, himself acting in the matter of the sale, although he was the person authorised to do so. He put somebody else in the position of agent for sale, instead of himself, he having nothing more to do with the transaction apparently after that, than to receive the money, assuming that the person so substituted, namely, Alt and Co., would do their duty in the matter. However, it is not necessary to determine, as I have said, whether, if there could be such a custom, the agreement of Gilman and Co. would do, because in fact Gilman and Co. did not agree, first for want of knowledge, and next because they took a mistaken view entirely, as it seems to me, even with reference to that custom; because, as I have already said, Leman's view was that what was authorised, and what the defendant was justified in doing, was in making a bargain for himself on credit, because he could not sell for cash, and having done so, he subsequently to that comes to Gilman and Co., or communicate to Gilman and Co., that he took it over at that price. However, as I have said, these considerations are really unimportant. I cannot reconcile that first custom, which requires the consent of the principal, until the other custom, which is alleged in the second answer, which requires no consent at all, and the two conflicting and being inconsistent, go far to show there is no such custom. It is too loose to be considered a custom at all, and in reference to a custom it is not unimportant to consider and bear in mind that for the purpose of establishing a known and recognised custom, contrary to, and at variance with, the general views of equity and right and law as between principal and agent, that to establish such a custom in a place like Japan, the place where the transaction of the sale took place, a country which has only been established in reference to commercial relations with other countries for a very few years antecedent to the time the transaction took place, the evidence must be very clear indeed.

The Vice-Chancellor then, referring to the minor pleas, held that upon the evidence there was no trace of any authority given by the plaintiff to Gilman and Co. that they might take over at the price, and there was no trace of any authority given to them that they might appoint an agent, and authorise that agent to take over at the price. The question was, therefore, had Gilman and Co., without express authority in one or other of those respects, authority to do so, and he should consider if Gilman and Co. could not do it themselves, no more could anyone put into their place for the purpose of a sale, and that it was not competent to them to give to any person who was to act as in their place in respect of the sale, to give to that person any greater latitude or right in reference to selling to himself than they had to sell it to themselves, and therefore, upon that ground, it seemed to him that the case must fail.

He went on to say:—The difficulty in the position of Mr. Alt, the defendant, was this, that for him to discharge a duty in endeavouring to find a purchaser for cash and at the same time to be looking out for a purchaser on his own account, which would give him a profit if he did take over the ship at the price were two such inconsistent things that it is impossible to consider that a purchaser under such circumstances by the second appointed agent or deputy-agent was such a transaction as could stand at all according to the view of this Court.

It seems to me, therefore, according to the plain principles upon which this Court acts, the agent so appointed by Mr. Gilman was an agent who was under the circumstances not selling, be it observed, according to what the defendant says were the instructions of the principal, which, he says, were instructions to sell for cash. but departing from those instructions without express authority from the principal, the plaintiff selling in a different manner because, he says, he could not sell in the way in which he was directed ; and doing that with a view to his own advantage and gain, how can it be that, if a profit results from that transaction, that that person is not to be liable, upon the ordinary principles of equity, in respect of all profit made in the transaction by him as agent ? The agent must be liable to somebody, and Gilmans repudiated it ; surely the original principal must be enabled to enforce payment of that which he says is his own money.

Starting with this, that every agent must account for all profit which he makes out of the transaction, and cannot put it into his own pocket if profit was made, as we know it was in this case by Mr. Alt, he being an agent that must be accounted for, because Gilman and Co. did not release him from that accountability, and, as I hold, they could not release him and never did release him effectually from any such liability. He being accountable for that profit, upon the ordinary principles of equity that accountability is enforcible by the plaintiff, for in some way or another he must be enabled to get that which, according to the rules and principles of this Court belong to him, whether coming direct to him or through Gilman and Co., is a matter to which I need not refer, and that being the principle with regard to accountability, it does not seem to me to be necessary to go with particularity into, whether or not there was a binding agreement to sell the ship to the Prince antecedent to the time of the communication. . . . . I decide the case on general principles which disentitle, as it seems to me, Mr. Alt to assume and take the position of purchaser. That he never disclosed to Gilman and Co. the real transaction between himself and the Prince, or the negotiations between himself and the Prince is plain, because either Mr. Leman or Mr. Lavers wrote to him long after this transaction, and in his letter he asks him if there is any objection to tell him the price he got. It is quite clear that he did not know, and the price was not known until the time when the discovery was obtained in this action.

After stating that the acquiesence of the plaintiff could not be inferred either from his not making the claim sooner on his receiving the money, seeing that he was in necessary ignorance of the true state of the facts, the Vice-Chancellor summed up his decision as follows :—Therefore the result of it all is, that there must be an account directed in point of form. The second is—"That it may be declared that the defendant is personally to account to the plaintiff for all moneys received by or on behalf of the firm of Alt and Company from the purchasers of the steamship Columbine in respect of the sale thereof effected." I think that is right, that he is liable personally to account. Then there must be an account of all moneys which he has received in respect of the sale and an account of all moneys which have been paid by the said firm, to the plaintiff, that is right of course, "in part payment of the purchase moneys received by the same firm or any member thereof in respect of the said sale of the said steamship, and that after allowing to the defendant the proper commission and other usual agents' charges, the defendant may be ordered forthwith to pay over to the plaintiff the balance"—you must ascertain the balance. In taking these accounts all proper allowances must be made to the defendant in respect of any disbursements or expenses properly made or incurred by him in reference to the sale, and although these would be payable without being specifically mentioned he must be entitled to every reasonable and proper disbursement which he has incurred so as to ascertain what is the fair and clear profit to be derived from the transaction.

After some observations from counsel, the Vice-Chancellor said :—Mr. Bristowe pressed me very hard at the conclusion of his very able argument with reference to the importance of this case to Mr. Alt. As a matter of character, quite irrespective of pecuniary considerations, I am bound to say, with reference to that, that I think the course taken, although I have not got Gilman and Co. before me, yet I think it has been a case of mistake on the part of Gilman and Co. as well as on the part of Alt and Co., and that Mr. Alt has been rather led into it, I think by the view which Messrs. Gilman and Co. took of what they could arrange with Mr. De Bussche, and therefore I do not at all desire to say that it should be considered that my judgment in any way reflects upon Mr. Alt, in this transaction in this case at all.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

BENECKE V. WHITTALL AND OTHERS.—JUDGMENT.

This was an appeal from Hong Kong, on a question of alleged fraudulent preference. Messrs. Benecke, Souchay, and Co., bankers and merchants in the City of London, obtained eight deeds from Heard and Co., merchants, Hong Kong, and the Supreme Court held that, as against a trust deed, they were preference, and hence the appeal.

Sir R. Collier gave judgment, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court, and allowed the appeal, with costs.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JUNE 26.

The burial of the late Grand Duke of Hesse Darmstadt took place on the 18th of this month, and as usual on such occasions rather all Courts and Governments of Europe, and especially of the German Empire, have been represented by a member of the reigning family.

In Frankfort-on-the-Main the members of the so-named Industrial Union of Germany have held a meeting to consider the measures necessary for an improvement and development of German industry ; and, as was to be foreseen, the levying of protective customs was declared the sole medium for an increase of the now suffering industry. The assembly resolved to send a circular, containing their wishes, to the Emperor, and among these wishes stands on the first place the re-levying of the iron duties as before January 1 of 1877.

Last week the Government promulgated a decree advertising the subscription of the first Imperial loan to the amount of m. 77,731,321, of which m. 43,000,000 shall at first be subscribed for ; this loan is to bear an interest of 4 per cent.

During the past week Dr. Guido Weiss, editor of the journal Die Waage, has been sentenced by the Berlin Court of Appeal with three months' imprisonment, for offending Emperor William, in an article concerning the triple alliance between Russia, Austria and Germany.

Yesterday a very disturbing telegram came in from Cologne, announcing the Colorado-beetle, notwithstanding the precautions taken by the German Government, still has penetrated into Germany. On a potatoe-field at Muehlheim (on the Rhine) the destructive insect was found in all grades of its existence, and certainly will already have spread out farther. The acre on which it was found belongs to a butcher who imports American pork, and the beetle therefore must have found its way to Germany by this manner. The Government at Berlin at once has been telegraphed to about the case, and it is to be hoped that such measures will be taken as to prevent a further spreading out of the dangerous insect.

The great progresses of the Socialists, which were manifested at the late Parliamentary selections, have led here to a union of all Liberal parties, to agitate against the Socialists. This union, under the name of "Liberator Reichstagswahl Verein" in Hamburg, of late has been constituted, and already has grown up to some 10,000 to 12,000 members. The least contribution of every member is m.1 (1 shilling) per annum, and the money brought together by this manner at the next selections in 1881 will serve as agitation funds.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Tendency on our Produce Markets during the past week has been a flat one, and transactions have only been made for consumption. Money remains abundant and rather below the official rate, which is 3 per cent. to 4 per cent. Coffee remained very firm in spite of the but limited inclination to buy, and the holders were only willing to part with their stock in case of full prices being offered. The import of Coffee during the past week amounted to about 32,000 bags, all of American provenience ; quotations for Java quality, m.1.05 to m.2.50 per lb.

SUGAR.—Transactions of first-hand parcels did not transpire. Quotations per 50 kilo. are : Manila, brown clayed, m.29 to 31 ; do. unclayed, m.24 to 25 ; Mauritius, brown, m.23 to 31 ; do. yellow, m.31½ to 34 ; Batavia, white, m.34½ to 36 ; do. yellow and grey, m.31½ to 34 ; do. brown, m.24½ to 31 ; Siam, Benares and China, white, m.32 to 36 ; Zanzibar, brown and yellow, m.28 to 33 ; China, brown and yellow, m.23 to 33.

RICE.—Of raw quality I have to report the arrival of 8,320 bags per Eveline, from Bassein, which had already changed owners afloat.

TEA quiet, and without transactions of importance.

COTTON was in firm tendency during the first part of the week, but during the latter days it became flat. Some transactions without importance of China, Egypt, &c., are reported.

SPICES.—Nutmegs, prime quality are quoted m.5.60 to 6.20. Mace, prime quality, m.4.70 to 4.90. Ginger unchanged, Bengal m.27½ to 28; Cochin, m.63 to 85. Cloves maintained their value, Zanzibar quality m.136 to 137. Pepper is lower, Singapore quality, m.36¼ to 37 ; Penang m.35 to 35½.

EXCHANGE.—London, three months, m.20.36 to 20.50 per £.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

News of importance from the seat of war has not come to hand during the past week, but a rumour has been afloat according to which Austria intends to mobilise at least a part of her army, and this has been weighing upon quotations, as well as the different loans which are advertised for subscription, viz., the Russian internal loan, the issue of French treasury bonds, or which are said to be intended as an English one. The approaching monthly settlement has been rather the only cause of speculative business.

SHIPPING.

The arrivals and departures at the river during the past week have been very satisfactory, the more so as a good many vessels came from transatlantic ports. Of arrivals from East-India and China we can name the Emmanuel Auger, Chapon, from Sourabaya ; Reichstag, Hoffmann, from Rangoon ; Vanadis, Carlson, from Batavia ; and the Ortava s.s., (belonging to the Flensburge Dampfschiffs-Rhederei), from Rangoon. Of departures the Madagascar s.s., Timm, for China, and Neptune, Kling, for Apoa, are to be registered. At Bremen the Malville, Harlow, has arrived from Rangoon. Regarding the Deutsche Dampfschiffs Rhederei, the Hesperia, s.s., Johannsen. left here yesterday on her appointed day for the usual route, to Penang, Singapore, &c. ; the Galatea, s.s., Boehme, and Bellona, s.s., Ahrens, both of the same company, by telegrams have arrived out in Hong Kong. In vessels on the berth no alteration ; freight low, and rates quite nominal.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, JUNE 27.

We are anxiously waiting for the result of the re-elections, which are pending at Delft and at Almelo. The general opinion is that the Liberals will win the battle by the return of Mr. Schagen van Leeuwen and Mr. Van der Linden. Especially in the first-named district the struggle is a very close one, and all is being done that possibly can be done to oppose the election of Mr. Heringa, who, though himself a Protestant, is the candidate of the Roman Catholics.

We are en pleine vacances as to Parliamentary matters. Much is said in the papers about the duty of the Cabinet Heemskerk to resign, but this is not at all likely to take place, and the battle has still to fought, with what result it is impossible to foretell. Mr. Van Lynden Van Sandenburg, Minister of the Department of Justice, having received the Grand Cross of the Netherlands Lion, has left here for Marienbad, in order to restore his health, whilst Mr. Van der Heim will stay, for the same purpose, some weeks in Carlsbad. The bathing-season has been opened at Scheveningen, which beautiful watering-place is already crowded. Of course a certain dulness prevails there, owing to the mourning for the death of our Queen. The King intends to reside for some time abroad, and at this moment he is in Paris, from whence in a few days he will start for Zurich. The Prince of Orange and Prince Alexander remain in the Hague.

The shareholders of the Netherlands-India Railway Company met yesterday, in order to receive the annual report and balance-sheet, which gives the following figures:—The total length of the lines of the company is 58 kilometers, representing a value of f.3,370,026. The receipts have amounted to f.550,515, from which must be deducted f.231,139, leaving a net profit of f.264,325,125, out of which a dividend of f.5.25 per cent. is declared. The state of the company is most prosperous. The report was adopted, and Mr. A. W. van Eghen was re-elected commissary.

Two prosecutions, viz., that of Mr. J. de Decker Gzn, one of our largest shipowners, who endeavoured to defraud some insurance companies by insuring a vessel which had previously been wrecked, and that against Mr. Bruyn, who defrauded the Amsterdam Canal Company of an amount of f.276,400, have caused much sensation. The sentences have not yet been pronounced.

The Emperor of Brazil will arrive here on the 15th prox., and will stay some days in our country.

A translation into the Japanese language of a "Manual for Military Hospital Practice," of which Drs. Van Duyl and Van Weezel are the authors, is in circulation.

The endeavours which are being made to erect a statue to the memory of the late Mr. Motley seem to be crowned with success. The plan meets with general approval.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

The transactions on our market for Colonial Produces have continued very quiet, and the business done has been of little interest. Prices, however, have remained very firm, as holders seem disinclined to operate.

COFFEE.—The trade is at a stand still in waiting for the Trading Company's sale, which will be held to day, and at which 108,500 bs. will be brought under the hammer. The valuation is fixed at c.52½ to 53. No private lots have changed hands, except 1,050 bs. Macassar ex Gedeh.

TEA.—Since my last report the lot Sœpang Pecco Bolang, bought in at the sale of March the 14th was sold at prices that did not transpire, also 245/12 chests China Congou, mark T.

TOBACCO.—The imports have been small, and the only lots changing hands have been 407 bs. Java, headmark T.B. Lor, ex Celebes and Drenthe. The stock includes 21,516 bs. Java, 7,525 bs. Sumatra, 3,400 bs. Manila, and 3,000 bs. East Indian.

SUGAR.—Holders decline to operate at lower prices, and this checks business. The only lots that have changed hands were 348 kr. Java, No. 18¼ at f.41; 623 kr. No. 15, at f.40; 1,174 kr. No. 13§ at f.38½. Refined is very quiet.

COTTON has enjoyed some demand for export, and prices went up in consequence. The market closed, however, much duller.

SPICES.—Nutmegs have met with a good demand for fine qualities. Prices are very firm. Mace is very quiet, and without transactions. Pepper: Some lots have changed hands, in consequence of the lower prices current.

RICE.—Uncleaned is rather dull, and no transactions have taken place. The imports have been considerable. Cleaned Java has met with a good demand. Japan is rather dull, and lower prices are current.

HIDES.—The lots offered by public tender were sold at high prices. No particulars have, however, transpired.

JAVA INDIGO is very quiet. About 40 chests have changed hands; 350 chests were imported per Prins Hendrik.

TIN.—Without transactions in first hands. Small quantities Banca have been sold at f.41¾, and Billiton is quoted f.41½.

Monetary and Commercial.

Telegraphic advices report that the Silk market in Shanghai has opened on the basis of Tls. 415 for second chop beautiful woman, which is equal to a cost of about 19s. laid down. The corresponding silks were sold at the public sales last week at 17s. 6d., or, taking into account the premium which is generally obtainable for the first arrivals of the new silk, the prices may be considered about the equivalent of those nominally ruling here. As to the actual state of the market it is exceedingly difficult to obtain satisfactory information, as there probably never was a time when those interested in the trade were so much influenced in their opinions by their heavy stake in the article. So far as can be ascertained, there is no improvement in the manufacturing prospects, and all that can be said is that the "short time" in the mills both here and on the Continent must tend to the reduction of the stock of piece goods, so that it would seem probable that the time is not far distant when the manufacturers will be forced to resume purchases of the raw material. The advices from Italy concerning the Italian crop are still conflicting. It is variously estimated at two-thirds and one-half of an average, but all such estimates are necessarily vague. In fact, it is more difficult to get at the true state of affairs as to the European production than as to that of China. The best indication, however, with regard to the supply is perhaps the actual state of the market in Italy, which is extremely depressed. As respects the Japan crop, the reports are very varied. But little business has been done in Japan, but small purchases are advised at 18s. 9d. for the best of the new arrivals. On this side there has been but little demand; but some trifling sales of good medium Hanks at 17s. have been made.

The Tea market continues extremely flat, and the trade generally are awaiting the arrival of the Loudon Castle and the Gleneagle with the new teas, which are expected on Tuesday and Wednesday next respectively.

During the week ended the 23rd ult. the total quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London was 3,157,748 lb., or a reduction of 2½ per cent. as compared with the previous week. The following were the quantities of the other principal dutiable articles withdrawn from the London bonded warehouses for home consumption during the week:—Coffee, 483,181 lbs.; cocoa, 207,921 lbs.; tobacco, 317,317 lbs.; cigars, 13,461 lbs.; wine, 149,590 gallons; brandy, 29,832 gallons; and rum, 20,995 gallons.

In the Produce Markets the absence of speculation continues, and business generally during the past week has been quiet, without change in value. Coffee has been firm and active until near the close, when a relapse has occurred. Sugar has been extremely quiet, and there has been an absence of offers of East India descriptions. The market for Pepper, Rice, and Tin shows an improvement. The value of Manila Hemp continues to decline.

The report of the Jorehaut Tea Company for the season 1876 shows that, inclusive of £620 brought forward from the previous year, the available balance is £18,129. From this an interim dividend of 10 per cent. was paid in January, and it is now proposed to make a further distribution at the same rate, or in all 20 per cent. for the year, leaving £168 to be carried forward. It is stated that the prospects of the current season are favourable, and it is expected that the outturn will be in excess of last year.

The directors of the Colonial Bank have resolved to recommend at the general meeting a dividend of 7 per cent. for the six months ended 31st December last. This compares with a distribution of 7½ per cent. for the corresponding period in the previous year.

The directors of the Union Marine Insurance Company have declared an interim dividend of 5s. per share, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, and payable on the 9th proximo. The dividend is the same as at the corresponding date last year.

The Marine Insurance Company has declared a dividend of £2 10s. per share on the under-writing account of 1874, which was a bad year. The years 1875 and 1876 show, it is stated, better results.

A dividend at the rate of 4s. per share for the half-year has been declared on the Preference Shares of the National Steamship Company.

A correspondent writes to The Times to call attention to the great delay which takes place in the liquidation of insolvent estates. He says that on the 25th of June, 1875, the well-known firm of Messrs. Robert Benson and Co., of 10, King's Arms-yard, London, failed, and their liabilities were sworn at £700,000. Expectations were at first held out of a good dividend, and the concern passed into the hands of liquidators; but from that day to the present time not a farthing has been paid, nor is there even any talk of some day paying a dividend.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Telegrams from Hankow via Shanghai report the second crop short and inferior, Teamen losing heavily on common Teas, it is evident that the unprecedented low prices that have ruled here for many months for good to medium Congou, is having its due effect, and will doubtless retard the manufacture of common Tea, and check the shipments later on, and it is to be hoped lead to the re-adjustment of the scale of value for tea on this market, so long in a state of chaos. The position in China materially strengthens the prospects for first imports of the new country Congous, and well-bought Teas of fine and finest quality promise more favourably than for some seasons past, the home trade being quite bare of stocks of those grades Larger supplies than usual will be required for the great annual fair held at Nichni Novgorod at the end of July, no shipments having been made direct to Russia this (1877-78) season. A few new Scented Capers ex Ulysses have sold from 11½d. to 1s. 2d. for good common to fair, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 8d. for good to fine ; quality as usual of early imports is not up to standard, the teas being wanting in scenting properties. The prices for Tayshian Congous rule at 10d. to 1s. 2d. for fair to medium, 1s. 3d. to 1s. 7d. for fine and finest, the latter grades offering excellent value.
